The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

AN UNDESIRED VISIT

CHAPTER XCVIII.

George was really quite ill for days. I had to change my mind about some things, during that time. In one thing, George had surprised me; he was very patient, very gentle with me, and not at all hard to wait upon. At home, when either father or the boys were sick, they were terribly unreasonable. I told George so, and he replied:

"I am glad I have them beaten in one thing; they are ahead of me in so many,"— which showed that he realized that I had compared him to them to his disadvantage.

Julia Collins called up several times, during the week George was in bed. She always offered to come over and sit with him. I, as regularly denied her the privilege. I was sure she had written him. Two or three letters postmarked "Narragansett" had come with the other mail, but even in his softened mood I dared not question him about his private affairs.

Then one day, she called. I was sitting with George. He was up for the first time. Celeste announced her.

"Tell her Mr. Howard is not yet receiving visitors," I said with all the dignity I could manage, determined that she should not see him if I could prevent.

"No, let her come up! She is always full of lively chatter; it will cheer us up."

"Very well Monsieur!" Celeste replied, glancing at me in a commiserating way which I at once resented.

A Gushing Entrance.

"Oh, you poor, dear boy!" Mrs. Collins exclaimed, absolutely ignoring me until she had rushed to George, shaken hands, and inquired solicitously how he was. Then she turned to me, shaking her ringed finger at me: "You were a bad girl to try to show what a good swimmer you were! You should choose a time, to do those things, when some one beside George is around to risk his life trying to save you."

"I told you over the telephone, Mrs. Collins, that I was taken with cramps—something that is liable to happen to anyone," I returned very coldly.

"Helen is a perfect fish in the water," George broke in. "She has gone out much further, often. She never had any trouble before."

"There's always the first time, you know," our visitor responded. "And it is always at such times that we put the lives of some one who cannot be spared, in danger."

She was, as usual, trying to anger me — to make me lose what little poise and dignity I possessed. "She shall not succeed!" I thought, as I rang for a cooling drink and some cakes.

"It is quite a trip for you to take in the heat," I said, as I proffered the refreshment. "We are flattered that you should take it. We know your popularity, and that you have your time all filled."

Her eyes snapped. George smiled. Not a real smile, with his lips, but his eyes laughed, and his mouth twitched. I knew I had scored.

"My time is never so filled that I should not take part of it from someone else to see George!"

A Sparring Match.

From that time on, during her entire visit—which lasted for over an hour,—we kept up a sort of sparring match. I knew George was amused, and so long as I kept within the bounds set by my being her hostess, I was sure he would not be displeased.

When she rose to go, she said:

"I am coming over every day now, until you can come and see me. You won't be going to the Harbour for some time, will you?"

"Yes, indeed!" I returned, not giving George a chance to reply. "Our plans are all made; we shall go as soon as Mr. Howard is able to travel. The doctor told me this morning we could go in two or three days, at the most." I always took particular pains to speak of George as "Mr. Howard" when the women he had known before we were married, addressed him as "George."

"I see that I shall have to make my visits to you at Bar Harbour, then," she returned, undismayed. "I shall be there, now, almost as soon as you are. Your accident has made our plans similar."

Were we never to be rid of her? I started to say something, bit my lip, and let George answer:

"That will be delightful! We are not apt to be as popular there as we have been here, so I shall have more time to devote to my friends. The yachting, here, has taken a great deal of my time. You will have to help me introduce Helen to Bar Harbour. It is an old stamping ground of Julia's," he said, turning to me.

"It is nice to be so familiar with all the resorts," I said, inwardly boiling. "Perhaps when I reach your age, I shall know as much. In the meantime, it is delightful to have everything—so new and so entertaining, I cannot become bored, as do you older people."

"We're Methuselah's, according to your wife, George!" she laughed maliciously; "I am as much as seven years older than she."

To-morrow— It's Experience That Counts.

Brilliant Venus.

When she is at her brightest Venus is so bright that if you knew where in the sky to look for her you could easily see her in the daytime and at night she sheds so much light that where other lighting is excluded she will cast a plain shadow. She is about five times as bright as Jupiter ever gets, ten times as bright as Sirius, the largest of the fixed stars, and a hundred times as bright as the ordinary first magnitude stars. Her reign is, however, short; for as she makes three revolutions to the earth's two, she rapidly passes us and begins to fade away.

Careless Shampooing Spoils The Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries nicely and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy. It's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

A Disappointed Pensioner.

Mrs. Higginson's letters to her husband's family in Brattleboro, says Mary Thacher Higginson in her biography of Thomas Wentworth Higginson, always contained characteristic comments on her husband's doings.

"Wentworth has been away two days this week," she wrote, "and is going to Washington tonight to fight for women. I wish they had been fixed before we were born. * * * Lately he has been trying to find a father and grandfather for some stray girl—I don't know who. He hasn't found them yet, but I suppose he will sometime. I should think that one would be enough but he is naturally thorough, you know."

The colonel explained in a postscript: "The case of this girl is that she wants a pension because her father was a soldier and died in a military prison. I have come upon only two obstacles to her wish:

"First, that she be not the man's daughter.

"Second, that he is still alive."

THE GULF STREAM

It Is the Grandest of All Terrestrial Phenomena.

A MIGHTY RIVER IN THE SEA.

Ninety billion tons of water are carried hourly through the strait of Florida by the gulf stream, according to Rear Admiral John E. Pillsbury U. S. N., in a communication to the National Geographic society at Washington. This stream, he says, is probably the grandest and most mighty of any terrestrial phenomenon.

"If this one single hour's flow of water could be evaporated the remaining salts would require many times more than all the ships in the world to carry it," says Admiral Pillsbury.

"It is difficult for the mind to grasp the immensity of the great ocean river. When one is on board a vessel floating upon its waters one is not as much impressed at the power and grandeur of this wonder of nature as he is when he stands before a towering mountain, an immense iceberg or a fall of water such as Niagara.

"But when one remembers that the mighty torrent, speeding on hour by hour and day by day in a volume equal to all the largest rivers of the world combined, carrying its heated heat to temper the climate of continents, one begins to realize that of all the forces of the physical world none can equal this one river of the ocean.

"It is interesting to note in the history of the gulf stream how great its influence has been on the fortunes of the new world.

"Before the discovery of America strange woods and fruits were frequently found on the shores of Europe. Some of these were seen by Columbus and to him were convincing evidence that strange lands were to the westward. These woods were carried by the gulf stream and by the prevailing winds from America, so that in part the stream is responsible for the discovery of the new world.

"Ponce de Leon, while searching for the fountain of youth, discovered this stream. He sailed southward along the coast of Florida, thus stemming the current. He says they found a current that, though the wind was good, they could not stem. It seemed that their vessels were going fast through the water, but they were being driven back in spite of the strong and favorable wind. One ship was soon carried away by the current and lost from sight, although it was a clear sky.

"The theories as to the cause of ocean currents have been many. In recent times the course of currents has been laid to rivers and the gulf stream chiefly to the Mississippi. In actual fact about 2,000 such rivers would be required.

"In the tropical regions there is a steady movement of the air from east to west, known as the trade winds. Winds blowing over the surface of the water induct a current in the latter due to friction. At first it is only the merest skin that moves, but gradually the motion is communicated from layer to layer until at last, if the wind is long continued as in the trade wind region, the movement extends to lower depths, 300 or 400 feet or perhaps more.

"These trade wind currents continue across the Caribbean until they reach the obstruction of the Honduras and Yucatan coasts, from which they escape into the gulf of Mexico.

"Another source of the gulf stream is the wave caused by the wind. Every ripple carries a certain amount of water in the direction toward which it is flowing, irrespective of the current caused by its friction, and when the waves become large tons of water are hurled from the crest into the trough every time the wave breaks.

"In a large area like the Caribbean having a comparatively constant wind blowing over its whole surface, this action is practically a simultaneous movement of the surface waters to the westward.

"There is every evidence that the gulf stream is governed absolutely by law in all its variations. Its course through the ocean is without doubt fixed. Its fluctuations are by days, months, seasons or by years, but they do not vary materially one year from the other. So we may conclude that of all the physical forces on this earth that are subject to any variations at all the great ocean currents are most immutable."

Clearing For Action.

When a warship is cleared for action not only is everything movable on the decks removed or made secure, but every article made of wood is, as far as practicable, thrown overboard. Sofas, tables, chairs, pianos, all the furnishings of officers' quarters, in fact, are hurriedly put over the side by the bluejackets, and in a few minutes as much as £1,000 worth of stuff is floating round the Dreadnought. At the moment that a warship is preparing to fire not a single soul is to be seen on the decks. All the sailors are below working the guns and getting the ammunition ready.—London Answers.

A Declining Art.

Ireland Called Many Names.

In the time of Ptolemy Ireland was known as Scotia. Diodorus Siculus calls the island Irs or Irisi; in the "De Mundo," credited by some scholars to Aristotle, it is called Ireane; in the "Argonautica of Orpheus" it appears as Irinus; Strabo calls it Irene; Caesar, Tacitus and Pliny mention it as Hibernia; Mela called it Juverna. The native names in Celtic are Ir, Eri and Erin. Plutarch mentions it under the name of Ogygia. The name Ireland is no doubt derived from the native of Ir or Eri, but when it came into general use is a question concerning which scholars are much at variance.

ARTILLERY GUNS.

To the average man such phrases as "three pounders" and "six inch" guns are familiar, but he rarely always reads them without fully understanding their meanings.

A pound gun is a cannon which receives its name from the weight of the shell it fires. Thus a gun known as a "three pounder" is so called because it fires a shell which weighs three pounds, and a gun firing a five pound shell would be called a "five pounder." The size of most small guns is still described by the "pound," but the majority of large guns made today are "inch" weapons. In this case the size of the gun is obtained from the size of its bore, a ten inch gun having a bore of ten inches in diameter and a twelve inch weapon a twelve inch bore.

The largest British naval guns in use at present are the fifteen inch weapons. They fire a projectile weighing almost a ton. Next to these comes the 13.5 gun and then the most popular weapon of all—the twelve inch, which fires an 850 pound shell.

There are several smaller kinds of guns now in use—mostly of the quick firing type. These weapons are "inch" guns. The six inch, the 4.7 inch and the four inch are all quick firers and throw shells weighing 100 pounds, forty-five pounds and thirty-one pounds respectively.

Quite a lot of people misunderstand the term "quick firer." They imagine a quick firing gun to be a weapon which pours out a stream of shot with enormous speed after the style of a Maxim. Instead, however, it is just an ordinary breechloading gun, which is fitted with such vastly improved methods of loading and aiming that it can be fired far more rapidly than a weapon without those fittings. A gun that fires a number of shots automatically in rapid succession, as the Maxim, is not called a quick firer. The name given to it is "machine gun." There are a large range of these weapons of all sizes and firing from 1,200 right down to forty rounds of ammunition a minute.

The gun which generally accompanies a column into the field on active service fires a shell of sixty pounds and is known as the "five inch," or, to use the old term, a "sixty pounder."—Pearson's Weekly.

Papal Sermons Rare.

Strange are the restrictions which bedge about a pope, and one of the strangest is that he should not be allowed to preach. Only once in 300 years has a pope delivered a sermon, and that was under exceptional circumstances in 1846. On the Octave of the Epiphany a celebrated preacher, Padre Ventura, was to have occupied the pulpit in St. Peter's, but was suddenly taken ill. To prevent disappointment to the vast crowd which had assembled Pius IX. broke through the custom of ages and, ascending the pulpit, delivered a simple, homely sermon that perhaps impressed its hearers more than the finest eloquence might have done, because of its uniqueness.—London Chronicle.

Woolwich Arsenal.

Woolwich arsenal owed its establishment to an explosion which took place at a foundry in Moorfields. Until 1716 the government obtained its ordnance from private manufacturers, but in that year the explosion decided it to build a foundry of its own, and Woolwich, already famous as a naval station, was chosen as the site. Woolwich was only a small fishing village until the sixteenth century, when Henry VIII. laid the foundations of its prosperity by making it the royal dockyard. —London Chronicle.

Bows In Warfare.

The bow is first seen depicted on Egyptian monuments about 2000 B. C. Its form then did not differ greatly from that in use among boys at the present day. It was used in European warfare as late as 1640 and was deemed quite as effective as the arquebus then employed.

Kid Gloves.

The majority of the fine kid gloves used in this country are imported from France. The superiority of French kid gloves over all others, according to an importer, is due above all to the perfection of the skins, the kids being reared in villages by poor peasants who own only a few goats and therefore take great care of them.

Another reason is that in France one workman takes the prepared skin and manipulates it himself right up to the finished glove. In Germany, on the contrary, division of labor is extensive and great factories turn out in two or three hours what requires two days' labor on the part of the French workman.

The best kid gloves still come from France, but the factories of Stuttgart are a formidable rival.—New York World.

Building-up for the Spring Attack at the Front is a good deal like putting the body in condition for an invasion of the germs of grip, pneumonia or "Spring fever" here at home.

At this time of the year most people suffer from a condition often called Spring Fever. They feel tired, worn out, before the day is half thru. They may have frequent headaches and sometimes "pimply" or pale skin and white lips. The reason for this is that during the wintertime, shut up within doors, eating too much meat and too little green vegetables, one heaps fuel into the system which is not burned up and the clinkers remain to poison the system—a clogging up of the circulation—with inactive liver and kidneys. Time to put your house in order.

For an invigorating tonic which will clarify the blood, put new life in the body, sparkle to the eyes, and a wholesome skin, nothing does so well as a glyceric herb extract made from Golden Seal root, Blood and Stone root, Oregon grape root and Wild Cherry bark. This can be had in convenient, ready-to-use tablet form at all drug stores, fifty cents, and has been sold for the past fifty years as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. By reason of the nerves feeding on the blood, when the blood is pure the nerves feel the effect, and neuralgia or other nerve pains disappear because such pain is the cry of the starved nerves for food. When suffering from backache, frequent or scanty urine, rheumatic pains here or there, or that constant tired feeling, the simple way to overcome these disorders is merely to obtain Dr. Pierce's Anuric from your druggist. In tablets, fifty cents.

To Bore Iron.

The following method is said to be effective when one has not the proper tools for making a hole in an iron plate:

Shape a stick of sulphur to the required dimensions of the hole, then heat the iron white hot at the place where it is to be bored and press the sulphur against it. Sulphuret of iron is formed, and the stick passes through the metal.—Exchange.

Wasted Energy.

"That's what I call wasted energy," said Billson.

"What is it?" asked Jillson.

"Two girls kissing each other."—Livingston Lance.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Colour, Gloss and Attractiveness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Suphur Compound no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

SCARED BY A FISH

Or Maybe It Was a New Species of Inland Sea Monster.

A VISION IN RED EAGLE LAKE.

It Couldn't Have Been a Dream, the Angler Admits That, Nor a Bear, Nor a Shark, Though It Did Look Like a Dog, but Anyhow and Luckily It Got Away.

In camp on Red Eagle lake in the Glacier National park, devoured by mosquitoes as big as cultures, as fierce as tigers and as numerous as drops of water in the Pacific ocean!

This is a bad beginning for a fish story. The language seems to suggest that the narrator has already become unreliable. As a matter of fact, phrases which are strictly accurate may be palpably misleading.

The language of hyperbole is needed to present an adequate picture. Perhaps the mosquitoes are not quite so big or fierce or numerous as stated, but they seem to be.

But to the fish story. And the language of vivid metaphor shall be laid aside. What follows is fact—unadorned, unexaggerated fact. I could not have dreamed it. I cannot even now that I have begun to put pen to paper hope to tell it in such a way as to bring the scene with realizing earnestness before the eye of my brother anglers.

It was evening. I was on the lake alone in my little canvas boat. The fishing had been good. I was returning to camp satisfied. The sack of fish, my fishing kit, discarded tackle, the net, etc., lying at the bottom of the boat, it seemed safer to leave the rod to poke out over the stern, the flies trailing the water—out of mischief, as I thought, where they could not get tangled with any of the truck.

So I rowed along gently, happy in the slaughter I had accomplished and wishing my friends had been with me to do their share. And the rod shot over the stern of the boat before my very eyes!

I had the presence of mind not to make a forward dart and grab for it as it disappeared. Such a violent movement would undoubtedly have collapsed my collapsible boat. I sat in speechless amazement, too startled for thought.

And then close by a mighty splashing and plunging. I turned and saw on the top of the water something swimming, a red brown head and shoulders. I was frightened. It was so huge.

I thought of a bear, of a shark, and stories of sea monsters flashed through my mind. The thing was swimming slowly. What I could see of it looked for all the world like the head of a magnificent St. Bernard dog I used to own.

Then I came to myself. I realized that this was a fish of a species not known to me and of an incredible, unheard of size. He had taken my fly, had hooked himself on to the rod which he had dragged overboard and was swimming slowly because he was drawing it along the bottom of the lake.

I chased him. He dived, came up again with a splashing like that of an elephant in a pond and smashed down again. Almost I could keep up with him, so slowly did he swim and so much time did he waste in his frantic efforts to get free.

If I had been able to row properly, facing in a direction opposite to the one in which I was moving, I believe I could have overtaken him. But I needed to keep my eye on him, and so had to backwater with the oars, losing power at every stroke. I was thinking slowly. I was still too stunned to think normally. I was puzzled by the fact that such a monster did not break my frail tackle in a moment. There was no resistance so long as the forty yards of line continued to unwind or the rod to move easily through the water.

As often as he swung over and dropped down on the six foot leader it simply yielded beneath him. Five times he rose, and the fifth time I was quite near him. He seemed to be anything from four feet to six feet long. I have at home a muskellunge which I caught five years ago in the St. Lawrence river. He weighed thirty-two pounds and measures forty-seven inches. This fellow was much bigger and more terrifying. And I have no other means of guessing at his size and weight.

Then with the sixth leap and dive something gave, and the monster was seen no more. I rowed slowly back to camp actually unnerved by the adventure. Literally—and he who will may laugh at me—I felt afraid to be alone in the failing evening light, alone on a piece of water inhabited by such creatures as the one who had pursued me and whom I had pursued.

I was glad to hear the friendly hail of my guide from the landing place of logs which we had constructed, to see the glare of the campfire and to sniff the smell of supper. Then I reckoned up my loss—a rod, $35; a reel, $17.50, and a four dollar line—nearly $60 worth of property at the bottom of Red Eagle lake!—Rev. C. F. Aked, D. D., LL. D., in New York American.

WIT IN HISTORY.

A Brief Address and a Pithy Reply That Won With Royalty.

Frederick the Great once granted a hearing to a subject on condition that he should cut his remarks very short.

"Let him say but two words," said the monarch.

"Very well," agreed the subject, and on entering the presence of Frederick he held out a petition and uttered, but the two words:

"Sire, sign."

The subject won his request.

It was at a moment when international relations were extremely shaky, and the courtier showed no particular desire to absent himself from his home and country on so dangerous a mission.

"Do not be afraid," said King Henry. "If you lose your life in my service I will avenge you a hundredfold. I will take off the heads of all the Frenchmen in my power."

"Thank your majesty; your majesty is most gracious," said the courtier, "but of all those heads which you take off there may not be one which will fit on my shoulders."

The Careful Wife.

"Wife, I wish you'd buy me a couple of five cent collar buttons. I need 'em badly."

"All right; just as soon as somebody has a sale."—Kansas City Journal.

SUFFERED TERRIBLY WITH HER HEART

Would Wake Up Smothering

The terrible smothering and choking up sensations and sinking spells, the feelings of dizziness and faintness that come over those whose heart and nerves are deranged causes the greatest distress of both mind and body.

Mrs. A. M. Powell, Norval Station, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered five years with my heart and nerves, but the last two years I have suffered terribly. If I went to bed I would wake up as if I were smothering. I did not get one night's sleep out of seven. I got so very weak that the doctor was called in, and he said it was my heart, and that I must take great care of myself. I saw your advertiesement in your almanac for Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and said I would try them. I have only taken two boxes of them and I feel a new woman. I will recommend them to anyone afflicted with heart trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Rank in the Cabinet.

"Do some members of the cabinet occupy a higher position or receive a higher salary than others? If not, why do the secretary of state and secretary of the treasury always head the list?" asks a reader of the Indianapolis News, which replies: "They all receive the same salary, but they are usually named in the order that the positions were created—the secretary of state, 1789; war 1789; treasury, 1789; postoffice, 1794; navy, 1798; interior, 1849; justice, 1870; agriculture, 1889; commerce and labor, 1903; department of labor separated in 1913. Latterly they are sometimes named in the order of their succession to the presidency as fixed by what is called the succession law, which differs some what from the foregoing."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

"Push" and "Pull"

By GUINEVERE GORDON

"That word exactly expresses my sentiments," observed Wallace Morse in his usual vaunting, bombastic way.

He and Bryce Allson stood in the office of the Aetna Machine works where both were employed, and Morse had pointed to a swinging door bearing the word, "Pull."

"You that one—s to apply fully in your case," replied Allson, with a quiet smile, "but I am not so fortunate. Having to rely solely upon my own merits and exertions, the word on that other door about fits my case," and the speaker indicated a second door, bearing the sole legend, "Push."

"I have always worked on the 'pull' theory," proceeded Morse boastingly. "My father had a pull with the president of the company here, and I worked the oracle to the queen's taste. I'm in the swim right, and have got my eye on the secretaryship of the company. How is that?"

"Famous! if you can reach it."

The sentiments of the two young men clearly stated the situation. It followed that Morse was only tolerated by the real executive officers of the corporation, who saw through his flimsy pretentions of value and importance.

Allson went his way unpretentiously. He was greatly pleased when he was made head of a department.

"It was offered me," declared Morse on the occasion.

"It was advancement, why didn't you take it?" asked Allson, but Morse showed lofty disdain.

"Not with the secretaryship in sight," he retorted. "I make big jumps or none; see? My pull will carry me through in another direction in which I am considerably interested—Viola Dale."

Allson gave a start of disquietude. He and Morse had been for some time regular weekly visitors at the Dale home. Allson, however, never dreamed that Morse had any particular interest in the young lady in question. Likewise Morse did not suspect that he had a rival.

"Pull, again, old fellow!" he laughed jubilantly. "You see, my sister Nell is a close friend of Viola. A strong influence in my favor, eh? By the way, I suppose you are going to Viola's birthday party?"

"I feel honored that Miss Dale has invited me, yes," replied Allson.

"We'll have the day off," rattled on Morse. "Conservation—fuelless day. Going to shut down. Say, that's your department—operating supplies. Is it really true that we are going to have a coal famine?"

"It is here already," declared Allson, "and this snow blockade has made it worse than ever."

It was the morning of Viola's birthday, and "fuelless day." Allson went down to the closed plant and spent an hour at the telephone trying to figure out the prospects of fuel, for the engineer had told him that the coal bins were nearly empty, and he would be unable to keep up steam enough to prevent the water pipes from freezing and no chance of starting up the next day, unless supplies came in by noon.

"It will be a shut-down, I fear," Allson advised him. "We have ten cars of coal somewhere on the tracks between here and the mines, but practically all of them are blocked. There's one car sidetracked two miles up the road, but no locomotive available to move it. I've just got an idea, though, and perhaps I can get it here within the next two hours."

Allson went to the home of the principal owner of the plant and reported the situation, which caused the functionary considerable uneasiness.

"I think I can get one car through extraordinary exertion," Allson said, and departed to carry out a project he had in mind. On his way he met Viola Dale.

"Oh, Mr. Allson," said Viola, "I am in a bad predicament. I am afraid I will have to see all the invited guests for tonight and postpone the party. We, like everybody else, have run out of furnace coal, and the dealer who promised to provide for us says he hasn't a pound in sight. We are managing to keep warm in two rooms with the help of a gas stove and a grate wood fire, but we can't let our guests freeze in the other rooms.

"Will you wait until noon before canceling the party?" inquired Allson, thinking quickly. "I have an idea that I can arrange for some coal by that time."

"Oh, if you only could!" cried Viola, clasping her hands in hopeful delight, and her eyes sparkled so, and she seemed so friendly and grateful, that he could have kissed her, had he dared.

What happened was that at eleven o'clock that morning a wagon upset at the Dale home, and deposited in its cellar sufficient of the precious coal to last for a week. Furthermore, the anxiety of the engineer at the plant was relieved, and all danger of a shut-down past.

"How did you do it?" asked Morse, in a disgruntled way, the next day, for Viola had devoted all her attention to Allson at the party, and it was hinted that the well-matched couple were engaged.

"'Push,'" replied Allson incidentally. "I located the coal car, hired a dozen husky fellows to help me push it down to the plant, and the president of the company most generously allowed me to provide for the needs of the Dale family."

Proof that Some Women do Avoid Operations

Mrs. Etta Dorion, of Ogdensburg, Wis., says:

"I suffered from female troubles which caused piercing pains like a knife through my back and side. I finally lost all my strength so I had to go to bed. The doctor advised an operation but I would not listen to it. I thought of what I had read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and tried it. The first bottle brought great relief and six bottles have entirely cured me. All women who have female trouble of any kind should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

How Mrs. Boyd Avoided an Operation.

Canton, Ohio.—"I suffered from a female trouble which caused me much suffering, and two doctors decided that I would have to go through an operation before I could get well.

"My mother, who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, advised me to try it before submitting to an operation. It relieved me from my troubles so I can do my house work without any difficulty. I advise any woman who is afflicted with female troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and it will do as much for them."—Mrs. MARIE BOYD, 1421 5th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio.

The middle section of the Panama canal, thirty-four miles long, has a water level of eighty-five feet higher than the two end sections, which are sea levels. Vessels entering the canal from the ocean on either side are lifted to the middle section, a height of eighty-five feet, by three sets of locks, each of which raises the vessel a fraction over twenty-eight feet, making a total of eighty-five feet. These locks are constructed side by side like a double track railway, so that one ship may be going up while the other is going down. Only one ship can be in a lock at the same time, but as the locks are constructed in pairs, side by side, two ships going in opposite directions, one going up the incline and the other going down, may pass each other within hailing distance. Vessels are towed through the locks by electric machinery.—Philadelphia Press.

A Domestic Disturbance.

The trouble began with a tea fight. The milk was sour, the cake cut up, and the sugar fell out with the tongs. The spoons clashed, and the table groaned. The fringes on the doilies snarled, and the crackers snapped. The easy chairs were soon up in arms, and even the clocks did not agree. Things were no better in the kitchen. The pitchers were all set by the ears and stuck out their lips, while the teapot and kettle poked their noses into everything. The range was redhot, which made the saucepan look black and finally boil over. The bells started jangling, all the pickles and preserves in the cupboard were jarred, and there were any number of scrans in the refrigerator and meat safe. Naturally when the mistress of the house reached the scene of disorder the cook was put out.—Judge.

Killing Cooking Odors.

No odor of cooking should greet the guest in a private house or even an apartment which claims to be of the exclusive class. A simple and agreeable deodorizer may be made of a handful of cloves, allowed to scorch with bits of orange peel on a tin plate in the oven, says the Kansas City Star. This mixture imparts a fragrance not unlike that of carnations, and, scattered about the rooms, it will completely destroy the odor of cooking vegetables or roasting meats. In the country the wise housewife may gather sweet clover, and the sprigs, dried out, will impart a fresh and delicious fragrance to the house linens all next winter. Lavender, that standby of oldtime housekeepers, may be purchased in little bags at trifling cost and makes a delightful fragrance for the linen closet.—Exchange.

FACE NOTHING BUT RUNNING SORES FROM ECZEMA

No rest day or night for those afflicted with that terrible skin disease, eczema, or, as it is often called, salt rheum.

With its unbearable burning, itching, torturing day and night, relief is gladly welcomed.

There is no remedy like Burdock Blood Bitters for giving relief to such sufferers; no other remedy has done, or can do so much for those who are almost driven to distraction with the terrible torture. Apply it externally and it takes out the stinging, itching and burning, and promotes a healthy healing.

Take it internally and it gets at the source of the disease in the blood, and completely and permanently drives it out of the system.

Miss Mary V. Chambers, Anagance Ridge, N.B., writes: "I used Burdock Blood Bitters for eczema. I had it when an infant, but it left me. Two years ago it came back. I used doctors' medicine, but it did good only while I used it. At last my face was nothing but a running sore. I saw in the paper what B.B.B. did for people. I took it, and to-day I am free from that terrible disease."

Sunday School Lesson Questions

Jesus Triumphant over Death. — Mark 16:1-20.

1. Verse 1-3. On what hour of the day was Christ crucified, and at what hour did he give up his spirit?

2. Who was Mary Magdalene and Mary the mother of James and Salome?

3. On what day and hour did these women come to Christ's sepulchre, and for what purpose?

4. Verse 4. In undertaking a mission of love, why is it necessary or not to see that all difficulties in the way of its accomplishment are first removed?

5. About what proportion of the apparently insuperable difficulties in the way of doing our duty are removed when we come right up to the duty? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by the members of the Club.)

6. Why would you say or not that to-day God's help to his children is accomplished through natural law only?

7. Verse 5. The young man sitting on the right side of the sepulchre was an angel; what reason if any is there to believe that he was once a human being?

8. Verse 5. Most Christians believe that angels are all around us; why would you say or not that it is possible for us to develop sight sufficiently sensitive to see them?

9. Verse 6. Why is it that most people have such a dread of the very thought of seeing a spirit?

10. Did Christ resurrect himself or did God do it? Which and why?

11. Of what import is Christ's resurrection to us?

12. Verses 7, 8. Why was it necessary for the disciples to be told of Christ's resurrection, and especially that Peter should be told?

13. Why was it that these men were so frightened by the best news mortals could hear? Can you give any similar present day cases?

14. Verses 8-11. Jesus appeared first to a woman who had been a desperate character; would that suggest or not and why the worst of sinners when saved are dearer to the heart of Jesus than ordinary Christians who had never been very bad?

15. If it is a fact that we are slower to believe good news than bad news, how do you account for it?

16. Verses 12-14. What are some of the particulars of these two appearances of Jesus after his resurrection?

17. Verses 15, 16. To what extent have Christians been faithful to Christ's command to preach the gospel to the whole world?

18. What proportion of the world has had the gospel preached to it and how many professedly Christian nations are there?

19. Verses 15, 16. What are the conditions for being a Christian, what its benefits, and what comes to those who reject the gospel message?

20. Verses 17, 18. Why did God give to the first Christian preachers miraculous power, and why is that power not given to-day?

21. Verses 19, 20. How long a time intervened between Christ's resurrection and his ascension, and what are the particulars of the ascension?

PUBLIC NOTICE

Military Service Act, 1917.

Men 19 and 20 Years of Age.
Harvest Leave.
Leave of Absence on Ground of Extreme Hardship.
Procedure to obtain Leave of Absence.

Men Nineteen and Twenty Years of Age.

It has come to the attention of the Government that there is a widespread impression that young men of nineteen years, and those who became twenty since October 13, 1917, as well as those who may become nineteen from time to time and who have been or will be called upon to register under the Military Service Act, are to be immediately called to the colours.

This impression is quite incorrect. No date has yet been fixed for calling upon such men to so report for duty, nor has the question been brought before the Cabinet for decision. In view of the need of labour on the farm, it is most unlikely that consideration will be given to the matter until after the harvest is over, although of course the Government's action must be determined primarily by the military situation.

There is no further obligation incumbent upon young men of the ages above mentioned who have registered or who do so hereafter, until they receive notice from the Registrars.

Harvest Leave.

Some enquiries have been received as to the possibility of granting harvest leave to such troops as may be in the country at that time. No definite assurance can be given on this point as advantage must be taken of ships as they become available. On the other hand, harvest leave will be given if at all possible.

It is desired that the Regulations respecting leave of absence in cases of hardship should be widely known and fully understood. Such leave will be granted in two cases:— (a) where extreme hardship arises by reason of the fact that the man concerned is either the only son capable of earning a livelihood, of a father killed or disabled on service or presently in service overseas, or in training for such service, or under treatment after returning from overseas; or the only remaining of two or more brothers capable of earning a livelihood (the other brother or brothers having been killed or disabled on service, or being presently in service overseas, or in training for overseas or under treatment after his or their return from overseas); brothers married before 4th August, 1914, living in separate establishments and having a child or children not to be counted, in determining the fact that the man is the "only" remaining son or brother; (b) where extreme hardship arises by reason of exceptional circumstances such as the fact that the man concerned is the sole support of a widowed mother, an invalid father or other helpless dependents.

It is to be noted that in all these cases the governing factor is not hardship, loss or suffering to the individual concerned, but to others, that is. members of his family or those depending upon him.

Procedure to obtain leave of absence.

A simple system for dealing with these cases has been adopted. Forms of application have been supplied to every Depot Battalion and an officer of each battalion has been detailed whose duty it is to give them immediate attention. The man concerned should on reporting to his unit state that he desires to apply for leave of absence on one or more of the grounds mentioned and his application form will then be filled out and forwarded to Militia Headquarters, Ottawa. In the meantime, if the case appears meritorious, the man will be given provisional leave of absence for thirty days so that he may return home and continue his civil occupation while his case is being finally disposed of.

STRIKES SPREADING THROUGHOUT AUSTRIA

GRAVE EVENTS ARE IMPENDING ON BRITISH FRONT ACCORDING TO MILITARY EXPERTS

OFFICIAL REPORTS

(Special to Examiner)

PARIS, June 21—(Havas Agency)—Grave events are impending on the British front according to military experts, who see in the intensity of the Germon cannonade at various points the preliminary steps of another German attack. It is pointed that the fourth army group under crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, has had leisure for re-organization during three weeks since it was engaged in battle and is now being made ready for a new effort along the front. It has been established that units of Crown Prince Rupprecht's army were engaged in an abortive attack on Rheims Tuesday night. This is considered proof by "L'Homme Libre" that the German Crown Prince's army is tired and exhausted.

BRITISH OFFICIAL

Canadian Press.

LONDON, June 21.—(Official)—Further extensive raiding and patrol operations were carried out by British troops last night in the Arras region and on the front to south towards Albert. Attempts by the Germans to regain ground won yesterday by the British near Merris on the Flanders front were repulsed.

THE STATEMENT READS

During the night we captured few prisoners and machine guns and inflicted many casualties upon the enemy in raids and patrol in Aveluy Wood. In the neighborhood of Hebuterne and Boyelles, and on both banks of Scarpe, several hostile attemps to recapture ground gained by us yesterday northwest of Merries were repulsed with losses to the enemy. There is nothing further to report.

FRENCH OFFICIAL

Canadian Press

PARIS, Juen 21.—French troops last night carried out operations on a front south-west of Soissons which resulted in the improvement of their positions in the neighborhood of Faverolles. A similar improvement was affected further south on this front, nearf Hautevesnes.

FOUR GERMAN AVIATORS DESERTED AND SOUGHT REFUGE IN SWEDEN

(Special to Examiner)

COPENHAGEN, June 21—Four Aviators, in two Air Planes deserted from Johanisthal, near Berlin, it was learned here today. One machine, containing two of the deserters landed near Copenhagen. The men were interned.

German warships near Falsterbo, a Swedish port on the Baltic, were warned and brought down the other plane.

Is Investigating The Circumstances

Statement Issued Last Night by the Department of Justice is to Be Supplemented

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 21. — The somewhat laconic statement issued by the Department of Justice last night regarding the controversy which has arisen over the raid made by police officers upon the St. Stanislas Novitiate of Guelph is to be supplemented by a further statement based upon the report of the official who is investigating the circumstances.

In the meantime the authorities here are inclined to be reticent about passing any comment, though little defence of the actual circumstances of the raid is heard. The military authorities declare that if there are men in the Novitiate eligible under the Military Service Act they will be drafted. They make no statement, however, in corroboration of the contention that eligible young men are within the walls of the Novitiate. In fact the eligibility of members of the Novitiate is a question which the legal authorities of the Government will have to decide. The question involves the interpretation of the words "religious order" in the meaning of the Act. Members of recognized religious orders are excepted under the Act.

Further Statement.

Beyond his short statement made last night, Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, has nothing at present to say. It is, however, well known here that Mr. Doherty's son entered the Novitiate at the age of 18, and before he was eligible under the Ac. It is further stated that before he entered he was examined several times and pronounced by Protestant doctors to be unfit for military service. Having thus satisfied himself he entered upon the vocation on which he had set his mind.

WHEN A SHIP GIVES BATTLE

With Decks Clear of All Unnecessary Impedimenta She Sweeps Into the Fray.

A ship clearing for action proceeds to rid decks of all unnecessary impedimenta. Everything that does not contribute to her efficiency as a fighting machine goes below or by the board, and she sweeps into the fray with but one object, and that to acquit herself valiantly.

Something of the same sort takes place when nations are concerned, only the process is necessarily slower and less drastic. It is one thing for the company of a ship, clearing for action, to throw a piano overboard. It is quite another thing for a nation clearing for action, to throw a non-productive member of society overboard. In the latter case the energies of the non producer must be diverted to productive pursuits and all this, of course, takes time.

But Canada is rapidly clearing for the final action of the war. One of the most important steps in the process is the registration of every person, male and female, resident in Canada. For this purpose Saturday, 22nd June, has been set aside by the Government and it is the duty of everyone to immediately inform himself as to what will be required of him on that day.

Next to its unique flavour, the great economy of Salada Tea has been the reason for its enormous sale.

Bolsheviki Is Nearing Finish

The Movement Which Had Its Inception in Siberia Is Growing

(By Joseph Shaplen — United Press Service).

STOCKHOLM, June 21.—Developments in Siberia are intensely serious for the Bolsheviki. It is impossible to glean from reports now available whether the movement there is counter revolutionary, but it is most likely that the social revolutionaries of the right are dominating it.

M. Schuaiansky, President of the Siberian Soviets, recently wrote to Premier Lenine, indicating that all groups in Siberia, including part of the Bolsheviki, were likely to combine to fight German penetration. He declared that possible inroads in Siberia would necessitate the abrogation of the Brest-Litovsk Peace Pact. Concluding, he said, "Siberia will be forced to accept this viewpoint in defence of their interests, and will enter in agreement with the Americans, which would lead to expected consequences, namely, loans and trade treaties."

The letter never has been made public.

Lenine and his Moscow crowd are likely to resort to a final desperate move to save themselves, calling in the Germans against the democratic and pro-ally factions. They would term this a part of the "necessary policy of compromise, while awaiting a world revolution."

Thus, the dissolution of Bolshevism is proceeding rapidly, showing that the predictations of an early end of Bolshevism is near realization.

A SERVICE FLAG WITH MANY STARS

Pathe Freres, the World-Renowned Makers of Phonographs and Moving Picture Films, Have 2,080 Stars in Their Service Flag.

Mr. Ferdinand Zecca, the new Director General of Productions, who arrived recently from Paris, states that more than 2,000 French, English and Italian employees of Pathe Freres have served in the ranks of the Allies as officers, non-commissioned officers and privates, and that more than 200 died on the battlefields.

More than 500 have been decorated for bravery.

A large number have been wounded and released from service, and have returned to the positions they held with Pathe Freres before enlisting.

More than 80 men have responded to the call to the colours on this continent, and the list is rapidly growing.

HAS BEEN GIVEN POSITION ON STAFF.

THE FAMILY OF MR. GEORGE GIROUX IS WELL REPRESENTED IN THE SERVICE.

Mr. George Giroux of this city has received from his son Cyril, two shoulder badges and a hat badge which are used to identify members of the Tank battalions. The shoulder badges show a side view of the tank and the hat badge a front view. Cyril Giroux went over to France with the Borden Machine Gun Corps but recently he has been given a position with the staff.

Mr. Giroux has also received word that his son Omer Giroux has arrived safely in England. He is a member of the United States Army. A third son, Herman, is training in Canada and is about to leave for overseas.

"SPEEDY VICTORY"

This Has Not Been Achieved by Hindenburg—Beginning of the End is in Sight

WANING MORALE

(By William Philip Simms—United Press Service.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, June 21.—Today, three months from the beginning of Hindenburg's colossal offensive, his promised "speedy victory" is not achieved.

From now on the strength of his army must decrease. If the Allies fight during the next three months as they have been the past the beginning of the end is in sight.

This does not mean that peace will then be at hand, but the road to victory ought to be stretched out straight ahead.

The west front is now seething, rumbling and smoking, like a chain of volcanoes between eruptions. Those of us who are resting at the lips of the crater are watching to see where the next explosion will come. Will it be in one of the same spots, or a new place?

Germans Are Weaker.

One thing is certain. The Germans today are weaker, numerically and morally than at the beginning of the offensive. From prisoners it is learned that fewer German divisions are now on the west front than there were a month ago. Furthermore, Hindenburg has now flung practically every reserve division into the offensive. From now on his campaign must be carried on by divisions which already have been through the mill at least once.

Today, there are not more than five absolutely fresh divisions which have not been in this offensive. Barely a bakers dozen exist which have not yet participated in the drives.

Waving Morale.

In addition to these, more than thirty divisions have been withdrawn from one active front and have been training and resting for three weeks. All together Hindenburg has about fifty divisions able for immediate action, whereas 81 were used during the first week of the Somme thrust. These being absolutely fresh and specially trained for their work.

Another important factor is the waning morale of the German troops At the start of the drives they were aroused to a feverish pitch by expectancy.

The professional dopesters told them that nothing could stop Hindenburg's new war machine, which when once started would run over everything, straight to victory. But the war machine keeps running down

Four successive times after a flying start, it has come to a dead halt.

THE IRISH SITUATION

No Attempt Will Be Made at Present Time to Introduce Conscription or Home Rule in Ireland

PRESS COMMENT

Canadian Press:

LONDON, June 21. — (Associated Press Despatch.) — Earl Curzan's speech in the House of Lords last night was immediately seized upon in the lobby as an admission of a breakdown in the Government's Irish policy. It is treated in this morning's newspapers as a sensational development and is made the stop column's special.

"Home rule is dead and Irish conscription is dead," says the radical Daily News, and the whole Irish policy of the government has fallen crumbling to the ground. Apart from military conscription the condition of Ireland to-day is a mockery of every profession, to which we give utterance as vindicators of justice and freedom."

The Unionist Morning Post, in its comment on development, says: "The government once more has burned its fingers very badly by a mixture of rashness and inconstancy. What will be the effect of this remains to be seen." Less rigid newspapers are hardly less severe in their criticism.

"Irish priests and bishops have played a leading part in killing both Home Rule and conscription," says the Daily Express. "If the moderates prevail and crimes cease, then, perhaps, when peaces comes, there may be another opportunity for Home Rule."

"Lord French will see that there is no rebellion in Ireland," the Graphic says. "The worst elements in Ireland have been allowed by the committee of the government to get the upper hand. Much sterner measures are required before order can be restored."

Has Broken Down.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, June 21.— The speech of Earl Curzon in the House of Lords last night is regarded in Parliament as an admission of a breakdown in the Government's Irish policy, and it is believed that no furiher attempt will be made, at least for some time, to introduce the Home Rule Bill or carry out conscription in Ireland. It is understood the Government now favours a Federal solution of the problem, which will be applicable also to Wales and Scotland.

Premier Lloyd George has consented to meet a deputation from all parties in both houses of Parliament, desirous of setting up a commission to draft such a Federal scheme.

Class One Men In A Dilemma

Intending Registrants Liable for Military Service Are in Difficulties.

TORONTO, June 21.—Registration is having a noticeable effect already on men in Class One. One of the questions asked is, "if registered under the Military Service Act, what is your secial number?" As by that time the Registrar knows the age of the registrant, and if married or unmarried, hence, if a person in Class One cannot tell his serial number the odds are that he has none.

In two or three instances when this question was reached the party registering was stricken by a sudden attack of shyness, and, muttering that "he would be back later," beat a hasty retreat. Needless to say, this particular partv did not come back. He will have many uncomfortable things to think over, if he has not registered under the Military Service Act, he cannot register now without acknowledging this fact And if he acknowledges this fact, he will not likely get vary far away. On the other hand if he does not register this week, where will he be able to get anything to eat next week? So the chances are that he will give himself up promptly. As a matter of fact, several men have been caught by the new registration already, and are now in the army.

DIED.

AXFORD.—Daniel Neale Axford died this morning at 3 o'clock.

Service at house at 2.30 p.m.

Fighting Continues To Rage Along The Whole Piave Line

Italians Have Advanced at a Number of Points—Cavalry in Action With Good Results for the Italians

HEAVY ENEMY LOSSES

LONDON, June 21.—(3.22 p.m.) — The Italians have gained a big victory at Nervesa, on the west bank of the Piave and are fighting to complete their success, it was learned from an authoritative source this afternoon

Nervesa, an important railway crossing, guards the south-eastern approach to the Montello crest, the keystone connecting the river and mountain lines.

It was at this point that Premier Orlando admitted a considerable enemy gain to the Italian Parliament last night, the Austrians having crossed the Montebelluna-Susenana railway at several points.

The Italians have hurled the Austrians back at this point, re-entering Nervesa. They are now battling to push on to the river, thus splitting the enemy forces again and beginning the first phase of a flanking movement northward to cut off the Austrians on Montello. An Italian force already has divided the enemy forces a few miles to the southward.

With the Italian Armies in the Field, June 21.—The fighting rages along the whole Piave line, from Montello to the Adriatic. The Italians appear to have the advantage everywhere on this front, particularly above Zenson. Their attacks are carried out with vim and dash while the less frequent Austrian counter attacks lack spirit.

Open fighting has permitted the Italian cavalry to act as such for the first time since the new offensive began. In a certain sector on the Piave, five hundred mounted Lancers made a spectacular charge, hurdling five barricades and slaughtering great numbers of the foe. They captured 70 prisoners, three cannon, and three machine guns.

FIVE ENEMY DIVISIONS.

It is now established that five enemy divisions (60,000 men) are on the west side of the river. A considerable number of these are north of San Dona Di Piave, where their temporary bridges have been swept away by the flooded river. The Austrians have succeeded in throwing three new bridges across in the San Dona sector, but the current is less swift here, owing to the broadening of the river, and the positions less exposed to Italian artillery fire, because of the latter's greater distance from the bank.

IN GREAT DANGER.

The enemy unite farther north are still in great danger of capture or annihilation through inability to obtain reinforcements or replenish their ammunition and food supplies. This is particularly the case just south of Candelu, where the Italians drove forward to the river, splitting the enemy forces.

Attempts by the Austrians to cross or recross the river in boats and rafts have resulted in many being swept away and drowned.

Resumption of the Austrians' drive southward from the mountain region is expected hourly. This most obvious strategy, success of which would outflank and compel the retirement of the whole Piave line, is believed to have been counselled by Hindenburg and Ludendorff, who are reported to have paid a flying visit to the Austrian headquarters.

In the initial drive last Sunday the greatest enemy effort was concentrated in the mountain area, but this was naturally anticipated by the Italian command, and it was here that the Austrians had their most serious reverse. Of the forty divisions (480,000 men) employed here more than 30 divisions (360,000 men) suffered such heavy losses that they were compelled to retire.

The Austrians have been compelled to relieve every division used in the mountains on the first day of the drive. This is responsible for the comparative inactive front.

The enemy also needs new supplies of munitions and as soon as these are brought up and his divisions reorganized he is expected to strike another major blow from the north.

Despite the fact that the Austrians are reliably reported to have used nearly a million men already, prac-

BRITISH CASUALTIES

Big List Coming Out Each Week Represents Accumulation

Canadian Press:

LONDON, June 21.—British casualties reported during the week ended to-day aggregated 36,620, divided as follows: Killed or died of wounds, officers and men, 4,482; wounded or missing, officers and men, 32,138. It is several weeks since the British Army has been engaged in any prolonged fighting on a large scale, although British divisions were involved in the German attack which began the offensive on May 27 on the Aisne fron. The bulk of the casualties now being reported, which still are running between 30,000 and 40,000 weekly, evidently represents an accumulation of names from intensive operations in which the British were engaged during the heavy German attacks of this spring on the British front.

Conditions In Austria And Germany Are Becoming Worse

Strikes Are Spreading Throughout the Vienna District

A SERIOUS CRISIS

Canadian Press.

LONDON, June 21.—Food conditions in Germany and Austria are becoming worse and there is great discontent there owing to the reduction in the bread ration, according to all reports here.

(Special to Examiner)

ZURICH, June 21.—Strikes, following the recent riots, are spreading throughout the Vienna district, according to dispatches received here today.

More than 100,00 workers are reported on strike in the Warschalowski airplane factory and the Vulcan arsenal Riots are said to have occured in four suburbs of Vienna.

"Peace, Bread."

(Special to Examiner.)

PARIS, June 21.—Fifty thousand demonstrators who marched through the streets of Vienna Thursday night shouting "Peace, Bread" and pillaging shops, were charged by the police with drawn sabres, according to a Zurich despatch to the Journal today. Many of the civilians were injured.

(Special to Examiner)

AMSTERDAM, June 21.—Premier Von Seydler, addressing Austrian newspapermen, said Germany has agreed to send grain into Austria and that some was already en route, according to advices received here today Hungary is sending potatoes he said.

Trouble is Spreading.

Canadian Press.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Riots are reported in suburbs of Vienna and 100,000 workers in important war manufactories there are on strike. The situation apparently is growing beyond the control of civil authorities and martial law in the Austrian capital is not unlikely. The workmen continue to demand more bread and the agitation is spreading Advices received in neutral countries are to the effect that the present trouble is the most serious the Austrian government has faced and is causing grave apprehension throughout the country. Germany appears unable to help, because it is faced with a serious food situationo itself.

SWORN TO AND GUARANTEED

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, JUNE 21ST, 1918.

TO-NIGHT'S MEETING.

Peterboro citizens are again reminded of to-night's meeting in the City Council Chamber, to be addressed by Miss Constance R. Boulton, organizer of the Navy League, and at which a Peterboro branch of the League is to be organized. It is high time that the people of Peterboro began to pay some of their debt to the British navy and mercantile marine—a debt that has been heavily increasing since the outbreak of the war, and which has been allowed to go unliquidated, as far as this city is concerned. Peterboro can help to meet its obligations in connection with the men who have kept the seas open by organizing a successful branch of the Navy League, and by giving it a healthy and interested support.

The first step is to attend to-night's meeting if possible—the next is to become a member of the League. The objects of the organization are such that every patriotic citizen should be eager to be connected with the League —50,000 members for Ontario is the present aim of the Provincial Division and Peterboro should contribute a fair share of this number.

THE PLAYGROUNDS.

To ensure two months of happy play hours and healthy, constructive recreation for Peterboro's children and rest and ease of mind for Peterborough's mothers, the people of this city should be willing to pay a much greater sum than they will be called upon to contribute next week when the canvass of the Playgrounds Association will be carried out. $1200 is the amount asked for—a ridiculously small sum in view of the benefits that will be secured from its expenditure. But the Playgrounds Association have said that the work can be done with that much money and so Peterborough is only asked for $1200. There have been many calls upon public generosity in the past, but even in the face of that fact, the appeal for the supervised playgrounds is based upon such a solid foundation of good work done in the past, that it should be received in a spirit that will make the task of the canvassers an easy and delightful one. The playgrounds give the children who cannot go to Stoney Lake, Chemong, or down the Otonabee, a chance to enjoy the holiday period in a rational, helpful way, under conditions that tend not only to give them sound, robust bodies, but that develop the mind and character as well. No one who has watched the children in the playgrounds during the past couple of summers will question the effectiveness of the system or the enjoyment it affords the youngsters. And no firmer friend of the playgrounds will be found than the mothers who have been able to attend to ther household duties and secure a restful hour or two, content in the knowledge that their children are in good hands, learning to be better boys and girls, developing, in body and mind and safe from the dangers of the street.

Without the supervised playgrounds the children would have to find their amusement on Peterborough's streets or else penned up at home. The street with the ever-increasing motor traffic, is not the place for little ones, and if the supervised playgrounds save only one youngster from being killed by a motor car, the expenditure of much more than $1200 would be justified.

The canvass net week should be a sweeping success.

WAR SITUATION BETTER.

The past week has been a cheerful and hopeful period for the allied cause, and the general situation is better now than at any time since the ferocious German offensive began three months ago to-day. Although the German High Command has fed its masses of men into the battle line with unparalleled fury, striving to reach the Channel ports or Paris, or to separate the British and French armies, in three months of desperate fighting, the Germans have not only failed to accomplish any one of their objects, but have suffered fearful losses, while the drain on the allied man power has been steadily replenished by the constant stream of first-class fighting men from the United States. During the present week the enemy has sustained a decisive and costly defeat at Rheims, where an attempt to wrest the city from the French was stopped dead by the splendid resistance of our heroic allies.

In Italy the Austrians have made the long-heralded grand attack on the Italian lines, and have failed to achieve any notable success. The offensive there looks like a defeat for the Austrians now, and may indeed be turned into a disaster, the effect of which in Austria-Hungary, with the civilian population now at the point of revolution, can be imagined.

Germany will strike again on the western front. There is no doubt of that, and the next blow may be even more desperate than those which she has already hurled against the allies, but the French, British and American armies are still barring the way to the coveted goal, and the events of the past three weeks show that the best the enemy can hope for is a gain in territory that will be paid for in huge losses.

SAFETY FIRST.

While it is too late to expect any civic help towards providing dressing rooms for the bathing places along the river, for this season at least, it is not too late, however, for the City Council to emulate the example of the Nicholls Park Board, and adopt as a measure of protection the precaution that has been taken by that organization at Inverlea Park—that is, the providing of life buoys. Two of these equipped with long ropes are now available at Inverlea and their acquisition is a simple safeguard that could be put into use at other points on the river, notably at the foot of Dublin street, north of the C.P.R. bridge, and at the Vermont marble works, all of which bathing places are largely patronized by the citizens during the hot weather. No doubt residents in the neighbourhood would be glad to see that the buoys were not tampered with, and the fact that these life-saving devices were at hand in case of an accident, would be reassuring to the timid bather.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

This being the occasion of the annual outing of the Normal School, to-day's weather may be regarded as normal—it always rains for the students' pic-nic.

The Ontario Goverament is going to keep the German language out of the schools, but the Canadian army is helping to keep it out of the whole of Canada.

REGULATION HAS NOT BEEN ENFORCED

Stalls Are Still Permitted to Remain in Restaurants

Nothing has yet been done by the authorities towards carrying out the bylaw passed by the City Council on June 3rd, 1918, forbidding the use of stalls or enclosed spaces in a public eating house or restaurant. The same bylaw covered the closing of restaurants during a portion of one day, which clause has been enforced. Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Health Officer, said this morning that as far as he has been informed, the law was not in force.

The authorities at the City Hall, however say that the regulation takes effect as soon as the bylaw is passed by the council, and they place the responsibility for failing to enforce the regulation upon the police department and the Medical Officer of Health.

Registration Eased Up Last Night

Only Three or Four Registrants at Some of the Booths.

Registration last night slackened up at most of the booths, some of which had only four registrants. During the first two days an unexpectedly large registration at some of the booths necessitated a S. O. S. call for more cards while others were over stocked. The total registration has not as yet exceeded provisions made for it and no call for further printing of cards has been made.

County Magistrate Langley used the new court room this morning in disposing of a case in which D. McConnell of Cordova, was charged with a breach of the Ontario Temperance Act.

The County Council was occupying the usual county police court. McConnell was found not guilty of having liquor in a place other than his private dwelling, but he was fined $18 for having been drunk in a public place, the village store at Cordova. Mr. G. N. Gould appeared for the defendant. He felicitated Magistrate Langley upon the splendid room shared with the County Court, and expressed the hope that in due time the County Magistrate would have a Judgeship in some other county.

Fishing Guides In Demand At Lakes

From Rice Lake, Curve Lake and Buckhorn come reports that the opening of the fishing season has attracted a larger number than usual of tourists, who have arrived early for the fishing. Chief Whetung, of the Indian Village at Curve Lake states that there has been a big demand for guides. In fact, the old men have been called out and even some of the boys, who are said to know the fishing grounds as intimately as their elders. The rates are three dollars a day and meals, and from the present outlook the guides expect a profitable season.

Must Get License To Sell Ice Cream

After July 1st all retailers of ice cream will be required to provide themselves with a Government license that will cost them five dollars. The grocers assert that some stores are not abiding by the early closing law, that they remain open to sell tobacco fruit, ice cream etc., and incidentally sell groceries. They intend to urge the strict enforcement of the city's by-law in this respect, as a protection to the retailers who are closing early.

Ross MacPherson Of Omemee Is Dead

OMEMEE, June 20.—The death of Ross McPherson, although not unexpected, came as a shock to the village in general on Wednesday morning. Deceased, though just in the prime of life, has been in failing health for several years, and for the past three months has been confined to his room. For a number of years he was connected with the Bank of Toronto, being teller in the Winnipeg branch, when failing health intervened. When the 109th Battalion was formed, Ross was one of the first recruits, and seemed to regain much of his former strength while in training, but was unable to go overseas. The funeral, which was held on Friday, was a very large one attesting to the high esteem in which the young man was held. The floral tributes were many and very beautiful. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Lewis, of the Methodist church, assisted by Rev. Mr. James, of the Anglican church. Left to mourn the loss of a loving son and brother, are the parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. McPherson, one sister, Mrs. W. G. Stephenson, and one brother, Ernest, who have the sympathy of the community at large in their irreparable loss.

WAR GARDEN BULLETIN

WATCH FOR BLISTER BEETLES.

Blister beetles occur almost every year and cause considerable anxiety to farmers and gardeners from their habit of appearing suddenly in large numbers and feeding on potatoes, beans, beets, carrots, corn, tomatoes and other vegetables. They are soft-bodied insects—slender and cylindrical, and about half an inch in length. Spraying with Paris green or arsenate of lead, as is done for the potato beetle, will control blister beetles, but in some outbreaks it may be necessary to repeat the application because the beetles which are killed are soon replaced by others. In gardens many of the insects may be destroyed by beating them from the plants into a pan containing water with a little coal oil on the surface.

A Presentation And Address To The Rev. Mr. Carr, Of Apsley

Departure For Another Circuit is Regretted by Members of the Congregation.

Rev. Mr. Carr, pastor of the Methodist churches in the Apsley Circuit, returned from attending the conference last week. He has been selected to take charge of a church on Victoria Road, Lindsay, and will commence his work there in July. At the close of his service on Sunday, June 16th, he was presented with a purse of money by Mr. Charles Lauder, the Recording Steward, and the following address was read by Mrs. Bruce Reid:

Dear Mr. Carr—

We, the members and adherents of Eden Methodist church, have known for some time of your impending departure from this circuit, after four years of faithful and painstaking work in our midst, and we wish to express to you our sincere regret and sorrow. We have found you to be a conscientious minister of the gospel, fulfilling your duties in a manner acceptable to all. In your personal intercourse with us you have always been a cheery and sympathetic friend and in times of sorrow and trouble a comforter whose presence was a help desired by all. We feel that we cannot let you depart without expressing to you our earnest wish that you may long continue to carry on your chosen life work; that you may have your due measure of success in the world, and that the reward of a faithful servant of God may be yours when life is over. We believe that—

If with pleasure we are viewing
The good work a man is doing,
We should tell him now;
If he's earned our praise, bestow it,
If we like him, let him know it;
Let the word of true encouragement be said.
For more than fame and more than money
Is the comment kind and sunny,
And the hearty warm approval of his friends,
For it gives to life a savour,
And it makes him stronger, braver
To bear his cross onward to the end.

We ask you to accept this purse as a slight token of our great esteem and regard for you.

Signed on behalf of the congregation,

CHAS. LAUDER,
ALLAN H. CHURCH,
JOHN McCAULEY,
Trustees.

Mr. Carr in well chosen words, thanked the people for their gift and for their kindness during the time he spent amongst them. He will preach his farewell sermon on the last Sunday in June.

Music Associated With The Chimes

The Stratton Chime is Frequently Played in Peterborough.

For centuries past rhymes have been associated with the chiming of bells, especially the combination used before divine service, which never changed except on festivals, when each bell had its ringer and many changes were rung. Three men would operate a chime of six bells, the two smallest by one man, the next three in size by a second man, and the tenor bell swayed by a third. The devotion of bell ringers to their task is proverbial.

The folowing rhymes of old times are preserved at Stratton, Cornwall, England, where there is a peal of six bells:

"Adam and Eve would never believe that Peter the miller was dead."
"Shut up in the tower, for stealing of flour,"
"And never could get a reprieve; and never could get a reprieve."

"For murdering Charles our King."

Mr. R. J. Devey is indebted to Mr. W. F. Johnston for the music of the Stratton chime, and frequently plays it on the "People's Chimes."

Voice of The People

Editor of The Examiner: Sir, The fifty-first anniversary of the Confederation of the Dominion of Canada is to be celebrated in Peterboro on the first of July. I would suggest that as this is the century of the first settlement the town site of Peterboro a place in the programme of the day may be made for the one hundredth anniversary of Scott's landing in 1818 on the primitive site of the town that was to be.

John Riddell.

SEVERAL EXEMPTION APPEALS WERE HEARD THIS MORNING

Farmer and a Munition Worker Seek Exemption—Time of Former Was Extended.

Judge Huycke issued a timely warning at the tribunal this morning to young men against seeking exemptions from outside judges. This, he said, only served to weaken the exemptionist's case. This had been attempted by one of the young men who appeared to-day.

There would be a change of costume for a large number of the young married men in the city if the Judge had his way. This morning His Honour told one young man appealing for exemption and pleading a wife to support that, while it is quite proper for him to be married, a husband is the right man to fight for his wife. If he had his way every married man from 21 to 30 years of age would don the khaki, and the boys be allowed to stay at home.

EXTENSION ALLOWED.

Albert W. Lane, Apsley, age 33, appealed from the decision of the Apsley tribunal. He works a 200 acre farm on which he is the only working man, his father being 80 years of age. Of five brothers none are in the service. Joseph, a partial cripple, lives at home. To allow him to bring in the crop and the brother to recover Judge Huycke allowed him until Sept. 1st.

A MUNITION WORKER.

Percy Telford, a munition worker, age 25, was exempted until July 1 by Judge Huycke. His brother is with the Headquarters staff on active service. He had been in munition work, but with the closing of a factory in town had transferred to the Auburn Mills. Judgment was reserved.

VENEREAL DISEASE BAR TO MARRIAGE

MUST APPLY TO THE DOCTORS

Victims Cannot Get Drugs Without Showing Prescription.

TORONTO, June 21.—Drastic regulations based upon the Venereal Diseases Prevention Act adopted by the Legislature last session have been passed by the Ontario Government. They strike hard at the plague that has been undermining social life in this province, as in other countries. Perhaps the most sweeping provision contained is a prohibition of marriage by any person suffering from venereal disease, and any set that is likely to result in the spread of the disease is similarly regarded as a serious offence. In both cases heavy fines may be imposed and the offender sent to prison for a year.

The regulations as finally approved are quite as radical, but not so far-reaching in their scope as those favoured by the Provincial Board of Health and the medical experts who held several conferences upon the subject some time ago. It was at first thought well to carry the fight against venereal diseases into the barber ships and public washrooms throughout the province by requiring careful sterilization of barber instruments and by prohibiting the use of the common towel. Further consideration of the subject, however, has convinced the authorities and the Government that the regulations as finally adopted are far-reaching enough as a beginning.

The Act goes into effect on July 1, and arrangements are now being made to supply medical officers with the necessary forms. At the start it is expected that the chief task will be to bring under treatment the infected inmates of jails, hospitals, asylums, reformatories, etc. The heads of these various institutions must, under the regulations, report daily every new case of infection.

WINSLOW GETS NO PARDON.

Whitman Refuses to Release Convict to Enter the Army.

ALBANY, N.Y., June 21.—A plea that he sought release from prison in order that he might join the army failed to obtain Executive clemency for Keneln Chase Winslow.

The plea, made at Governor Whitman's pardon day hearing, was offered by attorneys for Winslow, who attended one of the Plattsburg training camps and was sentenced in October, 1917, to serve twenty years in prison for first-degree manslaughter. He stranged a young woman companion in a New York hotel. In denying the application, Governor Whitman said the army was place for criminals.

Crime Is Rife In Germany

EVERYONE IS STEALING

AMSTERDAM, June 21.—The following is a picture of social conditions in Prussia as presented during the debate on June 18 on the Budget of the Minister of the Interior in the House of Deputies by the Socialist member Braun:

"We are face to face with a terrible condition of public morality. We hear of numberless cases of thefts on railroads, and alarming juvenile criminality. According to official statistics, between October, 1916, and November, 1917, there were 487,726 convictions for infractions of the food regulations, and these were only a small percentage of the actual transgressions committed.

Pervades All Society.

"As for that, we are all sinners. profiteering exceeds all round; usury is rampant among all classes. Fraudulent profiteering, like that of the Daimler works, is nowise exceptional. Even official bodies attempt to extort illegal profits. Poor people can only buy clothes by bribing the salesmen with tips or food.

"The increase of criminality demonstrates the demoralization through the war, which is described by fools as a rejuvenating bath. Self-sacrifice and patriotism, perhaps, are still found in the trenches, but in the invaded regions profiteering begins to rear its head, culminating in the most repusive profit-snatching at home.

Everybody Steals

"Everybody cheats, steals, grabs, from jail-bird to Court Chamberlain, who cheats the needy home worker out of his scanty earnings and pockets millions. And the longer the war lasts the worse it becomes.

"Aded to this is the Fatherland party's wild war-baiting propaganda and refusal of equal suffrage. What wonder that popular exasperation burst forth in a big strike in January."

Herr Brown further pilloried the nefarious activities of police and informers, and the hateful, hypocritical censorship. The prohibition of the acknowledgment of gifts by soldiers to the Socialistic funds, he said, was ordered for the purpose of withholding from public knowledge the magnitude of the demand in the army for peace and equal suffrage.

He further mercilessly indicted the systematic discrimination against the Socialistic press, while the Fatherland party and annexationists with impunity raised the accusation of bribery with Anglo-American money against those favouring peace by negotiation. He finally gave a number of instances of arbitrary suppression of political meetings which were unwelcome to the military commanders, all of which caused the gravest bitterness among the people.

Confession of Impotence.

The Minister of the Interior, Dr. Drews, answered vaguely that he was not responsible for the censorship or the other matters complained of, which were under the jurisdiction of the military authorities.

The Socialist newspaper Vorwaerts, devotes a long editorial to the foregoing in which it says:

"Dr. Drews' unsatisfactory answer is tatamount to a confession of the impotence of the Civil Government. In fact there is no responsible civil government in Prussia to-day. It demonstrates the necessity of the abolition of the state of siege in the country for which there is no legal justification whatever. The necessity of a responsible government is shown especially by the fate of suffrage reform, which has been dragged from reading to reading, without the government intervening, with the immediate dissolution of the House."

RIVERSIDES WON FROM ORIENTALS BY 15 TO 11

Plenty of Variety Featured City Twilight League Game—Five Pitchers Were Used and Hits and Errors Were Plentiful

	Won.	Lost.
Thistles	2	0
Riversides	2	0
De Laval	0	1
Matthews-Blackwell	0	1
Orientals	0	2

There was plenty of excitement and variety in last night's City Twilight League game at Riverside Park, which Riversides won from Orientals by 15 runs to 11. Up to the sixth innings the Riversides had been breezing along, hitting the ball merrily and easily, holding their youngster opponents. They were leading 15 to 5 when Manager Solomon resolved to rest his pitching ace Kirn, and so he shifted him to second base, McCarney vacating the keystone position for the slab. He was wild and ineffective, however, and after three runs had come over, the Riverside manager decided to send Kirn back to the rubber. Umpire Alex Kay, however, refused to permit the change and after an imitation of a Mugsy McGraw scene by Manager Solomon and a counter demonstration by Manager Johnston of the Orientals, the game went on, Kirn was not allowed to go back to the box, so Left Fielder Sheehy was called in to the firing line and held the winners safe, getting out of the hole nicely in that inning and blanking the Orientals in the seventh and ninth, although they managed to get two runs across in the eighth.

Riversides had their batting clothes on in the early stages, driving Galbraith, the southpaw twirler of the Orientals, to cover in three innings and bagging six runs of McNeely, his successor, in the fourth. McNeely, however, settled down then and held the winners to one run and two singles in the last four innings.

The fielding was loose on both sides.

The box score tells how it happened:

German Government Has Decided To Send Food Supplies To Austria

Seriousness of Domestic Situation in Dual Monarchy is Revealed by Decision of German Government

FAMINE CONDITIONS

(United Press Service.)
(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, N.Y., June 21.— The fuel seriousness of the domestic situation within Austria-Hungary is revealed by the decision of the German government to send food into the Dual Monarchy, drawn from Germany's own scanty supplies.

The Austro-Hungarian Food Minister Pawl, has been in Berlin several days trying to persuade the Germans to relieve the famine conditions in the Hapsburg empire. He was unable to convince the Berlin government of the urgency of the situation until rioting began in Vienna and other Austrian towns. The disturbances apparently frightened the German authorities into fearing a revolution was on the verge of breaking out in Austria-Hungary. No expectation less serious than this can explain the decision of the Germans to part with even the smallest quantity of their own dwindling food reserves.

Will Follow Russia.

The sacrifice wrested from the Germans may stabilize for the time being conditions in Austria-Hingary, but the precedent established is destined to have increasingly serious consequences with the prolongation of the war. The population of Vienna has learned that they can improve the quantity of their rations by rioting. But Germany cannot continue indefinitely to placate the Viennese hunger demonstrations. The time must come when Germany will have to refuse to send another carload of food into the Dual Monarchy. When that situation arises, Austria-Hungary may follow the way of Russia.

Germany's own internal condition is menaced by granting the Hapsburg demand for food; but Germany is now being governed by a policy of immediate expediency. Whatever postpones a crash from day to day must be accepted by the Hohenzollerns as their only method of procedure. The Kaiser is compelled to take chances with the future as his only hope. This is what he is doing in the present instance.

Greater Sacrifices.

The Kaiser's people still hypnotized by the glamour of militarism, are willing to accept greater sacrifices than is Austria-Hungary. The necessary inference is that the Austro-Hungarians have begun to fall away from military worship. By attacking the food regulations of the militarists they have secured more food for themselves. This part of the lesson may suddenly come home to the undazed masses of Germany. Since Austria-Hungary has found relief by defying militarism's rule, Germans may well ask why they, themselves, shouldn't try the same system. When that time comes, democracy will have won the war.

Fighting Continues To Rage

PREMIER ORLANDO'S STATEMENT.

(Canadian Press.)

Rome, June 21. The efforts of the Austrians to widen the north-eastern salient on the Montello front towards the west have failed, Premier Orlando informed Parliament. The enemy's losses during the day were enormous, the premier added. The Italians took several hundred prisoners. American aviators destroyed Austrian bridges across the Piave river.

Towards the south, the Premier stated, the enemy again succeeded in crossing the Montebellan Susegana Railway at several points near Nieversa station but was promptly stopped. On the lower Piave the Italians gained more ground.

BASEBALL

The fans will be glad to know that there will be a ball game at the Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon, at 3.15 sharp, when DeLaval will meet the Riversides in an exhibition game. DeLaval have several new players, and they are confident they will trim the Riversides. This promises to be a big battle and a large number of fans will be on hand to witness this game.

BALTIMORE WILL BE SCENE OF BIG BOUT ON JULY 4

Battling Levinsky Won Every Round of Clash With Weinert Last Night.

KANKAS-SCHIFFER BOUT

Has Been Set Back Until Monday—Jake's Lip Cut.

The heavy-weight battle between Fred Fulton, of Rochester, Minn., and Jack Dempsey, of Salt Lake City, which was to have taken place at Danbury, Conn., will be staged at Oriole park, Baltimore, July 4. The state superintendent of police in Connecticut has declared the bout would be a violation of the law of that state. The bout will be for fifteen rounds. The articles will be signed in New York.

"Battling" Levinsky, of Bridgeport, Conn., outpointed Charlies Weinert of Newark, in every round of an eight round bout in Jersey City last night. Levinsky weighed 180 pounds and Weinert 185 pounds.

This was the first heavyweight battle held in New Jersey since the new law legalizing eight-round boxing contests in this state was passed.

Georges Rivet, champion professional welterweight of Canada, has reported at No. 2 depot, French-Canadian battalion, in Montreal, and has been appointed boxing instructor to the battalion.

RUSSIANS, LOYAL TO THE ALLIES, FIGHT "WITH DISDAIN FOR DEATH"

When the Russian troops in France, under Bolshevist influence, revolted simultaneously with the revolution in their own country, a residue remained loyal to the Allies. These were reorganized by the French as the Russian Legion and took part in resisting the German drive in April. The Russian Embassy here has now received from the French Government the following extract from a general order issued by the commander of the French division in which the 1st Battalion of the legion was brigaded:

The 1st Battalion of the Russian Legion on April 26, 1918, delivered an attack with spirited impetus and magnificent disdain to death; held the conquered position, notwithstanding the continuous counter-attacks and bombardment, to the highest admiration of all.

(Signed) GENERAL, ——
Commander of Division.

BIG DROP IN GERMAN BIRTHS

War Probably Caused Loss of 2,000,000 New-Born Babies.

LONDON, June 21.—The first three years of war reduced by over 2,000,000 the number of babies that would have been born in Germany had peace prevailed, says a report of the British Local Government Board. Some 40 per cent fewer German babies were born in 1916 than in 1913.

The infant death rate, which rose to an abnormal height for a time after the outbreak of war, appears to have gradually returned to the pre-war rate. The food difficulties have not led to an excessive number of babies dying, at least up till the end of 1916. In the towns where the food shortage was most acute the death rate tended to fall.

TRINITY CHURCH CHOIR EXCURSION

An Enjoyable Day Was Spent Down the River.

Yesterday, the Choir of Trinity Church had their annual picnic. This year an excursion was made down the river on the steamer "Rainbow," which was chartered for the purpose. The boat left at 9 a.m. and stopped at Harwood for the noon meal. The sports were held at the Indian Village of Hiawatha, where the Indians were amused by the antics of the young people. The boat then sailed to Gore's Landing for supper, after which they all returned home, arriving in the city about 10 p.m. Altogether there were sixty on the excursion, and everyone expressed himself as being highly pleased with the day's outing.

MRS VILLERS-STEWART ACCUSED OF BIGAMY

Woman Who Sprung Sensation at Pemberton—Billing Trial.

LONDON, June 21—Mrs. Villers-Stewart, one of the chief witnesses at the trial of Noel Pemberton-Billing for having libeled Miss Maud Allen, was charged in the Marylebone police court today with bigamy. It is alleged that she married Stewart, her present husband, who is an army officer, while her first husband, Percival Bray, formerly a motorbus driver, was still alive.

Mrs. Stewart caused a sensation at the Pemberton-Billing trial by testifying that Neil Primrose who was killed while with the British forces in Palestine, had shown her the German "black book," which was said to have contained the names of 47,000 persons in England, including those of ex-Premier and Mrs. Asquith and Viscount Haldane.

She was remanded for one week.

Believes It Has Saved Her Life

Superintendent's Wife Gains Thirty-one Pounds By Taking Tanlac

The following statement, made recently by Mrs. Annie Pasco, 57 Spadina avenue, Ottawa, is not only interesting, but altogether remarkable.

"I have not only gained thirty-one pounds, by taking Tanlac, but I firmly believe it has saved my life, and all who know of my dreadful condition are astonished at my wonderful recovery."

Mrs. Pasco's husband is superintendent of the J. R. Booth Paper Pulp Mill.

I had been bothered with stomach trouble off and on for about three years," she continued, "but it was only during the past year," she continued "that my condition became so serious. I first noticed my appetite failing; everything seemed to taste the same to me, and I had no relish for food of any kind. Then I began to suffer from gas, sour stomach and indigestion after meals. I had terrible headaches and felt weak and sluggish all the time. No one will ever know how I suffered, because I cannot describe it. None of my friends or neighbors believed I would live three months.

"I had fallen off from one hundred and seventy pounds to one hundred and thirty-two, and got so weak I couldn't walk from the kitchen to the front door without holding on to something. I had to spend over half of my time in bed, and was so nervous I was afraid to be left alone, and I could hardly sleep a wink at night. I took so much medicine without getting relief I became discouraged and out of heart.

"Finally I decided to try Tanlac, as I had seen it recommended so highly, and before I finished the first bottle I noticed a decided change in my feelings. My appetite soon got better, the nervousness and indigestion began to disappear and I could feel my strength returning. Then I began to regain my lost weight, and now I weigh one hundred and sixty-three pounds—have actually gained thirty-one pounds, and haven't had a touch of indigestion or stomach trouble in six months. My appetite is fine, I can eat just anything I want without the slightest discomfort afterwards, and my nervousness is gone entirely. I am feeling stronger and better than I have in years, and am doing all my housework. I think it nothing but right that I should tell others about this wonderful medicine

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by: W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.; in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

HEN LAID 301 EGGS IN YEAR.

Record Made at Vineland, N. J., Where Contest Was Conducted.

TRENTON, N. J.—Five thousand chickens of known ancestry was the result of this spring's hatching in the Vineland international egg-laying and breeding contest, it was announced by the poultry department of the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station. The object of the contest was for the study of various breeding problems, the relation of individual characteristics to production, and the inheritance of laying ability. All of the 5,000 chickens have been marked and banded, and in this way it will be possible to compare their production with that of their ancestry.

The department states that the yearling hens at Vineland this year have exceeded in production all other contests throughout the country. The department points out that a White Plymouth Rock hen, owned by the Holliston Hill Poultry Farm of Holliston, Mass., laid 301 eggs at Vineland last year, and that this was a remarkable record.

"Do Not Fear Those Vultures at Home," Says One-Time Sheriff Cabling To Accused Friends in Arizona

BISBEE, Ariz., June 21.—Severely arraigning the Industrial Workers of the World and their sympathizers and announcing his intention to "protect his friends," Harry Wheeler, formerly Sheriff of Cochise county, now a captain in the United States Army, has cabled from France accepting full responsibility for the deportation of I.W.W. members from Bisbee last year.

Twenty-one prominent men of Bisbee, including Captain Wheeler, recently were indicted on charges growing out of the deportations. The cablegram follows:

"I wish my friends to know that I am anxious to protect them by again assuming all responsibility for the deportations. Would do the same thing over again under the same circumstances. No traitors or I.W.W. sympathizers over here, only American soldiers. My country needs me here, but when I can be spared, if still alive, you will find me ready to go home and stand with my friends and fellow Americans to undergo any tribulation the politicians, I.W.W. sympathizers and other traitors can inflict. Eagles in France feel only contempt for these vultures at home, but do not fear them."

LABOUR SHORTAGE SERIOUS.

Trinity Church Choir Picnic

(CONTRIBUTED)

On Thursday, June 20th the above choir held their annual picnic, when members and friends, numbering 60, paid a visit to Rice Lake, per steamer "Rainbow," arriving at Harwood by noon, where luncheon was served, to which everyone did ample justice, the morning trip being responsible for the sharpening of appetites as any casual observer could not fail to notice. About 2 o'clock farewell was said to Harwood and all embarked on board for Hiawatha, at which place sports and baseball were the features of the afternoon, a fine programme having been prepared by the sports committee. The first event was a tug-of-war, ladies vs. gentlemen, in which needless to say, the ladies outnumbering the gentlemen three to one, came out victorious, much to the delight of the gentler sex.

The other events which followed consisted of races of various kinds, open to all who wished to enter, the contestants being delayed in the race by obstacles which had to be overcome and which proved a source of much merriment.

The prizes having been distributed to the successful competitors and a liberal supply of ice cream having been freely distributed to all, the final event was then entered upon, viz., a baseball match, in which the ladies proved themselves to be all-round experts. The very best thanks of the side which claimed to have won by one run are due to the lady referee for her decision, the losing side most cheerfully conceding them the honour to allay any downheartedness and to stay the possible shedding of copious tears.

Once more embarking at 5.50 p.m., the lake was again crossed, the port this time being Gore's Landing, where supper was served, which was attacked with great gusto after the strenuous exertions of the afternoon.

One little event which is worthy of record and which was quite an impromptu item in the day's programme affording quite a diversion, took place just prior to the preparation for supper, when a miniature circus performance well worthy of a larger audience, was given free of charge by a very frisky steed who being desirous of showing his accomplishments to such an (up)-appreciative audience, commenced prancing around in a very graceful and elegant style, rearing itself up to full height on its hind supports, much to the consternation and terror of the audience, who seeing plenty of room was required for the performance, fled in all directions, some preferring balcony seats in the trees, others the tops of tables. One lady in particular (name strictly censored) in endeavouring to place a fence between herself and the fiery steed, half accomplished her task of clambouring over, when something went wrong and she could neither get backward or forward until eventually released from her perilous position.

The quadruped, thinking payment of some sort should be forthcoming, then tried to sample some of the baskets but failed in the attempt. The owner of the steed arriving on the scene and bowing to the "exalted" audience withdrew with the "artist" who had been the centre of attraction, if not of admiration for the space of a few minutes. Sighs of relief accompanied the exodus as the "balcony" seat holders descended from their uncomfortable positions.

The steed's performance was followed by supper, during which time many anxious glances were cast in the direction whence the performer and owner had gone.

At 7.30 p.m. a start was made for home, the George street wharf being reached at 10.30 p.m., the day having passed off without a single mishap.

Even "Father Neptune" put on his best behaviour, so much so that the fishes in the lake were deprived of that which they are accustomed to receive when the waves are tossing the vessel.

The voyage out and home was much enlivened by the music of a New Edison phonograph, very kindly lent for the occasion by the J. M. Greene Music Co., Charlotte street, to which the voices of the picnickers blended harmoniously.

The ideal weather conditions along with the courtesy of the captain and crew, combined to make the day an ideal and memorable one in every respect.—Com.

GRAIN MARKET

There was a little better demand for cash oats at Winnipeg, which gave an up turn to the market, both cash and options being strong and higher. July oats closed 7-8c higher and October oats 1 7-8c higher. The corn market slightly active, closing 3-4c over Thursday for July corn.

CATTLE MARKET

A sudden drop of a dollar per cwt. in the price of butcher cattle was the feature of the market this week. Heavy receipts of grass cattle and the fact that the Buffalo market was a dollar lower on this class of cattle decided the packers here that prices could not possibly hold at the extreme high point of the previous week. They therefore proceeded at once in an effort to knock a dollar off in their bids for all grass butcher steers and heifers and half-fat grass cows. The move promptly succeeded, and the market on Monday last was a dollar lower. The decline however did not apply to the small offering of heavy, stable fed choice steers for which there was a good demand and some competition. J. B. Shields' fine load of steers, in fact, established the high record price for a straight load at $17.50. Several other choice lots of dry-feds sold around $16 to $16.75. These were the exceptions to the general market, and the "dollar off" applied to practically all the grass fed butcher cattle throughout the week. In the case of the half-fat common grass cows the decline was further accentuated during the week and it was difficult to cash these in except at very sharp cuts of from $1.50 to $2. Too many of these half-fat cows are being marketed and if they continue coming in at the present rate still further declines may be looked for.

Towards the end of the week there was a little better demand for the choice heifers and steers with prices showing a tendency to stiffen a little.

The stocker trade is comparatively quiet.

Sheep have suddenly slumped to $3 to $4 below former prices. Lambs held steady to firm for choice quality.

The hog market continued steady throughout the week at $18. Packers however complain that too large a percentage of heavy hogs are being sent in, that is hogs weighing over 225 pounds and up to 250 and 300 pounds. The ideal weight for the export trade at the present time is from 180 to 210 pounds. A discount of a dollar per cwt. off for the heavy hogs is talked off as a probability.

OTTAWA—That a higher standard in the manufacture of Canadian cheese has been attained during recent years is indicated in an analysis made by A. McGill, Chief Dominion Analyst, and reported to the Inland Revenue Department. Of 166 samples analyzed, only six were found to contain less than forty-five per cent. milk fat, the minimum percentage allowed in the manufacture of good cheese.

Two samples were found to contain over sixty per cent. fat, 27 from 55 to 60 per cent., 91 from 50 to 55 per cent., 39 from 45 to 50 per cent., and six contained less than 45 per cent.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Drink Lots of Water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts, which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

IT'S EXPERIENCE THAT COUNTS

IT'S EXPERIENCE THAT COUNTS.

CHAPTER XCIX.

When Mrs. Collins said she "was as much as seven years older than I," so getting the last word — as she perhaps thought, I replied:

I was not referring to age, Mrs. Collins. I know that you and Mr. Howard are about the same age, and I should not think of calling him 'old'; I meant that you had had infinitely more experience than I,—and it is experience, not age, that counts, so I have been told. It, at least, makes people blase — destroys their enthusiasms."

"You are very wise," she did not attempt to hide the sneer. I hoped George would notice and come to the rescue, but he evidently had not observed. "I shall see you again before you leave, George," she turned to him, "and in any event, I shall be close on your heels at Bar Harbour."

I said good afternoon to her at the door, Celeste, however, was outside, and accompanied her to the lift, and rang for her.

I expected George would say something about our verbal tilt, but he never mentioned it. Mrs. Sexton came in, that afternoon, a short time after Mrs. Collins had left. After she had talked to George a few minutes, I took her into my bedroom, and had a heart-to-heart talk with her. I told her how discouraged I was — how I seemed so unwise, so unlearned, in the ways of society. Then I told her of Mrs. Collins' call, and of all that was said.

Mrs. Sexton Sympathizes and Gives Advice.

She laughed when I told her of my remark about age, and that I had meant experience.

"I imagine you scored one, there! Julia Collins flatters herself because of her vivacity, and brags that she has lost none of her enthusiasms."

"But I don't want her around! I hate her calling my husband 'George' before people. I hate it just as much, when we are alone!" I declared with vehemence.

"It is bad form, dear Mrs. Howard, and perhaps she knows it annoys you and does it purposely. She knows better, you may be sure. But because she and others do those things, do not allow yourself to fall into the same error."

I knew very well she was thinking of Merton Gray, so I said:

"I have seen no one since our accident. Mr. Gray called up to ask about it, as have many others, but Mrs. Colins was the first caller we have received.

"You had a very close call, I hear."

"Very! But George had a still closer one," I shuddered.

"I was told that, when he thought you were dead, he was absolutely stricken. You have thought him undemonstrative at times — have perhaps doubted his love. But times like this bring the truth to the surface. One does not pretend, when one gets so near the crossing."

We talked for some time longer. I told her how I hated her at first—how I resented her presence.

"I knew it, all the time — exactly how you felt," she replied. "I knew also that the time would come when you would change. I saw that in you which would respond to my efforts, or I should not have persisted."

Had she also discovered something in me that would yield to teaching? Was it the same something which had made George want to marry me, to make me over to his ideas of what a wife should be?

"I am glad you did! I don't know what I should have done without you. Probably George would have divorced me, long ago. You remember my dinner—the one Merton Gray made the place cards for? It was the way you helped me, then, that made me like you. Up to that time, I almost hated you. I felt so small — so like a naughty child that was in disgrace. Now I think I shall care for you more than anyone in More-lands. You have helped me so much."

"I am very glad to hear you say that, my dear." She laid her delicate, aristocratic hand over mine. "But you are, can be, very lovable. I wonder, sometimes, if you know how lovable? It hurts me, and probably hurts your husband much more, when you are not so. Do not allow yourself to become hard and cold, while you are learning to have the poise and social training necessary to fill your position. You will lose more, infinitely more, than you will gain, if you do."

We had tea and muffins served in with George. He pretended to be jealous because we had "talked behind his back."

"We said nothing against you," I told him.

"But my ears burned. You were talking about me."

"Yes — saying very nice things," Mrs. Sexton interposed."

"Thank you!" he said gravely. "I want Helen to think nice things of me always."

WESTWOOD SOLDIER RETURNS HOME

Capt. H. S. Neilson, of Westwood, arrived home a few days ago from France, having been returned to Canada to recuperate after an attack of trench fever. Capt. Neilson went overseas nearly two years ago, and was engaged in instructional work in England up until last summer, when he resigned his commission in order to go to France. A public reception is being arranged to be held at Westwood some evening next week. The Norwood band has been invited for the occasion and expects to be on hand—Norwood Register.

You May Find It In Stocking

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns, or corns between the toes just loosen in their sockets and fall off the next day if you will apply directly upon the corn a few drops of a drug called freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

You merely put a drop or two of this freezone on the tender, touchy corn to-day and instantly the corn stops hurting, then to-morrow sometime you may find the old torturous pest somewhere in your stocking, having fallen off entirely without a particle of soreness, pain or irritation. The skin surrounding and beneath the former corn will be as healthy, pink and smooth as the palm of your hand.

A quarter ounce of freezone is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn, and callus and any druggist will charge but a few cents for it. It is a compound made from ether.

The Poor Beneficiary.

Some nations were fighting fiercely.

"Why are you fighting so?" inquired the bystanders, moved at length to curiosity.

"To save civilization," replied the nations severally.

Here a draggled figure rose from the mire under the feet of the combatants and limped lamely away.

Wasted Effort.

Peter Thompson went to visit his son in Montreal. It was his first visit to the city, and the young man showed him all the sights, concluding with an ascent of Mount Royal. In a burst of enthusiasm young Thompson said:

"See, father, isn't it wonderful down there?"

"Well," said his father, "if it's so wonderful down there what did you drag me up here for?"—Everybody's.

SLUGGISH LIVER CAUSES LOTS OF TROUBLE

When the liver becomes sluggish it is an indication that the bowels are not working properly, and if they do not move regularly many complications are liable to set in.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are a specific for all disease or disorders arising from a slow, sluggish, lazy or torpid liver, and they have been universally used throughout Canada for over 20 years with the greatest success.

Mrs. W. A. Harrison, 7 Poplar Grove, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I take pleasure in writing you concerning the great good I have received by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills for a sluggish liver. When my liver got bad I would have severe headaches, but after using a couple of vials of your pills, I have not been bothered any more."

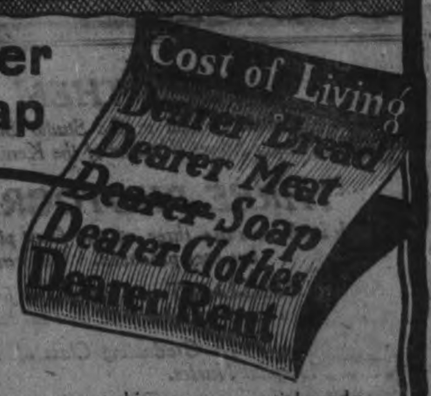
COMFORT SOAP

the new bigger bar makes soap cheaper



The bigger Comfort Soap bar for the same money is pretty good news in these days of high prices isn't it? What does it mean? Simply that our tremendous buying power in the soap-materials market can give you infinitely better value in Soap than it can in premiums.

Owing to the war hundreds of factories are now making more essential goods than premiums, and the premiums still offered us are too far under Comfort standards of quality, and are certainly too high in price, to be good value for you.

So we will discontinue premiums until after the War, anyhow.

All premium-bearing Comfort Soap wrappers and coupons now out will still be redeemed from our present ample Premium stock.

No premiums—but every fraction of every cent you pay is returned to you in splendid Comfort Soap—the best way in war time.

LONG BASEBALL GAMES.

One That Ran For Thirty Innings With a 4 to 1 Score.

The longest major league game was played on Sept. 1, 1906, between the Boston and Philadelphia American league clubs in Boston, when the Athletics won by a score of 4 to 1 in twenty-four innings. Jack Coombs, then a recruit from Colby college, and "Jumbo" Harris, a young pitcher from the New England league, were the respective boxmen used by the Philadelphia and Boston teams. The game lasted four hours and forty-seven minutes.

The previous longest games in the National league were played at Cincinnati on June 30, 1892, and at Philadelphia on Aug. 24, 1905. Both ran twenty innings. The game at Cincinnati was between the Reds and Cubs and resulted in a tie score of 7 to 7. At Philadelphia the Cubs defeated the Quakers by a score of 2 to 1.

On May 31, 1909, the longest professional game on record was played between the Bloomington and Decatur teams of the Illinois-Iowa-Indiana league, Decatur winning in the twenty-sixth inning by a score of 2 to 1. Fargo and Grand Forks engaged in a contest which lasted twenty-five innings at Devils Lake, N. D., in 1895. Later Hartford and New Haven, in the Eastern association, played twenty-three innings, the former winning 2 to 1. Geist, for the winning team, and Jansen, for New Haven, pitched the entire contest.

Amateurs are credited with playing the longest game, the East End All-Stars and the Brooklyn Athletic club teams of Cleveland contesting for thirty innings on July 4, 1907, the latter winning 4 to 1.—Ed A. Goewey in Leslie's.

THE WORLD'S GREAT BANKS.

Only Sixty-one Have Deposits Over a Hundred Million Dollars.

For years the mere name of the Bank of England has been a synonym for financial strength and greatness. In a list of the great banks of the world the Bank of England is sixth. There are three banks in England with a greater line of deposits. The greater banks are London City and Midland, Lloyd's bank and London County and Westminster. London City and Lloyd's each has deposits above $500,000,000. The London County has deposits of $440,000,000. The great Bank of England has a little more than $350,000,000.

The leading bank of the world, from the standpoint of deposits, is the Imperial Bank of Russia, with deposits and current accounts aggregating $630,000,000, a sum big enough to stagger the mind.

The National Bank of Argentine and the National City bank of New York are sixteen and seventeen in rank, with deposits close to $230,000,000 each. The Bank of Spain is greater than the Bank of France, much greater in deposits. But Spain cuts no figure in the finances of the world. That is hard to explain. In this world list there are only sixty-one banks mentioned with deposits in excess of $100,000,000. In this list the United States has eight banks, a good showing, as none of them depends on the deposits of the United States to help it out. — Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune.

No Publicity.

Salute of the Sword.

The sword salute of military officers has two meanings. The first position, with the hilt opposite the hips, is a survival of the crusader's action of kissing the cross hilt of his sword in token of faith, and the lowering of the point is a token of friendship, implying that it is not necessary to be on guard.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Slight Mistake

By CORA FARLEY WHITTIER

Mr. Mark Seaton, driving the most classy automobile in Hopeton, passed the pretty home of Mrs. Eunice Blair, made a courteous movement towards his cap and bowed politely. Mrs. Blair fluttered, smiled and returned the greeting.

He was a well-preserved bachelor of thirty and the richest man in town. She was his junior by some five years. She had married a man of forty when only twenty-one, and when he died he left on her hands his daughter, Valerie, by a former wife, almost as old as his wife. Mr. Blair had left both comfortably provided for. They had settled down at Hopeton. Valerie to become the frivolous flirtatious belle of the village, the widow allowing her stepdaughter the freedom and independence which she should have been prudent enough to use rationally.

Eunice had never loved Gregory Blair. She had told him so frankly when she married him, but she respected him and was a dutiful helpmeet. When Mark Seaton began to call at the Blair home there abruptly came to her a conviction that she could be very happy with such a man.

"I have chosen my fate," said Valerie one day to her closest girl friend "so I will whisper a name and you can guess—Mark Seaton."

Valerie was deft and attractive in the way she treated her admirers. She was selfish, too, and capable of leading on an adorer in a fascinating way that had lured many a young man to disappointment.

Mark Seaton was a shy, simple-minded man, not much used to the ways of womankind, and apparently rather flattered at the attention Valerie bestowed upon him.

"I just met Mr. Seaton," spoke Valerie, appearing from the street and joining her mother on the porch.

"Yes, he just passed the house," observed Mrs. Blair.

"He stopped his machine and fairly insisted that I should take a drive across country, but I have that troublesome party dress to make."

Valerie swept into the house with her usual empressike air. Mrs. Blair drew back in her chair and a shadow crossed her fair brow. Then she sighed and then she went to her own room, closed the door and as she sat down musingly by the window a tear or two fell from her clear, kindly eyes.

"He is too good a man for Valerie," she said to herself. "If only the girl would understand and appreciate him! If I thought she would, it would not seem so hard to me. It is clear that Valerie has made some impression upon him, for he seems glad to seize upon any excuse to join her on the street and to come here. Ah me!"

A little half sob ended the mystifying soliloquy and then Mrs. Blair shook off the sadness that was beginning to oppress her, and went about her household duties with her usual briskness.

"Mr. Seaton made a queer suggestion to me," remarked Valerie to her stepmother a day or two later.

"What was that?" inquired Mrs. Blair.

"He asked me how you felt towards him. Don't you see, he is probably getting ready to pop the question and wonders if you might object."

"I am in harmony with anything that conduces to your happiness," assured the widow.

That same evening Valerie broke forth in high dudgeon.

"I'll teach him a lesson!" she told her mother vindictively. "Here it is only three days from the dance at Brampton and he has never even referred to it. He just told me he was going to call this evening. Well, he won't find me here. A little judicious discipline will give him some training."

"Don't trifle with the honest affections of a good man, Valerie," said Mrs. Blair.

"A little indifference will make him all the more anxious to win me," retorted Valerie. "I'll teach him a lesson, and, mark me, before another day is over he will be around with an invitation to the dance, for I hinted that I wished to go."

A true prophet was Valerie. She had not been gone ten minutes that evening when Mr. Seaton appeared. To the surprise of Mrs. Blair he did not manifest the least disappointment when he learned that Valerie was not at home. The widow set about entertaining him as best she might. Finally his constrained manner changed, as if he was about to free his mind of a burden.

"Mrs. Blair," he said, "I wonder if I may hope for company to the dance Saturday evening."

"I am sure Valerie would be delighted to go," she began, when he interrupted her.

"Oh, I was not thinking of her," he said quickly.

"Who, then?"

"Yourself, Mrs. Blair," continued Mr. Seaton to his astonished auditor. "I must speak out. I have sought every excuse possible to be in your company, but wondered if you cared for me. You must have noticed. Dear lady, may I hope that you will accept my addresses?"

Spoken like a man, and answered as a woman in love only can, with trepidation, but a beaming face told that a great happiness had come to Eunice Blair.

FREE TO BOYS AND GIRLS

Can You Solve This Great War Puzzle?

Four Things That Will Win The War

WHAT ARE THEY?

THE 16 Circles above can be made to spell out the names of the four chief things that are going to win the war. Our bright loyal Canadian boys and girls can help provide at least one of these things. Every boy and girl should know all of them. Can you tell what words the four magic circles represent?

How to solve it.—Each circle represents a letter of the word called for. The number of dots in the circle represents the position of that letter in the alphabet. For instance: "A" would be represented by a circle with one dot because it is the first letter of the alphabet. "B" would be represented by a circle with two dots because it is the second letter. "C" would be represented by three dots, "D" by four dots and so on. You must correctly count the dots in each circle, figure out the letter represented by its position in the alphabet and when you have them all figured out put them into proper rotation to spell the name wanted. It's not an easy puzzle but if you can solve it correctly you may win this lovely shetland pony or one of the grand Cash prizes above.

LEGEND OF THE TEAPOT.

The Chinese claim to be the first users of tea as a drink, and how it originated is told in a pretty little legend that dates from 2,000 years before the coming of Christ.

A daughter of a then reigning sovereign fell in love with a young nobleman whose humble birth excluded him from marrying her. They managed to exchange glances, and he occasionally gathered a few blossoms and had them conveyed to her.

One day in the palace garden the sweethearts met, and the young man endeavored to give her a few flowers, but so keen was the watchfulness of her attendants that all she could grasp was a little twig with green leaves.

On reaching her room she put the twig in water, and toward evening she drank the water in which the twig had been kept. So agreeable was the taste that she even ate the leaves and stalks. Every day afterward she had bunches of the tea tree brought to her, which she treated in the same way.

Imitation being the sincerest form of flattery, the ladies of the court tried the experiment and with such pleasing results that the custom spread throughout the kingdom—and the great Chinese tea industry became one of the greatest businesses in the world.—London Tit-Bits.

PAINT THE SCREW HOLES.

Then You Can Use Them Over and Over Again Without Trouble.

Many persons experience considerable difficulty in getting screws to hold in screen doors and other movable conveniences which are put up and taken down frequently and which are held in place by screws. The holes occupied by the screws become worn, and the screws are often quite loose, causing doors to sag and be otherwise out of proper order.

Bits of paper, strings and small pieces of wood are used to partially fill up the holes so as to cause the screws to be tight, but these work out and cause great annoyance, and a better method is greatly desired.

A coat of paint on the inside of the screw holes is the most satisfactory remedy for such an annoyance.

When screws are removed paint the holes with a small pencil brush or a bit of cloth twisted and dipped in the paint. When the paint fills the crevices made by the threads on the screw and thoroughly dries the screw will fit tightly the next time it is thrust into the cavity. The painting should be done each time the screws are removed, and it will protect the wood as well as make the holes ready for the readjustment of the door or other object which has to be changed quite often.—Philadelphia North American.

SALARIES OF SINGERS.

Present Day Stars Would Laugh at These Old Time Payments.

In the good old days of 200 years ago or so singers and actors gave the world their greatest efforts for what was undoubtedly considered excellent remuneration, but what in these enlightened times of high priced voices and talents would seem to be pitifully small. And who shall say the performers of the past were not fully as capable as the pampered darlings of the present?

The highest salary paid went to Chasse, who received 3,000 livres, or $600, a year as her fixed salary, 1,000 livres extra for perquisites, 1,200 livres for Easter and 200 for bread, wine and boots, in those days an extraordinary allowance.

Mlle. Ancier, the first soprano of her day, was a close second, with 4,800 francs, or nearly $1,000, a year. Today a prima donna receives more than that for a single evening. In a year "La Camargo," the most beautiful woman of her day, received in francs what many of the lesser singers of today receive in a week in dollars—2,700 francs.

Louis XIV. had the reputation of being a most generous manager and dramatic agent, since he granted 200 livres (about $40) for the first ten performances and about 100 livres for the following. The deviser of the ballet received 120 livres for the first six performances and sixty for later ones. —Argonaut.

RING OF THE FISHERMAN.

The ring of the fisherman used by the pope exclusively to seal documents of the holy see shows an engraved figure of St. Peter, the first bishop of Rome, standing in a boat and flinging with two hands a net into the sea.

In 1809, when the French occupied the city of Rome, Pius VII., then pope, was ordered by General Radet to surrender the fisherman's ring. The pontiff refused. He feared that by means of the sanction of the ring the French government would be enabled to issue dangerous documents.

When finally forced to surrender it the pope altered the engraving or stamp with the view of making it useless to his enemies. This seal thus defaced was forwarded to Paris by the French general in command at Rome. Pius VII. in the absence of the fisherman's ring, made use of an iron seal engraved with the figures of Sts. Peter and Paul and inscribed with the words, "Pro Annulo Piscatoris" (in lieu of the fisherman's ring).

The fisherman's ring was kept in Paris until Napoleon I. was overthrown, when it was returned to the sovereign pontiff. The ring is used only to seal briefs. The bulls, more important documents, are stamped with the leaden seal of the ancient parchments. —Indianapolis News.

NOISES HIGH UP IN THE AIR.

Where an Echo Is Louder Than the Sound That Produced It.

To hear the echo of a sound to be louder than the sound that caused it seems an impossibility, but under certain conditions this can happen, and the echo is sometimes many times greater in sound volume than the original noise that produced it.

This happens away up in the air. For instance, if an aviator is, say, 1,000 or 2,000 feet above ground and some one on the ground fires a revolver there is a brief time when nothing is heard. The aviator can see the smoke from the muzzle of the revolver, then wait a little, then the sound comes to him, not like the sharp report of a revolver, but more like a quick peal of thunder, loud and sharp and really several times greater in sound volume than the actual report of the revolver.

The cause of this is that the air below is much more dense, while up above it is lighter, and there are no hills and trees and buildings to help muffle the sound, so it comes up on sound waves with increasing noise. Having no solid background around and about the aviator, the rebound of the sound waves is greater up there than on the ground.

It is said a man in a balloon may lower an explosive on a cord several hundred feet below his basket and set it off with an electric wire and battery. There is a sharp little "crack" like the report of a flobert rifle; then comes the most terrifying noise, like a great burst of thunder, the loudest ever heard. The actual explosion did not make anywhere near this amount of noise, but the air being much more dense below causes the line of least resistance to be straight up, and so the sound waves expand mightily in an upward direction, increasing the sound.—Boston Herald.

COST OF A THUNDERBOLT.

What It Would Take In Kilowatts and Cash to Make One.

A Belgian engineer has been making a novel calculation, which he publishes in the Bulletin de la Societe Belge d'Astronomie. It is nothing less than the value of a thunderbolt in kilowatts and in cash!

He took as the basis of his calculation the price that the electric plants of great European cities charge their customers for current.

Measurement of the magnetism of certain rocks containing iron ore, he says, proves that the electric current which magnetized them must have had a strength of at least 6,000 amperes. In reality the strength of the current must have been much greater, since the rocks were at a considerable distance from the spot at which the thunderbolt fell. However, one must be conservative in treating of such matters, and the modest figure of 27,800 kilowatts may be taken as fairly correct.

The lowest price at which current can be supplied industrially when obtained under the most favorable conditions—that is to say, by hydraulic power—is one-fifth of a cent per kilowatt. So the minimum value of a thunderbolt would be $55.60.

But the author notes that in Brussels, where he lives, the price of electricity is 10 cents a kilowatt. This is the price of current for ordinary household use in New York. At this figure a thunderbolt would come to $2,980. As the price of electricity varies very widely in different cities, according to the conditions under which it is produced, every one can calculate for himself what it would cost to produce a thunderbolt in the city in which he lives.—New York World.

GEOGRAPHICAL PUZZLES.

Where Were Ultima Thule and the Lost Atlantis Located?

A most puzzling geographic mystery has come down from ancient times. This is the old question as to the identity of Ultima Thule. It was about 400 B. C. that Pytheas, a citizen of Massilia, sailed on his famous voyage. He discovered Albion and then continued farther north until he reached a spot which he named Ultima Thule. What this country was has never been determined. It may have been Shetland or Norway or Iceland.

Another ancient puzzle is that of Atlantis. It is commonly believed nowadays that this vanished continent did once actually lie beyond the pillars of Hercules, and there are theories unending concerning it. Some regard the Canary islands as fragmentary remains of it, others think that the supposedly lost land was really America; but, in considering these speculations, it is well to bear in mind the fact that the first mention of the country was made by Plato, and many scholars are sure that the philosopher merely indulged in an imaginative flight. The solitary evidence that Atlantis ever existed is his reference to it.—Chicago Herald.

Origin of Humbug.

It is not generally known that the word "humbug," long so much in vogue, is of Scottish origin. There was in olden time a race called Bogue or Boag of that ilk in Berwickshire. A daughter of the family married a son of Hume, of Hume. In process of time, by default of male issue, the Bogue estate devolved on one Geordie Hume, who was called popularly "Hume of the Bogue,' or, rather, "Hum o' the Bug."

"He was inclined to the marvelous and had a vast inclination to exalt himself, his wife, family, brother and all his ancestors on both sides. His tales, however, did not pass current, and at last, when any one made an extraordinary statement in the Nearns, the hearer would shrug up his shoulders and style it just "a hum o' the bug." This was shortened into humbug, and the word soon spread over the whole kingdom.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Bravery of the Belgians.

When Caesar in his "Commentaries" pronounced the Belgae the bravest of all the Gauls he was merely recording the reputation that they had earned on many a battlefield and which they maintained even in defeat. Caesar overwhelmed more than a quarter of a million of them in the year 57 B. C. on the banks of the Aisne. After the crushing defeat on the Aisne several tribes, headed by the Nervii, made a last stand on the Sambre, taking the offensive against the Roman legions and very nearly defeating them by the intensity of their onslaught. But the training and discipline of Rome saved Caesar, and the final result of the heroic resistance of the Nervii was their practical annihilation. Their peace emissaries said, "Of 600 senators we have lost all but three; of 60,000 fighting men but 500 remain." It is from this stock that the Belgians of today are descended.—F. J. Splitstone in Leslie's.

150,000 WORKERS ARE EMPLOYED.

SMALL ARMY ENGAGED IN WORK OF REGISTERING THE RESIDENTS OF CANADA.

Twenty-five thousand booths, scattered throughout the country, and manned by one hundred and fifty thousand workers, will be open from 7 a.m. until 10 p.m. on Saturday, 22nd June, for the purpose of registering the man and woman power of the Dominion. It is estimated that there are 5,000,000 persons in Canada who will come within the provisions of the legislation. If these 5,000,000 were divided evenly among the 25,000 booths, each booth would be required to take care of 200. And if the 150,000 workers were divided evenly among the booths there would be six in each. And each worker registering his or her share of the booth's allotment, on the basis of six minutes to each visitor, would be required to work steadily for nearly five hours in order to complete the job. It is impossible to provide for such an even distribution of booths, workers and registrants. Fewer than two hundred will visit the great majority of booths and some booths will be visited by considerably more than two hundred. Moreover, many people will take up more than six minutes in registering; eight, ten or even twelve minutes will sometimes be required to get all the questions answered satisfactorily. It is obvious, therefore, if everyone waited for the last day there would be endless confusion. In many places provision has been made for the booths to open on Monday, June 17th. You would be well advised to ascertain if such provision has been made in your district, and if so, to register at your earliest convenience.

Heavy Fighting Continues On The Italian Front

SITUATION ON WESTERN FRONT IS UNCHANGED

Branch Of The Navy League Will Be Formed In Peterboro'

Enthusiastic Meeting Was Held Last Evening in the Council Chamber —Miss Constance Boulton Was the Speaker of the Evening.

OFFICERS ELECTED

The City and County of Peterborough Branch of the Navy League, was formed last night at the Council Chamber following a stirring address by Miss Constance Boulton, who brought for the first time to most of her auditors the need patriotically, economically and philanthropically, to support the Merchant Marine. The officers appointed were:

President—Judge Huycke.

Vice-President—Mrs. Arthur Stevenson.

Secretary—Mr. W. R. Morris.

Treasurer—Mr. John Corkery, Sr.

Honorary Patrons—Mayor Duncan and Warden Anderson.

The executive will be chosen by the officers. This will include automatically the Regent of the senior Chapter I.O.D.E., and two members of each chapter.

Opened By Mayor.

The meeting was opened by His Worship Mayor Duncan, who expressed his sincere sympathy with the work of the Navy League, and introduced the speaker, Miss Boulton. Mr. Curtis acted as secretary for the meeting.

Not Discouraged.

Miss Boulton said that although, due to the weather, the meeting was small, still she was not discouraged, as from such a neuclus of representative citizens many strong branch leagues have been formed.

The league was formed in England fifty years ago, and one by one the colonies have followed up in this work until Canada finally entered the field.

Greatest Asset.

Ever since the days of Queen Elizabeth the greatest asset to the life of the Empire has been the navy, and it was the merchant marine which stepped in to save England at the time of the Armada. In the present crisis the merchant marine has again been drawn into the fore. The navy has drawn 3,800 vessels from the merchant marine, and 34,000 men from it are, by virtue of their experience, placed in such important duties as mine sweepers and in the submarines.

Manning the Ships.

The Government of Canada is starting out shipbuilding, but as yet nothing has been done towards manning the ships. It is not likely that men will leave their attractive positions or shore to enter a poorly paid life upon the seas unless there is some backing for them. At present the sailor is the porest paid man, he works under the most scandalous conditions, and his dependents are left unprovided for in case of his death. Under these conditions how can we expect the personnel of the navy to be kept up? The way must be bought and educated into public opinion. A clause in the Government statutes forbids its interfering with what is considered a private industry, and this cannot be altered until the Government finds through the Navy League that Canada is behind it in wanting the conditions changed.

Some Figures.

Miss Boulton quoted some convincing figures of the prosperity of Canada since the war, the increase in munitions is one billion dollars. Manufactures other than munitions two hundred and sixteen millions, increase in farm produce one and a quarter billion, in wheat, oats, potatoes, butter and cheese one billion, in wages eighty-six millions, and deposits in banks seven million. Every class has felt the increasing prosperity of Canada, and is richer than when the war began, and the greatest asset in this prosperity has been the export trade which we wouldn't have had but for the merchant marine. If we don't wish to cease to export we must build up the merchant marine.

Th sailor has proved he has a most amazing capacity for heroism, and never has a ship been held up one hour by the timerity of a seaman.

Committee Investigated Rumour That Death Rate Among Male Children at Nicholls Hospital Was Abnormal

A report, either based on ignorance, or malignant design, having become general that the death-rate among male children at the Nicholls Hospital had reached abnormal proportions, the secretary of the Board, Mr. John Crane, had an interview with the representatives of the press in order to remove any misapprehension set afoot by such a report.

Mr. Crane was asked if the report had come to the hearing of the Board.

Mr. Crane stated that the matter had been reported to the Board, and that a committee had been appointed to investigate the facts.

Q.—What has been the result of the Committee's investigation?

A.—That the whole affair is absolutely untrue.

Q.—Are you able to give any figures upon which to base an opinion?

A.—Covering a period commencing from the beginning of our statutory year, October 1st last up to 31st May, eight months, there were 102 births at the hospital. The total deaths among children who were not "still born" was 6, of which 3 were male and 3 female.

Q.—So that the report that an abnormal death-rate occurred among male babies is disproven

A.—I should say the report is ridiculous. The figures stand for themselves and are not abnormal.

Q.—In the case of the deaths, are there any features present leading to the supposition that proper care had not been taken?

A.—Emphatically no! We have the certificate of the attending physician in every case, both boys and girls, giving the cause of death, and stating that the hospital service was in no way to blame.

Q.—How do you account for such a report getting abroad?

A.—Possibly from the fact that a nurse was recently discovered in petty thievery and was dismissed, and, as her name had a German flavour to it, conclusions were jumped at, and many people are only too willing to give any malicious report a helping hand.

Q.—What action is the Board to take?

A.—There is no action to take. The Board is quite cognizant of all the facts, and the hospital is beyond reproach in the matter and has nothing to defend, but, added Mr. Crane, from this time forward any further statements made, having for its purpose the slandering of an institution of the importance of and doing the good work the hospital is doing, will be traced to its source and the parties making such statements will have an opportunity of proving such in a court of law.

Last year the Nicholls Hospital treated nearly 1,300 patients, and its work has been carried on to very important proportions without cost to the ratepayers, and it seems a lamentable fact that there is a disposition on the part of too many to take every opportunity of slandering an institution which every citizen should be proud to support, and should loyally stand by. Such reports are injurious to the hospital and impair its success.

CYCLIST CAME TO GRIEF.

A Picture of Peterboro's New Courtroom While the June Sittings of the County Court Was in Session

The above sample of high class photography was recorded this week by Mr. Fred Roy for the Examiner. It shows the June sittings of the County Court in session with His Honour Judge Huycke, presiding. The witness in the box is Mrs. Francis Hope of Lakefield, who was the plaintiff in an action to recover damages from the Lakefield Electric Light Company in connection with injuries sustained by her son through coming in contact with one of the company's wires. The examining counsel in Mr. O. A. Langley, representing Mrs. Hope while Mr. D. O'Connell, who appeared for the defendants is conspicuous in the foreground. The majority of the members of the Peterboro Bar Association were present when the picture was taken.

This is the first picture of Peterboro's new courtroom which was formally opened a few days ago and the picture shows the first court sitting in the new quarters which were described by Dr. D. W. Dumble, dean of the Peterboro bar as "commodious, harmonious and befitting" the dignity of purpose for which they are intended. Additional work remains to be done before the courtroom is finally completed

Registration Has Been Generally Well Observed

No Man or Woman Will Be Able to Get a Meal Unless Properly Registered

Canadian Press:

TORONTO, June 22.—This is the last day for Canada to obtain official certificates of the Canada Registration Board, indicating that they have placed before the Government or its official representatives, their qualification for more efficient service in carrying on the war. It is estimated that in all fifty per cent. of the population of the country registered in advance of the last day. In some cities eighty per cent. was reported on Thursday. The last great rush of late comers to registration centres of the Dominion is expected.

WELL OBEYED.

Without these certificates no man or woman, youth or maid, over sixteen years of age will feel legally safe to receive board or lodging under any roof in Canada unless it be a place of detention to which he or she may be sent as a penalty for not being able to produce a certificate. The Government's call for a general registration has been taken seriously in all parts of the Dominion and generally well obeyed, except in some places of Quebec and in Indian reserves, where some opposition has been shown.

Austrians Are Gathering All Available Forces On Mountain Front

Premier Orlando of Italy Issues Statement to the Effect That Battle Has Been Won By the Italians---More Than a Thousand Prisoners Taken---The Battle Situation is Unchanged.

PIAVE RIVER RISING AGAIN

Canadian Press:

ROME, June 22.— Battle situation is unchanged and infantry engagements were not resumed during Friday, says statement issued by Premier Orlando. It is now permissible to say that the battle has been won, the Premier said. The Austrians, the Premier added, are now gathering all available men in sections of the mountain front. Only a small part of the Italian reserves have been drawn on.

Special to The Examiner:

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMY IN THE FIELD, June 22.— The battle for control of the all-important Montello crest is still under way as this dispatch is filed.

The Italians are known to have made some gains and have taken more than a thousand prisoners, but how extensive their operations there have been cannot be determined at this time. The latest reports received at Headquarters showed that the Italians had reached the outskirts of Nervesa on the south-eastern edge of Montello, and were fighting toward the river.

Attack Frustrated.

Enemy prisoners declare that the Italian attack in this sector frustrated an Austrian attack which was planned to be launched just an hour after the Italian assault began.

Renewed bad weather has caused the Piave to rise again, just as it showed indications of receding. The enemy forces on this side are still in a critical position and are forced to depend upon limited quantities of food brought over in airplanes.

On the lower Piave, Austrians have succeeded in freighting armoured cars and field guns across in boats, but none of their craft is large enough to transport their heavy guns.

The work of the Italian, British and American airmen is most effective. A number of their aviators after exhausting their bombs and machine gun cartridges, hovered a few feet over the enemy dropping spare parts and tools.

FUNERAL OF LATE JOHN CARLISLE.

The funeral of the late John Carlisle, who died this week, took place yesterday to the Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. Mr. Thomas and Rev. Mr. Pogue conducted the service at the house and cemetery. The pall-bearers were Mr. Carlisle's four sons: Sapper David, Major G. Harold, John and G. Douglas, William C. Carlisle of Lindsay and Charles Carlisle, of Toronto.

County Council Deferred Grants To Later Session

Asks Provincial Government to Refund Auto License Money For Good Roads System

The Y.M.C.A. Red Triangle and the Catholic Army Huts drew blanks in their requests to the County Council for financial aid. This morning the Council adjourned its June session without any action in regard to these petitions except a unanimous readiness to defer them indefinitely, and the next regular session closes the year late in November.

'GOOD ROADS.

A resolution asking the Provincial Government to refund a sum equivalent to the total of the automobile licenses paid out of Peterborough county was passed at this morning's session, on a motion by Reeve Matheson, seconded by Reeve McIntosh; and by another motion the Good Roads Department will be asked to forward a map of the proposed improved roads system in this county which, it has been asserted, has been drawn up and was shown to at least one of the members.

Conscription Will Not Be Withdrawn

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 22.—British Government regard their proposals of Irish Home Rule and conscription as postponed, but in nowise abandoned, the Times says it understands. Conscription will not be withdrawn, nor will the efforts be relaxed to frame a measure of self-government for Ireland. Recent events have convinced the Government that the first business is to establish law and order, but their policy is unchanged. Newspapers say that Nationalist members of Parliament will return to Westminster next Tuesday. Nationalist believe, according to a report from Dublin, that conscription is dead, but that Home Rule has only been shelved.

CITY STARVING

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, June 22.—The Austrian Cabinet was scheduled to meet to-day to decide the question of submitting its resignation and of summoning parliament for an extraordinary session, because of the food situation, according to dispatches from Vienna.

Premier Von Seydler is reported to have gone to Austrian Field Headquarter sto present the Government's resignation personally to Emperor Karl.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 22.—An unconfirmed report in the Amsterdam Bourse declares that an attempt has been made to assassinate Emperor Karl, according to a Central News dispatch from Amsterdam to-day.

Workers on Strike.

Special to The Examiner:

ZURICH, June 22.—Riotous scenes continued last night in Vienna, Favoriten and Brigittenau dispatches from the former city declared to-day.

An attack on the German Embassy by a mob which shouted, "Germany is starving us; down with Germany," was broken up by the police

Many persons were injured and a great number of arrests were made. More than 150 munition workers are now on strike in and around Vienna.

The Socialists are endeavouring to control the situation and restore order hoping that Germany and Hungary will send aid.

The Burgomaster of Gratz arrived in the capital and appealed for help, declaring that his city is starving.

ZURICH, June 22. — Further demonstrations occurred in Vienna yesterday, according to advices received here to day.

Huge crowds filled the principal streets, demanding the restoration of the bread ration, increased wages, reduced hours of labour and the conclusion of a general peace. The police intervened.

THE WEATHER

The rain of yesterday was quite a heavy one, falling to the depth of 1.03 inches on the level. As it came down steadily it should good, and the farmers say was just what was needed, as the cold dip of Thursday morning would have had the effect of retarding growth, as its effects were quite pronounced in some localities. One man made the remark that he never knew a season when rains came so timely, and that the prospects for abundant yields were particularly promising. Lowest temperature last night 45 degrees; highest yesterday, 57 degrees.—W.P.

THE HOUSING PROBLEM.

The individuals who always know how to secure better results than the officials or committees which may have any particular public work in hand, are to be given their innings now. The Housing Committee appointed by the Ontario Government to "inquire and report upon the housing situation, and to make suggestions and recommendations as the circumstances may demand, and the committee may think proper," have hit upon a unique way to secure the co-operation of the public and to utilize the brains of the country. The committee is offering a prize of five hundred dollars for the best solution of the housing problem in Ontario. In doing so the request is made that the manuscripts shall not exceed 3,000 words; although no statement will be rejected even if this number of words is exceeded, and that they must be in the hands of the committee by September 1st.

The housing question is a serious one—in Toronto alone there is need at the present time of 5,000 houses, and Peterboro is feeling the want of sufficient accommodation, and the scarcity will be intensified in the near future. The plan put into force by the committee should call forth many means of dealing with the problem. Some of them will be fantastically impossible of course, but from the mass of essays that will undoubtedly be submitted, the Housing Committee, will it is likely, be able to evolve a sane, feasible, course of action. The experiment of calling in the assistance of the public generally is a novel one, and its results will be awaited with interest.

TOMMY'S CIGARETTE.

Mrs. Gordon Wright, president of the Dominion Women's Christian Temperance Union, might easily find a more useful way of passing her time than by attempting to interfere with the sending of cigarettes to the soldiers. In her address at the annual convention at Ottawa Mrs. Wright is stated to have deplored the fact that so many women in Canada should send cigarettes and tobacco overseas for the soldiers, and to have quoted an officer in a training camp as stating that the over-indulgence of the cigarette habit was hindering the boys in their training. "When will the women of Canada realize the great destruction they are bringing the soldiers by sending them cigarettes?" she is quoted as having asked.

Such talk resembles the babble of an irresponsible fanatic. After all that has been published and stated from the public platform as to the solace and comfort our brave men at the front have secured from tobacco, it is almost impossible to believe that anyone in Canada would have the audacity to get up in public and make such statements as Mrs. Wright is said to have done. Let Mrs. Wright consult with any returned soldier, let her read the letters that come from overseas, let her ask any medical doctor, or any chaplain who has been at the front, as to the place that tobacco and cigarettes occupy in the lives of the men who are risking everything she will find that Tommy's smoke is one of the few comforts that he is able to obtain amid the horrors of active service. The first thing that a wounded soldier asks for is a cigarette—it helps to soothe his nerves, and ease the pain, and yet the head of the Women's Christian Temperance Union asks the women of Canada to snatch that solace away from the lips of the men who are suffering injury and pain to save those women from the experiences of their unfortunate sisters in Belgium.

Mrs. Wright's appeal should be ignored by Canadian women, and The Examiner has enough confidence in the kindness of heart, readiness of sympathy and good sense of the women of this country to be convinced that the appeal will be ignored. The boys over there want smokes, need smokes, and will have them, let Mrs. Wright rave as she will. Her remarks at Ottawa should be followed by a redoubled effort on the part of the people of Canada to see that a constant supply of tobacco is kept going to the Canadians in France.

The attention of Mrs. Wright is called to the fact that recognizing the absolute need of tobacco for the fighting men overseas, the United States government has commandeered the entire output of the "Bull Durham" plants in order that the Sammies may be assured of an adequate supply.

The cause of temperance is hindered by such senseless talk as Mrs. Wright indulged in at Ottawa, and it is hoped that the members of the W.C.T.U. will have the courage to repudiate the remarks of their president.

AMERICAN AID.

The announcement made by Secretary Baker that there are already more than 700,000 American soldiers in Europe, says the Montreal Star, must be discouraging reading for the German editors who, for more than six months past, have been carrying on a campaign, under orders, minimizing the American effort. It was on January 18 of this year that The Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung of Berlin declared that the American army consisted of "woodcutters, railway men and doctors, except two or three divisions whose precious lives are being spared in quiet places behind the front." In detailing reasons why there could never be a large American army in France the same paper said: "Can the United States spare so large a body of men as the one and a half million of which their newspapers and the journals of France speak? The answer is no because a large part of the army must remain behind for the protection of the frontiers and coasts and for other duties of a political nature. The political situation compels the United States to keep at home the greater portion of its army and the country can at the most put four hundred thousand men into the European battle-fields."

The same thing was said by Col. Gaedke, the military expert of The Bremen Zeitung, a few days later. The colonel pointed out that it took two years for England to get one million men across the channel and by this he reasons that it will take the Americans at least five years to get the same number across. Even as late as May 31 the notorious Tages Zeitung said: "Of what avail is the troublesome report of one or more American divisons when in one day of attack several enemy divisions are destroyed." While on June 1, when American troops were actually engaged on the Marne front. The Hamburger Korrespondent admitted "there are undoubtedly one hundred and fifty thousand Americans in France, where they are behaving as conquerors at the cost of poor France," and it continued: "But the American people are revealing discouragement. Wilson's policy of might shows signs of collapse and high flown speeches will not conceal the fiasco."

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

The suggestion of Mr. John Riddell, as expressed in a letter to the Examiner yesterday that the hundredth anniversary of the landing of the first white settler in what is now the city of Peterborough, should be observed in connection with the celebration of Dominion Day is respectfully recommended to the consideration of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. It would indeed be most appropriate if, as Mr. Riddell, suggests, some place on the programme could be given to a commemoration of this historic occasion.

Adam Scott was the first of white men to settle amid the hills on which Peterborough stands. An interesting description of the site of the present city is given in the History of the County of Peterborough, published in 1884, as follows:

"Over its seven hills—for in this the City of the Otonabee resembles the City of the Tiber—over the undulating slopes between them, and over the level land beside the river, rolled to the encircling horizon a vast sea of forest—maples, oaks and other hardwood trees such as generally indicate a good soil. Some of the venerable trees are still standing on Court House Hill. But the wilderness had its human inhabitants before Scott, the first white settler here, kindled his camp fire in the woods skirting the little creek that still flows through the town into the Otonabee. Wandering hordes of Massassaugas and other Indians, more or less of the great Algonquin or Chippewa tribes were familiar with the hunting grounds and followed the course of the Otonabee River from the tortuous chain of lakes, extending northwest to Lake Simcoe and Georgian Bay. These were among the less war-like of the Indian race. They did not, like the Iroquois of Lake Ontario, live in settled towns, but wandered from one camping ground to another, carrying with them the poles of their huts and the sheets of birch bark which were their sole defence against rain and snow. In the summer the birch-covered dwelling was permanently fixed where waters, as yet unpoisoned by the refuse of lumber mills, teemed with fish—the delicious brook trout of the smaller creeks, the maskinonge, sturgeon, salmon, white fish, eels and bass of lake and river. Then the canoe, hidden with care in the long grass, might be launched for visits to more distant hunting grounds. In winter the deer, then abounding in these woods were pursued by hunters who had the speed and persistency of wolves, into the deep snow drifts, when they were easily despatched by tomahawks."

It was in May, 1818, one hundred years ago last month, that Adam Scott made his way into this wilderness. Accompanied by a party of men, which included John Farrelly, surveyor, Thomas Ward of Port Hope, afterwards Clerk of the Peace, Charles Fothergill who became M.P.P. for Durham, Barnabas Bletcher, and John Edmison who settled in the township of Smith, Scott left Lake Ontario, crossing Rice Lake, and after navigating the Otonabee landed about the point where the Matthews-Blackwell plant now stands. The history already quoted describing the event, says: "Having landed close to the site of the future city, young Scott obtained a light by catching in a heap of dry leaves a spark from the flint-lock of his gun and a good fire being lighted, their supper was cooked. After a hearty meal, they lay down to rest under the shelter of the spreading maples and oaks." That was undoubtedly the first meal partaken of by white men in Peterborough.

Next morning Ward, who had purchased the land, now the village of Bridgenorth, and Edmison, left for Chemong Lake, making their way through the woods, where there was not even an Indian trail On their arrival back at the camp, they are described as finding "Scott and his companions in good spirits at having discovered a creek, then of course much larger than that which now flows through Peterborough, and of amply sufficient water power to work the mill which it was Scott's intention to build."

The party returned to Lake Ontario, but two years afterwards Scott had erected a double mill for lumber and grain, both being worked in the same building and by the same water power.

It is fitting indeed that if it can be arranged that the centenary of Adam Scott's landing in Peterborough should be commemorated and it is hoped that it will be possible to have some reference to it in the programme for Dominion Day.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A Winnipeg grocer who stated that "When the Germans came to Canada they would hang on the trees every man in uniform," has been fined one thousand dollars, with the option of one year in gaol. The magistrate's name is not given, but it should be placed in the roll of honour.

The Austrian offensive has been called a "hunger" attack. The Austrians have, however, found the Piave River defences a pretty hard bread line.

An attempt to interfere with the supply of smokes for Canadian soldiers should be punishable under the Tar Measures Act.

Capt. Persius, the German naval critic, has virtually admitted that the U-boats are a failure. He says: "It is scarcely to be denied that our enemies are both carrying on the war and living, and that it will be possible for them to defend themselves against tonnage needs for a long time at any rate."

The candidate for registration, who after stating he is single and between the ages of twenty and thirty-one, is in an embarrassing position when he cannot give his serial number under the Military Service Act.

It seems much nicer to be a conscientious objector in Canada than in the United States. Here the sentence is only two years, while across the line the C.O.'s retire from public life for a twenty-five year period.

SUGGESTION FOR ENTERPRISE.

(Emporium Gazette.)

We have a theory that an enterprising man who would go to Russia, and establish a string of free-lunch counters could be elected as czar without opposition.

AUSTRALIA AND CONSCRIPTION.

(New York Outlook.)

When it became known throughout Australia that the soldiers themselves had voted in favor of conscription, there was a complete reversal of public opinion, and there is no doubt that if the government were again to submit the issue it would be carried by a large majority. This is shown by the fact that candidates who came out openly in favor of conscription, were successful in electorates where the majority had voted against it in the referendum.

BAD COMPANY.

(Hamilton Spectator.)

King Carl of Austria may counsel the head of Rumania that "it is a time when kings should stick together," but it is morally certain that he himself would not feel so uncomfortable if he was tied a little more loosely to Emperor Wilhelm.

SLOW PROGRESS.

(Hamilton Herald.)

Advancing two or three miles along a front of twenty miles last week the Germans lost 80,000 men—and they were stopped before they could reach their objective. The going was not good. At this rate it would cost a million lives to reach Paris—and then the Allies would be far from beaten.

THEIR BAD HABIT.

(Indianapolis Star.)

Eventually the armies will break the Germans of the bad habit of trying to get to Paris.

GOOD ADVICE.

(Kansas City Star.)

As an economic war measure, we advise Germany the earlier she sends her navy out to fight, the better. Thus she will not be bothered with the expense of a navy during the remainder of the war.

SO CONSISTENT.

(Toronto Star.)

After declaring that controversy between free traders and protectionists ought to be suspended during the war, the Mail and Empire contributes to good feeling between the two by describing free traders as Bolsheviki.

Y.M.C.A. DIDN'T WANT PRESS.

Great War Veterans Did.

Conference Held Behind Closed Doors to Discuss Work Done by Y.M.C.A. Among the Soldiers.

The representatives of the Y.M.C.A., who Thursday met representatives of the Great War Veterans' Association regarding certain allegations which have been made as to the administration of the soldiers' work done by the Y.M.C.A., refused to admit the press to the meeting. The G.W.V.A., on the other hand, through their Provincial secretary, expressed every willingness to have the meeting open.

"We cannot very well admit you to the meeting," said Chairman G. H. Woods. "There may be things said here which it would not be well to report. Then, again, we can talk far more freely if we are left alone. We will issue a statement which will contain all we want to say."

The members of the Y.M.C.A. committee were G. H. Woods, L. F. Moneypenny, C. W. Bishop, Dr. John Brown and Capt. A. W. Forgie.

Ashamed of Corns

As People Should Be—They Are So Unnecessary

The instinct is to hide a corn. And to cover the pain with a smile. For people nowadays know that a corn is passé. And that naught but neglect can account for it.

It is like a torn gown which you fail to repair. Or a spot which you fail to remove. The fault lies in neglecting a few-minute duty—just as with a corn.

Any corn pain can be stopped in a moment and stopped for good. Any corn can be ended quickly and completely.

All that is necessary is to apply a little Blue-jay plaster. It is done in a jiffy. It means no inconvenience.

Then a bit of scientific wax begins its gentle action. In two days, usually, the whole corn disappears. Some old, tough corns require a second application, but not often.

Can you think of a reason for paring corns and letting them continue? Or for using harsh or messy applications? Or of clinging to any old-time method which is now taboo?

Or for suffering corns—for spoiling hours when millions of others escape?

Can you think of a reason for not trying Blue-jay? It is a modern scientific treatment, invented by a famous chemist. It is made by a house of world-wide fame in the making of surgical dressings.

It has ended corns by the tens of millions—corns which are just like yours. It is easy and gentle and sure, as you can prove for yourself tonight.

Try Blue-jay on one corn. If it does as we say, keep it by you. On future corns apply it the moment they appear. That will mean perpetual freedom. A corn aches, after that, will be unknown to you.

STATE CONTROL OF MEDICINE.

To the Editor The Examiner:

Sir,—The science and the art of medicine as we have these to-day, are the products of knowledge and of experience gained throughout many centuries, and that they fill a vital place in individual and in national life is an indisputable fact. It is not claimed that medicine is an exact science, but its scientific standard is rising higher and higher. The advent of the microscope, the X-ray and a score of other instruments gave a new impetus to the scientific factor in medicine, and the establishment of hospitals immensely improved the practice of it. In brief, medicine has become so efficient and the need of it so vital to individual and to national well-being, that the question is now open for discussion whether the practice of medicine should be under the control of the physician or of the state.

This question of the state control of medicine has been discussed for some time, but the discussion —in this country at least—never got beyond the academic stage until the advent of the present war. Great Britain and several other countries have introduced, in one form or another, state control of medicine, and we have it in some degree in our health officers.

The greatest problem to be considered in changing from the present system in the practice of medicine to that of control by the state is: Which of the two would assure us the greater efficiency? This problem may be considered from different viewpoints. The present system "stresses" personal endeavour for the physician, like any other reputable person, is very anxious to achieve at least a fair measure of success in his vocation, and in order to do so he must acquire sufficient knowledge and skill to enable him to compete successfully with his competitors. Competition in medicine, as in everything else, makes for greater efficiency. It is quite true that some transient popularity and a measure of financial success may be achieved in medicine, as in any other calling, by disreputable methods, but this letter is dealing only with what is reputable.

A second factor in favour of the present system is that it allows the sick a larger number to select from when a medical attendant is needed.

A third feature is the freedom now enjoyed by the physician. He can restrict his work to any section of medicine — surgery, internal medicine, eye, ear, etc.

The last factor to be noticed in this very brief resume is that the physician feels more or less free to put his own estimate on the value of his services. He knows— in some measure at least — what his knowledge and his experience have cost him, and also what value to the patient his services are.

The control of medicine by the state would offer, amongst others, the following advantages:

1st. The suppression of quackery. The state would be obliged to establish a standard of efficiency. The individual may waste his money on quacks when foolish enough to do it, but the state would have no right to levy taxes to support what was of no value whatever to the taxpayer.

2nd. State control would prevent an enormous amount of the present overlapping. We are all— especially when young —more or less given to be "hero worshippers," but as we grow older many of our erst while heroes become very ordinary mortals in our estimation. In medicine, as in love, people become infatuated with a personality. The love-sick swain imagines that he could commit suicide if his sweet heart rejected him, so with many patients who labour under the delusion, that "they would die without Dr. Jones." Jones, dies, leaves, or sends in his bill. The delusion, like the morning mist, quickly vanishes. It is probably quite true that ten per cent. of medicine is scientific, and the rest mostly psychologic —or, in other words, there is as little difference in efficiency amongst physicians as there is in the "rank and file" in any other calling. In case of sickness in his own family the physician can scarcely make any better choice than "the man on the street." In our armies a few are receiving "Distinguished Service Medals," but are not the "rank and file" doing a lot of splendid work?

The delusion that only a certain physician can treat the patient causes under the present system an incalculable amount of overlapping with its great waste in time and energy. In the country all the village physicians—no matter how bad the roads may be—go out long distances to visit patients living in the same neighbourhood, whereas one could have looked after all in that district. Patients often suffer need less pain and sometimes life is lost in waiting for one physican when an equally competent one may be in a neighbour's house.

3rd. State control would reduce the "overhead" expenses of the community immensely. The physician could attend, say, four patients in the west far more cheaply than if each of these patients lived at an equal distance—N., E., S. and W. The community would get for about $8 for what it now pays $20 or $25, as each physician has to charge full mileage.

4th. State control would greatly conserve the time and energy of physicians, hence the number could be reduced at least one-half. This would help, in some measure, to keep those on the farm who should never leave it. It is true that the great majority of the best men in all the so-called "learned professions" are sons of farmers, but it is equally true that in medicine, as in the ministry, law and teaching about 50 per cent. are either "unfits" or "misfits," for their calling.

People are getting "deathly sick" of paying so many unnecessary "overhead" expenses. They are beginning to ask, "Why a Senate at Ottawa, so many different religious sects, so many law courts, so many foibles in education, etc., etc.?"—all to be kept up by the over-burdened taxpayer. This war is teaching us to eliminate waste. Why then should the people be obliged to keep up great battalions of physicians, lawyers, ministers, politicians and teachers, whereas if the overlapping was done away with, small contingents could do the work far better, and at a fraction of the cost.

Why not begin with "state control of medicine"? We would thus acquire some experience that might help us in eradicating the greater evils inherent in the other callings that have been mentioned.

Yours, etc.,
JOHN HUNTER.

Peterborough, June 21, 1918.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I give you herewith a translation of an article from a French paper, which I received yesterday, and which might be of interest to the readers of the Examiner. This article is entitled:

"Le medaille prematuree" (the premature medal). The name of a newsdealer at Basle (Switzerland) is just now mentioned through the German press. Especially the "Koelnische Volkszeitung" exasperates about a certain medal, which more than one numismatist would like to have in his collection, and which is exhibited in the window show-case of Mr. Wisminckv. The medal, which excites the wrath of this rhenish man eating paper is not without any interest. It is made out of common brass, and bears the following legend, "Erinnerung an den Einzug deutscher Truppen in Paris, 1871-1914" (in commemoraion of the entry of the German troops into Paris, 1871-1914). For a decorative motive it has the Arc de triomphe on it, with the Eiffeltower as a silhouette in the background. On the reverse is spread out the Iron Cross, with the "W" surmounted by the Imperial Crown and the date 1919, and as a legend, "Nach aussen entschlossen, nach innen geschlossen" (outwards resolute, inwards united). The newsdealer affixed a card to the medal with the inscription, "It is a long way to Paris." That is the reason why the German papers are so furious. This medal is absolutely authentic. It was struck in Germany before the battle of the Marne. At that time the Germans were sure of entering in triumph into Paris. It was brought to Basle by an Alsatian, who deserted from the German Army about two months ago, and who managed to get one before their destruction was ordered by the German General Staff. They had struck several carloads of them, to be distributed all over the world, but after the failure of entering into Paris, were taken to the melting furnace of a foundry near Dresden (Saxony).

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your kindness in giving me a space in your valuable paper.—I remain, yours respectfully,

Emile Baumer.

BOOKS FOR THE SOLDIERS.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—A few days ago I noticed an article in one of the local papers referring to the need of books for the Peterborough soldiers at army camps in Canada. Two years ago, and again last year, I ventured to touch on the same point and stated that the Public Library would be glad to receive any contributions of books from residents of the city or county for transmission to the proper quarters. The response was not remarkable for spontaneity or magnitude. The gross number of books received last year was two. Unodubtedly, this was owing to the fact that the scheme was not carried out in a thorough manner by the appointment of a central committee to arrange for a canvass of the city. As an instance of what can be accomplished by the adoption of proper methods I can cite the case of a city in California, where, in a population not quite as large as ours, over 4,000 volumes were collected in less than two weeks for transmission to the army camps. The books received were in the best of preservation and embraced all subjects, from Fiction to Philosophy. It is as well to mention this point, because many people do not stop to think that in the ranks of the Canadian soldiery, as in those of the United States there are thousands upon thousands of men who have had the best of advantages in regard to education and have left scientific and professinnal employments in order to help in the fight for freedom. For men such as these tattered and torn volumes of decadent fiction hold little prospect of pleasure, but books on travel, history, useful or fine arts, religion, philosophy, and science would be welcomed with delight and most gratefully accepted. The ladies of the Red Cross have much to do in these days, but they have kindly given their consent to taking this matter also in hand, with the object of carrying it through to a practical issue.

When it is borne in mind that the best we can do for the men who are going to help in the great conflict is as nothing compared with what they are doing for us there will be few indeed who will be unwilling to forward this project. In hundreds of houses there are books lying on shelves, whose usefulness for those who own them is ended. In the best of preservation, they have been read and carefully stowed away for the dry-rot of time to destroy them. Books of the choicest fiction, of recent travel, researches in all branches of science, may be included in the category. Is it asking too much to ask all who have the welfare and comfort of our soldiers at heart, to present such books, and by joining in this work help the ladies of the Red Cross Society in making it an abundant success. A special table will be placed in the Library for the reception of these books with a notice plainly showing for what object they are intended and all the public will have to do will be to bring their offerings and lay them on the table.

Yours truly,
F. M. DELAFOSSE.

IF BREATHING IS DIFFICULT, IF NOSTRILS ARE PLUGGED, YOU HAVE CATARRH

At Last a Remedy That Already Has Permanently Cured Thousands.

Perhaps you haven't heard of the new remedy—it's so pleasant to use—fills the nose, throat and lungs with a healing balsamic vapor like the air of the pine woods. It's really a wonderful remedy—utilizes that marvelous antiseptic only found in the Blue Gum tree of Australia.

The name of this grand specific is Catarrhozone, and you can't find its tqual on earth for coughs, colds, catarrh or throat trouble. You see it's not longer necessary to drug the stomach—that spoils digestion—just simply inhale the balsamic essences of Catarrhozone which are so rich in healing that they drive out every trace of Catarrh in no time.

"I look upon Catarhozone as the most valuable medical discovery of recent years," writes R. V. Potter, of Prince Albert. "As a long sufferer from nasal and throat catarrh I was obliged to take considerable medicine, and, although it helped me, my digestion was always disturbed and the catarrh didn't go away. With Catarrhozone it was different. It cleaned my nose and throat of all phlegm and discharges, enabled me to breathe freely, relieved a stuffy feeling in my nose and frontal headaches. To-day I am entirely free from catarrh, and I use my Catarrhozone Inhaler a little every day in order to prevent the disease from returning."

With Catarrhozone experimenting ends. A permanent curative action begins. Lasting relief from Catarrh results. The large size costs $1.00, last two months and is guaranteed. Small size 50c.; sample size 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4,000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2,500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1,440 at age 21.

De Laval Tractor Makes Easy

Recent Improvements To The Race Track At Fair Grounds

In preparing the Exhibition Park for the big celebration on Dominion Day, the Fair directors have accomplished results that should surprise and delight the crowds of visitors on the holidays. The half-mile track has been groomed to perfection for the horse races, bicycle races and other athletic events. Last Tuesday the directors held a working "bee" at which there was a large representation of the directors including those from the country. Mr. C. D. Cook of the De Laval Company, trotted out one of the company's tractors and placed it and the mechanician at the disposal of the directors, and thereby placed them in the deepest debt to himself and the De Laval Company. The tractor, hauling a grader, made the circuit of the track in eleven minutes, leaving Foster Moncrief the North Monaghan road commissioner, who was supervising the work, covetous of the tractor for his roadwork in the township. The track was combed and graded and then rolled, and after that the tractor cut a new road from the George street gates to the track, and otherwise toned up these section in a manner that tickled the directors. In fact they feel that the township councils are overlooking a big economical asset in the De Laval tractor in highway building, and if the county council ever joins the ninety and nine or whatever be the number of Good Roads county they are advised by the farmer fair directors to buy a De Laval tractor as a first and essential investment.

The directors tore up the old swine pens and moved them to the south side of the Exhibition grounds, leaving all the north side from Lock street to the Grand Stand, available for midway purposes.

A Big Crowd Coming.

The Dominion Day attractions in Peterboro, have been widely advertised and it is expected that there will be a big crowd in the city. Whatever proceeds are obtained will be devoted to further repairs to the Exhibition Park. The directors are using every ingenuity to make the Dominion Day event a success and also to secure the means for additional improvements to the grounds.

MEASUREMENTS FOR RECENT SUBSTITUTES

Measurements of Substitutes Equal to One Cup of Flour.

Barley—1 3-8 cups.
Buckwheat—7-8 cup.
Corn flour—1 cup (scant.)
Corn meal (coarse)—7-8 cup.
Corn meal (fine)—1 cup (scant.)
Cornstarch—3-4 cup.
Peanut flour—1 cup (scant.)
Potato flour—3-4 cup.
Rice flour—7-8 cup.
Rolled oats—1 1-2 cups.
Rolled oats (ground in meat chopper)—1 1-8 cups.
Soy bean flour—7-8 cup.
Sweet potato flour—1 1-8 cups.

This table will help you to make griddle cakes, muffins, cakes, cookies, drop biscuits, and nut or raisin bread without using any wheat flour.

You will not need new recipes. Just use the ones your family has always liked but for each cup of flour use the amount of substitute given in the table. You can change your muffin recipe like this:

Old Recipe.

Two cups wheat flour, 4 tablespoons baking powder, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 cup milk, 1 egg, 1 tablespoon fat.

New Recipe.

1 3-8 cups barley flour, 1 cup (scant) corn flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 cup milk, 1 egg, 1 tablespoon fat.

The only difference is the substitute for the wheat flour. Everything else remains the same. You can change all of your recipes in a similar way.

You will get better results if you mix two substitutes than if you use just one alone. Some good combinations are:

Rolled oats (ground)		Corn flour
or		or
Barley flour		Rice flour
or		or
Buckwheat flour	and	Potato flour
or		or
Peatnut flour		Sweet potato flour
or		or
Soy bean flour.		Corn meal

Cautions

1. All measurements should be accurate. A standard measuring cup is equal to half a pint.

2. The batter often looks too thick, and, some times too thin, but you will find that if you have measured as given in the table the result will be good after baking.

3. Bake all substitutes more slowly and longer.

4. Drop biscuits are better than the rolled biscuits, when substitutes are used.

5. Pie crusts often do not roll well and have to be patted on to the pan. They do not need chilling before baking.

Heavy angora wool is used for embroidering chiffon and linen.

Letter Received From Pte. S. Long

Peterboro' Soldier Has Been Serving In France For Over a Year

Mrs. G. Long, 260 Westcott Street, received a card from her son, Pte. S. Long, 19th Canadian Infantry Battalion. He enlisted with the 235th Bowmanville Battalion, and has been serving in France over a year. The card, which is printed, is issued by the Y.M.C.A. to the soldiers to send home to their parents in anticipation of Mother's Day.

France, May 12, 1918.

To Our Mothers,—May the twelfth will be Mother's Day, and we do not want to let it pass without sending our message home to our mothers. "Home," "Mother." How beautiful these words sound to us out here! What memories they recall. We see it all now, the daily grind of cooking, washing and sewing, with tired eyes at night, and the big basket of darning, still to be done, after we are sound asleep; and the few spankings we got with the many we so richly deserved; and all the self-denial and worry which we caused you. We could not see it then,—blind little beggars that we were—but we see it now in all its sublime beauty and nobility, and, needless to say, we are longing for the time when we can return home to make amends by giving to you some of the love and devotion which you so ungrudgingly gave us.

If you could see the suffering and hardships endured by the brave women and children of this unhappy land, where so many homes have been ruined, you would not want us to return until victory has been won.

Till then, therefore, we remain where we are, fighting for our mothers and our homes.

Somewhere in France.

Hybrid Buffalos Increasing, Are Unlovely Animals

"Cattalo," as the cross between Hereford cattle and buffalo is called, from the Boyd estate at Bobcaygeon, were removed to the Dominion Buffalo Park at Wainwright, and the breeding operations of the late Mossom Boyd were dropped several years ago.

Since then the animals have been let run with the buffalos at Wainwright, where breeding and cross breeding has been continued. "On going through the park and looking at the various species of nature's handiwork, one is not very agreeably impressed by mankind's attempt to divert nature's tendencies," writes Mrs. J. J. Armstrong, in the Grain Growers Guide.

"The cattalo are quiet, having no violent buffalo hatred for dogs, automobiles and pedestrians, but—they are not beautiful. Neither is a buffalo or a cow, but they are still less so. To see an enormous black buffalo instead of a brown buffalo, with, instead of a buffalo face a blank white Hereford Phiz, is nothing short of startling. Or a sorrel-coloured, curly-coated buffalo with a similar white face, looking innocently at you from under his eyes, beneath his great hump, makes you tap your head with your hand and doubt your own sanity.

"I am told that the buffalo has fifteen ribs, domestic cattle thirteen, and the cattalo fourteen. Hence, in breeding up the cattalo, they are creating a larger type of cattle. It is mostly, apparently, with the Hereford and Polled Angus that the cross is made. The first experiments were hard on the mother animal, as the domestic cow was used, and the humped formation of the calf was the difficulty. Latterly more humane experiments have been conducted, using the buffalo cow and a sire of the domestic species, Hereford or Polled Angus. These breeds of cattle are good rustlers, so, of course, is the buffalo, from the fact that the species used to thrive on the prairies the year round.

"Neither buffalos nor cattle paw in the snow as do horses. But the long dewlap of the buffalo is used by him to rub aside the crust and snow in order that he may reach the grass, another trait shared by the hybrid. It is on these premises, and expectations, therefore, that stock men hope to build up a quiet, unique breed of cattle, large and hardy, and adapted to almost any rigors."

WAR GARDEN BULLETIN

Practical Daily Guide For Vacant Lot and Backyard Gardeners Enlisted in Greater Production Campaign.

USE 'EM ALL.

Don't waste any of your vegetables. Use what you can and can what you can't.

You may think this superfluous advice after you have toiled to grow them, but it is a fact that through carelessness, quantities of vegetables are wasted each year.

The thing is, to use them one way or the other when their quality is 100 per cent. Remember that it is very easy to let them go too far and then to find that they are on the turn and you can do nothing more with them. There is such a thing as catching them just at the right moment. One of the greatest assets of a garden lies in having vegetables of such a quality that you cannot buy anything in the stores to equal them either canned or fresh.

Then again, very few people take advantage of the young vegetables which they are thinning out about this time. For instance, the young beets taken up now are better for pickling than any of the later growth. Another thing that Canadians do not realize is that the tops of vegetables should never be thrown away. French women use them all in their soup stock. Canadian women throw them in the garbage can. Try saving them, and keep the water you boil your vegetables in for the stock pot, too. This is another tip from the thrifty Frenchwoman. The tops of beets, especially the young plants you pull to thin out the rows, make as delicious "greens" when boiled, as spinach.

CURING SKIN TROUBLES

These Are Always Due to Bad Blood Which Must Be Enriched and Purified

So many people, both men and women, suffer from skin troubles, such as eczema, blotches, pimples and irritations that a word of advice is necessary. It is a great mistake for those suffering from troubles of this kind to smear themselves with greasy ointments. Often they could not do anything worse, for the grease clogs the pores of the troubled skin and the condition becomes actually worse.

When there are pimples or eruptions, or an irritating or itching rash a soothing boracic solution may help to allay the irritation, but of course that does not cure the trouble. Skin complaints come from an impure condition of the blood and will continue until the blood is thoroughly purified. It is well known that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have effected the best results in many forms of skin disorders and blemishes. This is due to the fact that these pills make new, rich blood, and this new blood attacks the impurities that give rise to skin troubles and disperses them. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure skin disorders from within the system—the only sure way. Mrs. W. Ritchie, Parkbeg, Sask., says: "Two years ago I was attacked with eczema on my hands. I tried almost everything that was advised, but as the trouble was growing worse, I consulted a doctor and took his treatment for some time with no better results. By this time my hands were a mass of sores and I began to dispair of finding a cure. A friend strongly advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided to do so. After using two boxes I could see an improvement, and I got a further supply. I used altogether eight boxes, by which time every trace of the eczema had disappeared and there has been not a single sympton of the trouble since that time. I gladly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for troubles of this kind."

It should be added that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have a beneficial effect upon the general health. They increase the appetite and energy and cure all diseases that arise from impure blood. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PARODY ON "THE FAIRIE OF CHALDON-LOW"

By a Former Peterborough Resident

The appended verses were written by the Rev. W. M. Young of St. James' Methodist Episcopal Church, Niagara Falls. The Rev. Mr. Young was born in Peterboro County fifty years ago, and was a son of the late John Young. In a letter to the Examiner Mr. Young states that it was his privilege to attend the Peterboro Collegiate Institute, and in spite of the fact that he has resided in the United States for the past thirty years he has not lost interest in Peterboro or the associates of his boyhood.

PARODY ON "THE FAIRIE OF CHALDON-LOW."

"And where have you been, my Johnny,
And where have you been for me?"
"I've been to the top of Vimy Ridge,
With the banners of the free."

"And what did you see my Johnny,
In the trenches dank and low?"
"I saw the flash of the mitrailleuse,
And crimson blood on the snow."

"And what did you hear, my Johnny
Up there on Vimy Ridge?"
"I heard the roar of bursting shells,
And the crash of the falling bridge."

"Oh, tell me all, my Johnny—
All, all that you ever know;
For you must have seen the spirits
That pass in the fiery glow."

"Then, take me on your knee, mother,
And listen while I tell
How a myriad Boshes slid them down
On the slippery road to hell."

"And merry was their glee, mother,
As they stripped the Belgians bare,
Piercing the little children—
And awful the oaths they swore."

"And what were the words, my Johnny,
That you did hear them say?"
"I heard them 'Hoch der Kaiser,'
High as the Milky Way.

"And some, they played with their victims,
And rolled them in their gore—
And awful were the oaths, mother,
The oaths that the Prussians swore,

"For they have showed no mercy
Ever since the war began;
They raped the fairest maidens,
And murdered the aged men.

"And, oh, the awful crimes mother,
I saw in the wake of the Hun;
How he smote the helpless orphans,
And butchered the boys for fun!

"And some they seized the little ones,
And carried them off at will;
Or put a gag in the virgin's mouth,
To mutilate and kill.

"'And there,' said they, 'the Belgians go,
Away from hearth and home;
Or writhe in bloody foam.'"

"Oh, the poor, blind old widow—
Though she has been blind so long,
Will be stark and still when the Hun is gone,
In his rage of wrath and wrong."

"And some they did the nameless deed
And flung the helpless low—
'And this,' said they, 'by the sunrise,
The world shall never know.'

"Oh, the poor lame weaver,
How he did weep outright,
When he saw his dwelling burning—
And his son slain in his sight.

"And then upspake a Prussian,
To all his kith and kin—
'I've mixed their wine with blood,' said he,
And riddled their hides with tin.'

"'I've chopped off heads in marketplace,
I want to chop another—
I've cut the breast from Mary's chest
And ripped up Mary's mother!'"

"And with that I could not help sigh,
And I cried out loud and free,
And then from the top of Vimy Ridge
We made the Boches flee.

"And all at the base of the trenches low,
The mists were cold and gray,
And I lay with my head on the mossy stones,
Till my hair was worn away.

"But as we came down from Vimy Ridge,
We let the Prussians know,
How hard we'll fight by day or night
In darkness, mud or snow.

"And I peeped into the widow's field,
And saw an awful scene—
And her blood was on the green.

"And down by the weaver's croft I stole,
But I heaved a bitter sigh;
For I saw the weaver at his gate,
With the death-stare in his eye.

"This is not all I heard, mother,
For the time would fail to tell:
How the fiendish hords went down the road,
The fiery road to hell."

—W. M. Young.

Opinions Differ Concerning Crop Situation In Peterboro' County

Frost Has Damaged the Crop in Some Localities—Warm Weather Is Needed—Straw Will Be Short

PROSPECTS FAVOURABLE

Opinion varies as to the crop situation in Peterboro county. Looking at the question from a wide angle, it might be a whole lot worse, and if nothing serious happens between now and harvest time the results should be equal if not greater than last year. The acreage devoted to crop shows a substantial increase and at many places it is reported that the prospects are better than they were at this time last year. Frost has damaged the crop to some extent, and the need of warmer weather is felt all along the line.

CONDITIONS IN OTONABEE

According to Mr. W. W. Dawson of Otonabee, the crops have not been looking very wedd for the last week. They are partly frozen and have a wilted look. The strong winds of the last few days have not improved the outlook any. The hay is also very poor in his district, although in some parts of the province the crops are reported to be heavy. The old meadows have had too much cold weather. There was a heavy frost on Wednesday night. Neither is the hoe crop very good, and the potatoes are puny and black from the frost.

FROM NORTH MONAGHAN.

John Armstrong of North Monaghan, said that although the frost had held things back he thought that the prospects looked brighter this year than last.

FRUIT TREES DAMAGED.

Many of the farmers report that the fruit trees have been badly damaged by the frost. The apple trees especially were blighted by the severe winter. Ex-Reeve R. N. Scott of Smith, reports that all of his Spy apple trees have been almost killed by the frost, only a few green shoots appearing at the top of the trees. Even the ordinary green trees and shrubs, such as ornaments on the lawns and boulevards, did not escape the ravages of the winter. The snowball (usually a hardy plant) has been heavily kiled out in different parts of the country.

WEST NEEDS RAIN.

Winnipeg, June 22.—"Western Canada needs rain from Winnipeg to the Mountains, and the weather conditions for the next two weeks wil very largely determine what the 1918 wheat crop will be," said J. D. McGregor, the Manitoba Director for the Food Board, on his return from an extended inspection.

"While ideal weather conditions for the next two weeks," said Mr. Mc-McGregor, "may turn this year's harvest into a bumper one, the risk to crops is such as to make it necessary at the present time to conserve as far as possible every bushel of wheat in the country."

America Sounded The Death Knell

Premier Borden Attends Banquet in London, England.

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, June 22.—"America's entrance into the war sounded the death knell of German militarism," Premier Borden of Canada declared in a speech at the dinner given by the Empire Parliamentary Association in honour of the Dominion Cabinet members.

Borden paid tribute to America's economic aid to Canada.

"The war has taught us the reality of the power of the British Empire," Lloyd George said. "All that is best in the world to-day is safer on account of the Empire's existence."

PRISONERS OF WAR FUND AND AUTHORIZED SERVICE FLAGS.

"But for the packages of food you send, we would starve," is the message that comes repeatedly from our boys in the German prison camps. While news despatches read "Germany starving," do you think it reasonable to believe that the Huns will deny themselves to feed their prisoners?

The Prisoners of War Fund, through the Red Cross, is feeding our men. Every penny derived from the sale of the authorized service flags bought of the Peter Robinson Chapter of the I.O.D.E. goes to the Prisoners of War Fund.

The Peter Robinson Chapter hold the exclusive rights for Peterborough under authority to make and sell these flags, which are of an approved official design, the design being almost identical with that of the official service flag being put up in millions of homes in the United States. A maple leaf being used in the Canadian service flag to denote each individual in service, a star being used in the U.S. design.

The young ladies of the Peter Robinson Chapter, in making these flags, employ the best of materials and careful hand work. The flags are durable and will be treasured in after years for all that they signify.

Your orders, either telephoned or left in care of F. C. Webber's Drug Store, 218 Charlotte Street, or the Peter Robinson Chapter Official Service Flag Committee, will be immediately fulfilled.

KAISER HAILS HIS CHURCH

Congratulates it on Beginning of Its Fifth Century.

AMSTERDAM,—The Berlin Lokal Anzeiger, a copy of which has been received here, prints a letter from the Kaiser to the German Evangelical Church on the occasion of the beginning of the fifth century of the Church.

"The Evengelical Church," says the letter, "has begun every century of its history in trying times; but the victorious faith of the German reformers and the liberty of their God-fearing consciences have weathered all storms and made the Church a great blessing to the German people and the Fatherland. While the Church is entering its fifth century the world war has led to a great increase in religious moves, as well as to the disturbance of family life and the harmonious development of the young and to shifting of all inherited conditions.

"This places before the Church new unanticipated tasks. It is my heartfelt desire, as well as one of the most valued traditions of the House of Hohenzollern, to help, aquip and strengthen the Church for these tasks and to pave the way for its ever deeper anchorage in the German national life.

"I greet the Church with the hope that after our victorious peace it may prove itself a force from which may rise people inwardly strong and purified."

Soldiers Appreciate Socks From Peterboro

Peterboro Knitters Receive Letters Of Acknowledgment

Mrs. J. Kimberley, 488 Bolivar St., has received the following letters from two soldiers, one with the Canadian corps in France, acknowledging socks which have been sent to them. The first letter is from Pte. A. Dunslow of the 9th Howitzer Battery:

France, May 23, 1918.

By this time you will be wondering whether the parcel of socks you sent to me have reached here or not. I have received and distributed same, and I have no doubt that you will hear from some of the lads who have received them. Please convey my thanks to the Canadian Kitchener League of Peterborough on behalf of the boys. Wishing you and the League all success, I will close. — Yours sincerely,

Pte. A. Dunslow, 556044,
9th (How.) Battery, 3rd Brigade, C.F.A., B.E.F., France.

The Second Letter.

The second letter is from a soldier in the Imperial forces, under General Sir Julian Byng, who formerly commanded the Canadians. The letter runs as follows:

May 12th, 1918.

Kind Friend,—Just got to hand your parcel of socks all in good condition. It wasn't long till I found an owner for every pair of them. They were as welcome as pay day, and that means quite a lot here. There was only one Peterborough boy here, Sergt. Pullen; the rest of them are from all parts of Canada; but they have all done or doing their bit, and mean to carry on to the finish. The weather hasn't been of the best this last couple of months, but May has come in pretty warm in more ways than one, but we should worry. I take the liberty on behalf of the boys to thank the many ladies of the Kitchener League Club who kindly knit the socks. If they found any address in them you can be sure that they will write. Wishing your Club the very best of luck and long may it be able to carry on its good work. — I remain, kind friend,

Pte. J. Mellvrich, 175477,
First Army, B.E.F., France.

PHILADELPHIA, June 22.—Masters of ships arriving here report that number of whales, sharks and porpoises have drifted ashore on the North Atlantic coast, between Barnegat and Cape Henry, having evidently been killed by gunfire or by the explosion of bombs or shells below the surface. Why Drink Milk?

Due to wartime conditions, many people are learning to economize in new ways as regards food.

One of the first problems confronting the housekeeper is what to do regarding her milk order. Shall it be cut down to save expense; or shall it be maintained on a pre-war basis? The answer to this question is plain to those who have carefully studied the situation. The amount of fluid milk consumed should not be curtailed; and in many cases, it may be profitably increased.

From the broad standpoint of food conservation, it is a good national policy to use as much as possible of all perishable foods so that other foods may be released for shipment to our army and Allies. Furthermore, it is to the advantage of the individual consumer to substitute milk for some of the more expensive foods which do not furnish nutriment so cheaply.

Many uninformed people have considered milk solely as a beverage, and for use by children. They have not realized that it is a FOOD and as such is desirable in the diet of the adult.

The following table shows from a leaflet issued by the Department of Agriculture, the quantities of various foods needed to supply as much protein and energy as one quart of milk.

9 cents a quart	20.6 cents a pound	25.1 cents a dozen
10 cents a quart	22.9 cents a pound	27.9 cents a dozen
12 cents a quart	27.4 cents a pound	33.5 cents a dozen

According to this table, if milk is selling at 10 cents a quart, sirloin steak must sell as low as 22.9 cents a pound, and eggs at 27.9 cents a dozen to supply protein at equal cost.

The Man on the Land finds much of interest and practical value in the "FARM AND SUBURBAN HOME" section a special feature every Saturday in

The Mail and Empire.

Edited by an experienced and practical agricultural writer who knows his business, it is small wonder that this department is steadily growing in popularity with our subscribers.

Farmers bent on getting the fullest returns from their land need hardly be reminded of the immense value that discussions on stock and poultry raising, beekeeping, grain growing and farm improvements have for them. The fact that so many of them read the Agricultural page of The Mail and Empire, year in and year out shows that they are not lacking in a proper appreciation of its worth.

THE LENINE GOVERNMENT TO ISSUE OFFICIAL MANIFESTO

The Bolsheviki Realize That the End Is Near---Lenine Accuses Opponents of Co-operation With Imperialists ---Act of Desperation

(United Press.)

(By Joseph Shaplen.)

STOCKHOLM, June 22.—The Lenine Government has isued an official manifesto, accusing the Mensheviki and members of the Right, of co-operating with the Imperialists and Czecho-Slovaks against the Bolsheviki. The manifesto also charges that Grand Duke Michael fled from Perm, seeking to join the new Siberian government in hope of becoming its monarch.

This is ridiculous. The Mensheviki and the members of the Right, simply are aiming to overthrow the Bolsheviki for re-establishment of a National Democratic Government, abrogation of the Brest-Litovsk peace treaty and re-entrance into the war.

THE GREAT OUTDOORS

Illusion.

Life in the woods and fields seems static, breathing a contentment born of complacence and a feeling of permanence Spring slowly dissolves into summer, resolving the illusion of stability and endurance. Nor is there disquieting thought of change in the intruding evidence of domesticity by the roadside and in the fields and woods, scenes of homebuilding that are everywhere duplicated among men—those happy hours when the bairns are toddling and must still be fed and their daily care is an absorbing round, upon which the shadows of the long partings have not yet cast their gloom.

The period of evanescence seems gone with the blossoms of May, the bloom of youth. In these days while the fruit begins to form the year settles down in repose, and nature, divinely formed, realizing her heart's desire, basks in the sun of the longest days and bids the haunting and uneasy memories of change begone. In the crab apple tree—a few weeks ago a great white pom-pom shot with green — the oriole tends a hungry brood that is gradually bulging their wonder nest hidden in the branches which in their brief hour of flowering formed a fitting background for so handsome a lover. On a split rail fence, strategically chosen in midfield, a group of young crows, gawky, awkward and uncertain of wing, caw insistently and with a nasal twang for food and still more food, and the parents grow weary in their service of love.

On every hand you catch the honey note in the outdoors, industry, self-sacrifice, a simple happiness in service, and placidity over all. There is occasional strife, bickerings at times, especially among the robins and black birds and when a king bird or "high-hole" flies amuck; but in our first families there is sometimes dissonance, and even discord has been heard. After all there is not the vibrant passion of early spring. These are nesting days, and the amorous songs of May are seldom heard. There is sterner work now than preening and lilting. The bobolink hovers over his meadow nest singing to his matron mate, but not with those cascades of rippling song as when he went a-wooing. And the bluebird with its wistful mien and note, has only one thought in its comings and goings to the hollow post.

These are all engrossed in the exigent care of their young broods, and these days of happiness, often touched with anxiety, shut out the future; the days seem strangely alike and the day of disintegration finds no place in the calendar of the present. The illusion of permanence is complete, and gratefully so.

But the wild strawberries are ripe, and in the woods the honeysuckle berries are clustering, the columbine has given its last flowers to the bees, and the sun its longest day. Life seems static but beneath the vivid colourings and the pulsing life there is approaching maturity and decline. Advancing summer will soon dispel the illusion and the inexorable law of change and decay will assert itself.

Mild Adventure.

The automobile stirs the spirit of adventure. When the same old streets become intolerably dull and commonplace, a tank full of gas offers escape to fields of your own choosing. You may wander where you will and wherever any vagrant whim leads you. At the close of a working day some men occasionally pack their families into the family car, and at the end of a short run find some pleasant open space, preferably by the water, for their dining room. It is a welcome relaxation, and not the least compensation for the upkeep of a big six or little four. There is a blessed balm in these excursions that should commend them to every motorist. Peterborough is particularly attractive in this respect, for in almost any direction there are main roads that lead to lake and river in easy journeys there and back. There is novelty to outings such as these that gratefully break the monotony that some times falls upon every day home life and the rewards of the outdoors enjoyed in ease and comfort afford refreshment that may be otherwise missed.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

London aDily Chronicle: Courtesy in war was possible in the Middle Ages. Froissart notes it as the mark of evil nations. After a battle, he says, Scots knights and English would thank each other for a good fight, "not like the Germans." All that time ago!

Hun Designs on Holland.

London Daily Mail: The fates of Holland and of Belgium are inextricably intertwined. If the one sinks to be a vassal State to Germany the days of the other's freedom are numbered. The Dutch see that Germany has no intention of letting go of Belgium until she is forced to. They know that the Pan-Germans have long urged the seizure of the Dutch colonies and the incorporation of Holland, and with it of the mouth of the Rhine into the German Empire.

Russians News From Germany.

The San Francisco Chronicle: Readers will not that it is through German sources we are getting news of the alleged Russian atrocities in the Crimea. Germany is always trying to prove that there are other people just as barbarous as she is. tI is a difficult job, but no opportunity is missed. For all that, the stories about the Bolsheviki cruelties may be true. The Russians have learned many lessons during their encounters with the Kaiser in the Ukraine and elsewhere.

(Charleston News and Courier.)

Don't be too hard on Russia. Few men who have been hit on the head with an axe feel very militant immediately afterwards.

THE HEAVY COMEDY OF GERMANY.

(Kansas City Star.)

After biting off a Slavonic ear in the first act, throwing her off the bridge in the second, kicking her in the eye in the third, Germany now exclaims as the curtain rises on the fourth, "Why do you not love me, Russia?"

AND OVER THEIR PLAINTIVE EYES.

(London Daily Express.)

All the mules attached to the American Army in France have little khaki bags containing gas masks fastened to the collars of their harness. In the event of a gas attack these are slipped over their pleading noses.

NOW OR NEVER.

(Philadelphia Record.)

The persistent attacks by the Germans, regardless of losses, and renewed reports of an impending sea fight, strengthens the belief that Germany is making the last effort it is capable of. Von Hindenburg got the Socialist support for the government by the promise of a German victory by August. The end of that month is only two and a half months away, and Von Hindenburg has got to make the most of the men at his command and the money voted by the Reichstag in consideration of his promise. He can't get more men, and he may not be able to get any more money. The only explanation of the persistent German attack is that the victory must be won now or never.

NORDAND RESIDENT EXPIRED SUDDENLY

Mr. Duncan McIntyre, a well known resident of Norland, was found dead Thursday night across the road from his residence, in the garden of Mr. Samuel Bryant.

The deseased who ran a sawmill for Mr. T. Wilson, of Cannington (and which was burned a few weeks ago) has been in ill health for some time. It appears that on Thursday night the decreased noticed afire, and thinking it as the Bryant mill, ran over to tell the owner. He was seized with a weak spell and expired in the garden.

The fire proved to be in the cottage of Mr. Adair, situated at the Point, which was totally destroyed.

YOUNG PREACHER WENT INSANE

BELLEVILLE, June 22.—A young minister who went suddenly insane while preaching to his cougregation in the northern part of Hastings last Sunday morning was brought to Belleville today by the C.N.O.R. train and taken at once to the county jail to await removal to a hospital. He was very violent and had to be closely guarded all the way from his home.

CROPS DOING WELL.

Northern and Central Saskatchewan Have Cheering Reports.

SASKATOON, Sask., June 20.—Reports coming into The Phoenix during the last 24 hours from Central and Northern Saskatchewan show that heavy rains have been quite general. Hail storms are reported from areas tributary to the C.N.R., north-east from Warman to the Manitoba boundary, but crops are not far enough advanced to suffer any material damage.

All reports as to the present condition of crops in Northern and Central Saskatchewan indicate a state of affairs equal to the best for this time of year and much higher than the average for the past five years.

THIS IS INTENDED FOR THOSE WHO HOG ROAD

I am the Road Hog, Alice. Oof, oof!!

I drink Gasoline instead of Buttermilk.

Climb up on the Fence, Alice, for I own the Road.

I have a Guarantee Deed to it recorded in the Route Book—I carry it up my Sleeve.

If you want to traverse the Highway in Peace, or even skirt it, just hop along like a Bird on the Telephone Wire—that's a current Practice.

When it doesn't work I let out a String of Yaps like a Hound on the Trail of a Coon with Fat on his Ribs.

I am, as Willie Shakespeare so truly and feelingly says, Sir Oracle, and when I ope my lips let no God-forsaken Motorist cross my Path.

Of course, I take most Delight in Muddy Road—all Hogs do, no Matter from what Part of the Country they come— Hampshire, Berkshire, Poland or China.

I have a Phiz that is unique — large, healthy Ears a-la Elephant a Mouth of the Sacred Catfish Order, and Eyes like a genuine high-class Hog—little, sharp, inquisitive.

The Rest of my Body is normal, Alice, with the Exception of my Feet—they are so deep in the Mud you'd never know but what I wore Number 9's.

Now, skid along, Alice. You're stealing my Oxygen.

DISCUSS EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS.

WASHINGTON, June 22. — Word reached the State Department from the Spanish Ambassador at Berlin that the German Government has agreed in principle to a conference with representatives of the United States to discuss the treatment, welfare and exchange of prisoners.

FLY ACROSS ATLANTIC

It became known at the War Department that considerable discussion had been given to the this problem, and that allied representatives here had urged it.

First the Italians suggested flying across in one of their powerful planes, and now it is understood the British are considering the feasability of attempting it in one of theirs.

I KNOW A WOMAN'S SUFFERINGS

I am a woman.

What I have suffered is a far better guide than any MAN'S experience gained second-hand.

I know your need for sympathy and health.

And the treatment that gave me health and strength, new interest in life, I want to pass on to you, that you, too, may enjoy the priceless boon of health.

Are you unhappy, unfit for your duties? Write and tell me how you feel and I will send you ten days' FREE trial of a home treatment to meet your individual needs, together with references to women in Canada who have passed through your troubles and regained health; or you can secure this FREE treatment for your daughter, sister or mother.

If you suffer from pain in the head, back, or bowels, feeling of weight and dragging down sensations, falling or displacement of internal organs, bladder irritation with frequent urination, obstinate constipation or piles, pain in the sides regularly or irregularly, bloating, dyspepsia, extreme nervousness, depressed spirits, melancholy, desire to cry, fear of something evil about to happen, creeping feeling up the spine, palpitation, hot flashes, weariness, sallow complexion, with dark circles under the eyes, pain in the left breast or a general feeling that life is not worth living, I invite you to send to-day for my complete ten days' treatment entirely free and postpaid, to prove to yourself that these ailments can be easily and surely overcome at your own home, without the expense of hospital treatment, or the dangers of an operation. Women everywhere are escaping the surgeon's knife by knowing of my simple method of home treatment, and when you have been benefited, my sister, I shall only ask you to pass the good word along to some other sufferer. My home treatment is for all—young or old.

Read My FREE Offer!

To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually dispels green-sickness (chlorosis), irregularities, headaches and lassitude in young women, and restores them to plumpness and health. Tell me if you are worried about your daughter. Remember it costs you nothing to give my method of home treatment a complete ten days trial, and if you wish to continue, it costs only a few cents a week to do so, and it does not interfere with one's daily work. Is health worth asking for? Write for the free treatment suited to your needs, and I will send it in plain wrapper by return mail. Cut out this offer, mark the places that tell your feelings, and return to me. Write and ask for the free treatment to-day, as you may not see this offer again. Address:

THE WORLD OF SPORT

SPORTING COMMENT

Mussel Shell, the Canadian-owned pacer, won the 2:09 pace at Detroit without much difficulty.

The surprise of the women's national tennis tournament Thursday at Philadelphia was the defeat of Miss Eleanor Sears, of Boston, by Miss Clare Cassel, of New York.

King Canuck, driven by Nat Ray, of Toronto, was second in the 2:17 pace at Marion, Ohio, Thursday.

When the four-year-old pacing mare Miss Rico, by Manrico, 2.07¼, took her record of 2:08¼ at Phoenix, Ariz., she stepped the first half of the mile in 59 seconds.

Frantland Rice, the well-known sport writer, has been made a sergeant of Battery F, an outfit from Tennessee, his native State.

A total of 50 trotters covered a mile in 2:10 during last season.

HELPS TO MAKE A GOOD BASEBALL UMPIRE.

Bill Brennan says the secret of success in the romantic fields of umpiring is decision and normal honesty. He believes further that the snappy, verbal come-back often helps an "umps," and Bill prides himself no little on his ability as an extemporaneous commentator.

Louisville was a tough town for umpires last season, but William found it the most hospitable and gracious of southern cities. Will attributes much of his success in Kentuckian fields to a terse answer he once gave a pitch a ball.

He called a pitch a ball.

"What's the matter with it?" howled an enraged Louisville player.

"I call 'em; I don't explain 'em," bellowed Bill in return.

Thereafter the city of Louisville was so taken with Bill's ability as a catch-as-can conversationalist that they took him to their hearts.

One of Bill's maxims is never to hesitate in rendering a decision. As the school books say, he who hesitates gathers no moss, and Bill avers he would be out and out wrong about a decision than putter around thinking about it.

Decisions are reflexes anyhow, and it is better a man should reflex freely and quickly, even if erroneously, than to reflex not at all.

Furthermore Bill is a great believer in letting the other fellows fight. He says any time he worked in a game played between the teams managed by John Ganzel and Bill Clymer in the American Association, he never had to worry a minute. The managers spent all their time fighting themselves, and consequently had no time to gun for William.

"If they tried to dog it," says William, "I used to say Ganzel, 'Did you hear what Clymer called you?' Then I would tell Clymer that Ganzel said so and so. The result was they had a busy summer, but I found the work pleasant and easy."

THE "SHINE BALL."

It is the Cause of Batting Slumps This Season.

"The public need not be amazed if it witnesses many a game that results in a score of 1 to 0," said Umpire Brick Owens while at Cleveland. "I am not in the least surprised by the batting slump of Cobb, Speaker and other crack hitters. Averages of .300 are going to be mighty scarce before the season is out unless some way is found to put the shine ball out of business.

"All the pitchers are trying to use the ball made famous by Eddie Cicotte last year, and many of them are succeeding. Guy Morton showed me a pretty a 'sailor' as I have seen this year, and if he had not had such bad luck on Allsmith's hit to Wimby, he would have had a shutout.

"Ayers also was using the same kind of a ball. It was one sailor against another sailor, and if it keeps on the pitchers are going to be bigger factors than ever before."

SOLDIER THOUGHT DEAD STARTLES HIS SISTER.

Pembroke, Mass., June 22.—Howard G. Leighton, recently mentioned in a Canadian casualty list as having died on a battlefield in France, startled his sister, Mrs. William C. Jones, by appearing at her home here to-day.

"I thought you were dead!" was the sister's greeting.

"I thought so myself," the soldier replied.

Leighton, who enlisted at Boston with a Canadian regiment, said he was so badly gassed in battle that he was pronounced dead, and the body ordered removed for burial. As he was being taken away the stretcher-bearers noticed signs of life, he said, and took him to an hospital, where he recovered. Notice of his death was conveyed to his family in March last.

THEY LOST THE PRIZE.

But Then the Contenders Were Only a Lot of Sea Gulls.

Some campers at a northern lake once put a big fish on a sloping rock near the water's edge to see what the gulls would do.

Seizing the fish in his talons the voracious bird flapped its great wings and screamed greedily as he tried to make off with his find.

But the fish was too heavy to be lifted. The only result of repeated attempts was that the fish began to slide toward the water and soon fell in with a splash.

Diving after it, the gull brought it to the surface, and then began a curious spectacle. Time after time the gull hoisted the fish as high as his strength would permit, only to weaken and let the fish fall again. The noise attracted other gulls and a battle ensued. First one gull and then another would dive for the fish, lift it part way above the water's surface and be set upon by other gulls until the fish slipped back, a sacrifice to jealousy and greed.

For almost an hour this struggle lasted, ending only when all the gulls were tired out. The prize was lost.

A fraction of the energy thus spent in scrapping over an object too big to handle would have secured for each gull an ample meal of smaller fish, with which the lake abounded.

Or, a little co-operation, instead of so much crazy competition, would have lifted the fish to a safe place on dry land, where all the gulls could have feasted at their leisure.

But they were only gulls; hungry, unthinking, gluttonous gulls.

Of course, men would have known better. Yes?—Cleveland Press.

Downfall of an Astronomer.

M. Gudule was the aged cook of the French astronomer Lalande. Like many men of distinction in his country and era, Lalande at one time dabbled a little in the culinary art himself. He contrived a sauce or two which Gudule pronounced promising for an amateur, and he was an expert maker of salads, which he was wont to prepare at table for the delectation of his guests.

"But there is now no more of that," Gudule lamented. "With his head full of miserable stars he hardly knows oil from vinegar. He makes no more salads, the unhappy man, and those which I prepare for him with the utmost care and serve charmingly—salads to tempt a king—he devours without a glance, without a word, without savoring, without appreciating, as if they were no more than boiled cabbage! A donkey eating thistles along the highway is more grateful for his dinner. Stars are well enough in the sky, look you, but it is imbecile to permit them to interfere with your meals here on earth. Heaven, which created victuals and inspires cooks, never intended it, I, Gudule, say so."

Parties Concerned Are Waiting For Ottawa To Make A Move In The Tense Situation At Guelph

QUESTION OF STATUS

(Special to Examiner)

GUELPH, Ont., June 22. — Both Protestant ministers and the heads of the Jesuit College are waiting for Ottawa to ake a move in the Lense situation which exists in Guelph as a results of the raid by the military police on the Jesuit college on the night of June 7th. New excitement has been added to the situation by the discovery that of three men arrested during the raid one of them was the son of the Minister of Justice ,Marcus Doherty. It was well known that he was a member of the institution, but not that he was one of those arrested. Fuel has been added to the fire by the fact that Minister of Justice Doherty interfered with the raid when his son was one of those apprehended, none of the three were taken away by the police.

Welcoe Investigation.

Rev. W. D. Spense, president of the Ministrial Sssocition positively asserts that the military officials after the visit to the minister, there were 22 men who had entered since the Military Service Act came into force and Father Power, Superior General of the society of Jesuit in Canada and Father Bourque, just as positively asserts that only 11 men have entered the Novitiate since the Military Service Act came into force and not one is an evader under the law. The heads of the college are anxious and willing that the government publish the list of names which is in their possession of the men who are members of the institution. There is a high pitch of excitement among the citizens of Guelph regarding the allegations that sons of prominent men had joined the Jesuit Novitiate here recently, thereby evading the Military Service Act.

Indignation Meeting.

Today great interest is shown in examining the statements of the officials of the ministerial association and the heads of the Novitiate and the society of Jesus.

Rev. W. D. Spence, president fo the ministrial association states that an indignation meeting in Guelph will not now be necessary as the objective sought which was publication, has been attained. The minister will make a statement to their congragations on Sunday about the matter and are now dealing direct with Ottawa to try and get an interpretation of the Military Service Act which will cover the men of military age and men who have not taken the vows

Will Publish List.

If we can't get a satisfactory interpretation we will work through private members to force a fair appropriation of the Act and the whole matter will be brought up on the floor of the House of Commons," said Spence. There seems to be a great difference between the information obtained by the Protestant minister of the number of men who joined the Novitiate since the Militaty Service Act came into force. A reporter visited the College last night and asked for a list of the names of the members of the colleges, their address and when they entered. Father Power Superior General of the Society of Jesus in Canada, and Father Bourque Rector of the College, seemed favourably inclined toward the proposal Mr. P. Kerwin, solicitor for the Novitiate, was called up and consulted about it, and he replied that not a word was to be given for publication Mr. Kerwin is a partner of Hon. Mr Guthrie, Solicitor-General of Canada Father Power stated that he could only reiterate that as soon as the Government would make a statemen though, they would be willing to publish a list of every member in the Noviate.

"The Government has a list of your members, have they not," asked the reporter.

"Yes," replied Father Power, "and we are anxious and willing that the Government should publish a complete list of the men here for everyone to see. There is nothing secret or mysterious about the Order at any time before the raid took place. We would have welcomed any one of the Protestant ministers from Guleph to visit and go through our college.

Waiting For Statement.

We are waiting for the statement from Ottawa and must abide by the advice of our solicitor, regarding the list of names."

The President of the Ministerial Association stoutly maintains that the military authorities after the raid informed them that 22 of the inmates had entered the institution since the Military Service Act came into force, and one officer said these men would make a "fine platoon." New excitement has been added to the situation by the knowledge that Marcus Doherty, son of the Minister of Justice, was one of the three arrested the night of the raid, as defaulters under the M. S. A. None were taken away from the institution, as orders from Ottawa prevented it. The Protestant ministers state 22 of the inmates have joined since the M. S. A. came into force.

Not One Man Liable.

That there are 22 novices, 8 junior students and 11 working brothers of the Noviate, excluding the heads of the College and the professors. There are 41 inmates, and the total, counting Father Bourque and Father Power and the instructors, is 46. One working brother and 10 of the others entered since the M. S. A. Act came into operation. Of this eleven are from the United States and have their exemption papers from military service to show. Of the 8 remaining, one was a tontured member of the Order or a cleric when he joined the institution, and so was exempted from military service. Four are stated to be under 18 years of age and so can hardly be questioned regarding military service. Of the other three, one is Marcus Doherty, who entered the college on March 30, 1918. It is stated positively that in his case he tried to enlist several times before he was of age and was pronounced by Protestant medical examiners to be unfit for military service and placed in Class E. On the remaining two, who joined since the Military Service Act came into operation, they were both under age when they joined, and therefore did not come under the M. S. A., it is claimed. They are of military age now, or at least come into the 19 year old class who have to register. Only one of the 11 came from Guelph and he is the son of a bookbinder by trade. The only one who is the son of a prominent man is stated to be young Doherty. The men in question are declared to be the sons of comparatively poor parents, such as day workers, and one the son of a merchant, and another the son of a farmer. This summary is from the records of the Jesuit Novitiate. Both Father Bourque and Father Power declare there is not one man in the Novitiate, who is escaping military service according to the law.

A Statement

Rev. Mr. Spence, today made this statement:—"According to statement of the head of the college, a young man has to be at the Novitiate two years before taking vows They are probationers for two years and can leave during that time. Students in Protestant colleges are subjected to military service until they are ordained. The students at the Novitiate should be liable for military, until vows are taken. We are hoping to get that interpretation from Ottawa, so that a Roman Catholic college will be placed on an equitable basis with Protestant colleges". Should this interpretaion be made, quite a number of the young men at Jesuit college would be liable for military service as those who had not taken vows when the Military Service Act came into force would be covered. The heads of the Jesuit college declare that when a man joins the Novitiate, he belongs to an exclusive religious order and is expected under the Act. Rev. W. D. Spence, when asked if he had a list of the members in the institution stated that the ministerial association knew almost the name of every man in the place when he entered. "The heads of the college state that only 11 entered the college since the Military Service Act came into force", stated the reporter. "How does that compare with your information?"

"I dont believe it", replied Mr. Spence. "Our information from the military authorities is that 22 men of military age have entered since the Military Service Act came into force."

A Question of Status.

OTTAWA, June 22 — (Special to Examiner)—Men entering Novitiates are subject to exactly the same provisions as anyone else. They must comply with orders to report for re-examination the same as anyone else. The same holds true of a man entering shortly before the age of 19 unless it is found that he has become a "member of a religious order" prior to the time of calling out the 19 men. Here the whole question of "Status" now being considered by legal authorities comes up for men belonging to recognized religious orders and specifically excepted uder the Act ad also uder the new order in council and regulations. The whole thing rests on the question of the status of the men.

BRANTFORD, Ont., June 22.—The following decided stand has been taken by members of the Six Nations Indians, on the reserve some ten miles from Brantford, as shown by the following statement, drafted and accepted at a mass meeting:

"That the Indians are wards of the Government, so declared by the Indian Act, and are not subjects and are not embraced in the Order-in-Council requiring enumeration, besides which it is distinctly against the treaty of Paris made by the Crown of Great Britain with the Indians and consequently they have decided not to register under the said Order-in-Council of the Government of the Dominion of Canada.

Over A Hundred Persons Killed In Railway Wreck

Entire Circus Company Believed to Have Been Wiped Out --Engine Ploughed Through Four Sleeping Coaches---Details Lacking

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

CHICAGO, June 22.—Report from Gary, Ind., say, that an accident on the Michigan Central Railroad at East Gary has resulted in the death and injury of more than one hundred persons.

Estimates of deaths in Michigan Central wreck near Ivanhoe station vary from 100 to 150. The wreckage caught fire, destroying many bodies. Many killed and injured were pinned under the debris.

The personnel of Hagenbach Wallace shows are believed to have been practically wiped out in a disastrous railroad collision between Michigan Central and Hammond, Ind., to-day. According to meagre details received at the Michigan Central offices, a hundred or more persons were killed or injured. Four coaches, in which members of the circus were sleeping were demolished by rear-end collision. The show was travelling in two sections, going from Hammond to Michigan City. At East Ivanhoe a hot box caused the second section to stop and a train of empty Pullmans coming to Chicago, crashed into it, the locomotive plowing its way through the day-car and four sleeping coaches. The injured were taken to hospital at Hammond and Gary.

Ed. Ballard, the owner of the circus, estimates the injured and death roll at 75. A number of valuable horses are believed to have perished. The accident occurred at about 4.30. It was impossible to obtain water, and the flames burned unchecked.

FARMERS ORGANIZE ANOTHER CLUB LAST EVENING

Meeting at Mather's Corners Was Largely Attended---Mr. H. B. Cowan Was the Principal Speaker

The farmers' movement appears to have struck Peterboro County, three new clubs having been organized in the vicinity of Peterboro within the past few weeks. A new club was formed last night at a meeting held at Mather's Corners. In spite of the unfavorable weather and bad roads, there was a representative attendance of farmers. The chair was occupied by Mr. Joshua Smithson, who told of some of the mistakes made by the early farmers' movements years ago and also the benefits the farmers derived from them. He was strongly in favor of an organization being effected in that vicinity.

The principal speaker was Mr. H. B. Cowan, of Farm and Dairy, who showed that the present farmers' movement is totally different from any farmers' movement ever before known in Canada. The great financial companies that have sprung up in connection with it with their millions of dollars of assets and large profits give a financial strength that has been lacking hitherto, and their leaders provide business and executive experience that is of great value. The progress of the movement in Ontario was described.

Officers Elected.

After Mr. Cowan's address it was voted unanimously to form a club and officers were elected. Delegates from the club are likely to attend a big picnic to be held in the vicinity of Indian River next Thursday afternoon The officers elected last night were:

President—C. Thompson, R.R. No. 2, Keene.

Vice-President—Stewart McIntyre, R.R. No. 2, Keene.

Secretary-Treasurer—Merton Storey, R.R. No. 8, Peterborough.

"STAGGER" STORE HOURS.

Plants May Open at Varying Times to Aid Transportation.

An order has been issued by the British Board of Trade that south of a line drawn from the Wash to the Bristol Channel tramways must reduce their coal consumption by ten per cent.

In order to maintain efficient service for industrial traffic, it is urged by the Tramways (Board of Trade) Committee that factories and other places of business should "stagger" their times of opening and closing at morning, midday and evening, which means that instead of an overwhelming rush when the hour strikes, there would be smaller streams of passengers at intervals of a few minutes.

Adjacent works, or departments of the same works would, for example, discharge at 6 o'clock, 6.10 and 6.20, thus facilitating more economical running of the car service.

WAR GARDEN BULLETIN

Practical Daily Guide For Vacant Lot and Backyard Gardeners Enlisted in Greater Production Campaign.

IN AT THE FINISH.

This week gives you about your last chance to have a real war garden. It is rather wonderful to think that you can begin even at this late hour, plant your seeds as late as July 1 and still have vegetables as good as the forehanded gardener, if not as early.

You can plant beans as late as July 1 and 15; beets, June 25, July 5, 15 and 25; carrots, July 5 and 15; corn, July 5 and 15.

It should be kept in mind that some vegetables have absolutely no toleration for warm weather and planting them is waste. Peas and spinach will not thrive during July and August; neither will cress, endive, mustard nor turnips.

On the other hand vegetables that thrive in summer beat are beans, cucumbers, sweet corn, eggplants, melons, pepper, pumpkins, squashes, and tomatoes. Those least likely to be effected by drought are beans, eggplants, pepper and tomatoes.

Those that need plenty of moisture to do well are corn, cucumbers, melons, pumpkins and squashes. None of them, however, should have the water applied to the vines or plants.

Don't Diet Yourself
TO CURE DYSPEPSIA
IT ISN'T NECESSARY

The sufferer from dyspepsia and indigestion who has to pick and choose his food, is the most miserable of all mankind.

Even the little he does eat causes such torture, and is digested so imperfectly that it does him little good.

What dyspeptics need is not dieting, or artificial digestants, but something that will put their stomach right so it will manufacture its own digestive ferments.

For forty years now Burdock Blood Bitters has been making weak stomachs strong, and curing severe cases of dyspepsia and indigestion that other remedies were powerless to reach.

It restores the stomach to a normal healthy condition so that the food no longer causes distress, but thoroughly digested and assimilated, and goes on its way making rich, red blood.

Mrs. Henry Shaw, Campbellton, N.B., writes: "I was for five years troubled with a weak stomach, and could not eat any food that would agree with me. I tried different medicines, but could not get cured. A friend advised me to take Burdock Blood Bitters. I took four bottles, and now I am in perfect health."

Dresden's Model Theater Stage.

Dresden seems to have theatrically solved the problem of long waits, for the Koniglliches Schauspielhaus brings the technical side of the theater up to the highest point that has ever been reached. The three principal features are simplicity, rapidity of working and the liberal allowance for space, air and light. Instead of having the conventional stage where one scene must be taken down before the next can be set or of having a revolving stage the Schauspielhaus is provided with a stage which is lowered hydraulically for the purpose of shifting the scenery. While one scene is being used, the second is all set up below on the left hand side. The stage is then lowered, and the first scene is rolled off to the right by electric motors, the new scene at the same time being rolled on. Then the stage is again raised, and the play goes on with an interruption of but thirty seconds.—Exchange.

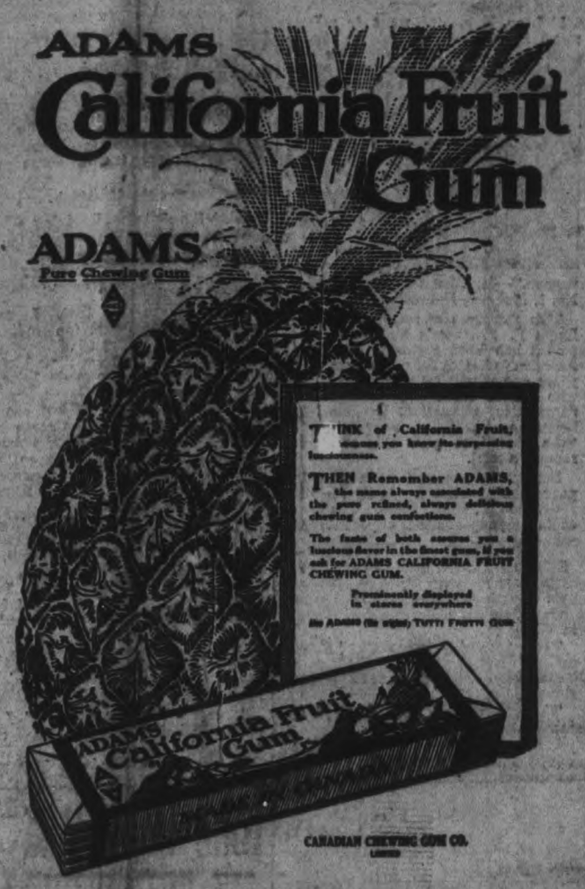
A NECESSITY IN THE HOUSE.

Most of the common ills of life arise from a torpid, sluggish condition of the Liver, Kidneys or Bowels, and because they act on each of these organs in a direct and specific way Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills overcome serious and painful diseases over which ordinary medicines have no control.



BRITISH SEAPOWER GROWS, GRIP ON ENEMY TIGHTENS

"Seven Million Tons of Shipping Enter or Leave Our Ports, and There Are Days When Not One Ship is Lost," Says An Official Report

AND U. S. TROOPS CROSS ATLANTIC MERRILY

London, June 24 — The necessity of keeping an eye upon the importance of sea power in the present conflict, despite the close attention claimed by the land battles, is emphasized by Archibald Hurd, the naval expert, writing in the Daily Telegraph.

"We have been apt during the recent offensives in the Western front," Mr. Hurd writes, "to overlook other aspects of the war—notably the fundamental factor, which is sea power. After a period of fifteen months, during which our strength in ships steadily declined, the downward tendency has now been definitely arrested. Not only is our seapower increasing but our grip on the enemy is firmer than at any previous period of the war.

"Seven million tons of shipping enter or leave our ports monthly. Each ship is the target for enemy submarines, yet there have been days in the present week when the enemy has not secured a single ship.

"Twelve months ago we were with difficulty maintaining one stream of traffic, namely that which brought us food and raw material. To-day supplies are flowing through this main artery in greater volume than a year ago. At the same time another stream of traffic has started and merchant shipping has been made available for the greatest transport movement which has ever been carried out.

"For three months past Americans have been coming across the Atlantic by tens of thousands, far faster than at one time was thought possible. That means that the balance between the allies and the Central Powers is being adjusted in favour of the former."

Famine.

I am the skeleton in every nation's closet. I bide myself in the dark recesses behind the silent uniforms swaying in the dark. While the guests make merry and the householders pity them with viands at the friendly board I bid my time.

But when the alarms sound and the guests go out to kill then I start forth in the gray shadows of early morning. With my thin wand I touch the cornfields and watch them wither.

And as the sun shines on battlefields my day of triumph comes. No longer afraid to show my hollow face, I stalk through village and city, laying my rattling hands on mother and wife and babe.

My comrade, War, true to his eternal promise, has given me the entry to all societies.—Life.

MORE GOOD THAN EVERYTHING ELSE

That Is What Tanlac Accomplished In Case of Ottawa Man

"Talking about things that help people, this Tanlac has done me more good than anything else I ever got hold of," said Stanislas Prudel, who is employed at the Watson & Todd Lumber Co. and lives at 82 Forest avenue, Ottawa.

"My stomach had been all upset for about two years," continued Mr. Prudel. "All my food tasted alike and nothing seemed to agree with me at all. Soon after eating I would bloat up with gas, always had a pain in my chest and sometimes it was hard for me to get my breath. My food would invariably sour and seemed to do me little or no good. I had dull, nagging headaches, carried a bad taste in my mouth all the time and all my strength and energy seemed to leave me. I felt terrible and just moped around like someone half dead. I tried to keep on working, but one time I just had to stop off and was laid up for several weeks.

"I tried all kinds of medicines but kept getting worse and finally decided to see if Tanlac was any better than the other things I had used. Well, sir, I am ready now to say Tanlac is a real medicine. Before I had taken it two days I began to straighten up, and when I finished my first bottle I was feeling like a new man. I have taken three bottles now and my stomach is in fine shape. I can eat just anything I want without feeling a sign of indigestion, and since the gas has stopped forming on my stomach I have no more pain or shortness of breath. The headaches are gone, my strength and energy have returned and I have never felt better. I never miss a day from my work now and I'm so delighted over what Tanlac has done for me that I tell everybody about it.

"My brother-in-law was suffering dreadfully with his stomach and had been off his work about three weeks on account of it. I asked him to try Tanlac and he said: "No, I have been under treatment and have been told that nothing would do me any good." "That's all right," I said, "you try Tanlac anyway, it beats everything you ever saw. So he got a bottle and before he had finished taking it he was feeling better. Now he's as well as anybody and you couldn't find a stronger booster for Tanlac anywhere than he is unless it's me"

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd. In Havelock by A. C. Deslke. In Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd. In Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter. In Gelert by A. J. Scott. In Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

WHAT CAN ONE DO?

CHAPTER C.

I felt my face blush happily, when George said he "wanted me always to think nice things of him." I would, if only he were always as he was then! I wanted desperately to throw my arms around his neck, to tell him I loved him—that I wanted him to be kind, and tell me of his love often. Instead, I replied:

"I do, really I do."

"Thank you!" he said again, still gravely.

When Mrs. Sexton left, he was tired and went immediately to bed. He scarcely answered when I tried to talk with him, so I desisted. I kissed him softly and left him thinking he would sleep.

For a long time, I sat by my sitting-room window thinking. Why would he be so unkind at times? He could not expect me to think kind and nice things of him when he was cross and unreasonable with me. Perhaps he was not unreasonable—didn't consider himself so, at least. What could I do? One day he seemed all kindness and thoughtfulness and the next impatient—neglecting me and making me unhappy. Did ever a girl have such a puzzle to solve? I would try to think of what he had said and the way he had said it, when I was tempted to doubt him. I would also try to remember what Mrs. Sexton had told me:

"One does not pretend when one gets so near the crossing," she had said. She had also said that when he thought me drowned, George was "absolutely stricken." If I remembered all these things, I would be more patient—less liable to be unhappy because of neglect.

An Embarrassing Situation.

The next day George was almost himself again. He insisted that I go out and take a long walk.

"You look very pale, and it will do you good," he said when I objected to leaving him.

I really was glad to get out. It was a delightful afternoon, and I strolled over to the tennis court. I did not play, but became so interested in the game that I remained longer than I had intended.

"So giving me a chance to visit with George," she returned.

"Yes, so giving you the chance to talk with Mr. Howard," I repeated. "Now may I offer you some tea, or have you not quite finished talking?"

"Tea, please! We can finish our conversation some other time."

How I wanted to throw something at her! But I smiled, instead, and gave the order. Then I left them in order to freshen myself a bit after my walk.

When I returned to the room, they were talking earnestly.

"Julia is trying to persuade me to wait and go when she does," George said. Of course I knew he meant to Bar Harbour.

"Really!"

"Yes, what do you think of it?" she turned to me. "It would be much more pleasant."

"For you, yes, as naturally you would be alone. It is always agreeable for me to travel alone with George."

Do Be Unselfish.

"But it will be really doing a kindness, to wait for me. Do be unselfish and do so!"

"Helen never is selfish. That is one of her charms."

When George said that, I would have been pleasant to the evil one himself. So I returned:

"It is, of course, as Mr. Howard says. Our plans are made however, and my packing nearly finished."

"I think we will follow out our original plan, Julia," George said, to my delight. "I do not care to stay here longer. I haven't quite recovered from the shock of our accident. I shall pull myself together more quickly there."

I could have shouted aloud in glee. Without my saying a word, George had done exactly as I wished. I talked quite gleefully, during tea, and when Mrs. Collins came to go I was more cordial than I ever had been. That George did not understand my reason, was proven by his remark:

"I am glad you are getting over your foolish dislike for Julia. She is, as you know, a very old friend of mine."

I wasn't "getting over it;" I was simply delighted that she was to be outwitted by him.

TO ALL WOMEN WHO ARE ILL

This Woman Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Her Personal Experience.

McLean, Neb.—"I want to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all women who suffer from any functional disturbance, as it has done me more good than all the doctor's medicine. Since taking it I have a fine healthy baby girl and have gained in health and strength. My husband and I both praise your medicine to all suffering women."—Mrs. JOHN KOPPELMANN, R. No. 1, McLean, Nebraska.

This famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has been restoring women of America to health for more than forty years and it will well pay any woman who suffers from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, backache, headaches, nervousness or "the blues" to give this successful remedy a trial.

For special suggestions in regard to your ailment write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its long experience is at your service.

I hurried back and flew into the sitting room with apologies on my lips. But my apologies were hushed, when I saw Julia Collins sitting close to George.

"Did you enjoy your walk?" George asked, when I had greeted her as civilly as possible under the circumstances.

"I hope you did not hurry," she said.

"No, although I have remained longer than I intended."

Isn't This True?

Don't you find out, afterwards, that your bowels were not acting freely and naturally?

Take two or three pills—once. After that, only one, until your're all right.

A Quaint Old Clipping.

A young Fellow, of the City of Bristol, being in London lately, was, out of Curiosity, led to see the Lunatics at Bedlam. His first Approach was to the Cell of a poor Man, to whom he addressed himself thus—"So ho! what brings thee here?" The miserable Object remaining silent, he repeated his Question, and was answered only by a Languishing Look, which so enraged the Visitant, that he immediately spit in the Man's Face through the Grate. This caused the Lunatic gently to wipe his Face wit n Whisp of Straw, and raising his drooping Head, he made this calm, sage and sensible Reply—"I am here, Sir, because God deprived me of that Blessing which you never enjoyed."

Habits.

Imagine Hercules as oarsman in a rotten boat; what can he do there but by the very force of his stroke expedite the ruin of his craft? Take care, then, of the timbers of your boat and avoid all practices likely to introduce either wet or dry rot among them. And this is not to be accomplished by desultory or intermittent efforts of the will, but by the formation of habits. The will, no doubt, has sometimes to put forth its strength in order to strangle or crush the special temptation. But the formation of right habits is essential to your permanent security. They diminish your chance of falling when assailed and they augment your chance of recovery when overthrown.—John Tyndall.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

The Post of Danger.

The Sieur de Joinville in his memoirs of St. Louis tells us that a certain man, sore beset by the pressure of temptation, sought counsel from the bishop of Paris, "whose Christian name was William." And this wise William of Paris said to him:

"The castle of Montlhery stands in the safe heart of France, and no invading hosts assail it. But the castle of La Rochelle in Poitou stands on the line of battle. Day and night it must be guarded from assault, and it has suffered grievously. Which, gentleman, think you, the king holds nigh in favor, the governor of Montlhery or the governor of La Rochelle? The post of danger is the post of glory, and he who is sorely wounded in the combat is honored by God and man."—Agnes Repplier in Atlantic Monthly.

The Fourth Officer.

"I've been on a bridge of a ship since I was fourteen. I don't know how to breathe inside a house," he said. One day to lend some kind of life, and as I sat there thinking it occurred to me that, even if it was poorly paid and at times lonely, there was something very sane and useful and good about the life of the fourth officer. In a little while he would look at his watch and exclaim a trifle diffidently, but with an unmistakable recumption of authority: "It's 10 o'clock. You must go now." Then he would almost instantly fall asleep, sleep for four hours, spend four more alone with the trackless waters and the southern stars, bathe, breakfast and begin another day with a fit body, clear brain, steady nerves and untroubled eyes.—Flandran's Essays.

DIET AND DIGESTION.

Length of Time Different Foods Remain in the Stomach.

Few people could make an accurate guess as to the length of time different foods remain in the stomach. The popular ideas as to what are the most digestible foods are all wrong, or nearly so. In eating chicken, for instance, one imagines that he is sure of a rapid digestion, and yet chicken meat remains in the stomach, under normal conditions, for four hours. Duck, which is generally supposed to be much more difficult to digest than chicken, remains for only two hours.

A hard boiled egg lasts for four hours, which is much longer than the average, whereas boiled fish remains for only an hour and a half.

It is a very common mistake to suppose that well boiled beef is very easily digested, while as a matter of fact it remains in the stomach for six hours, which is longer than any other common article of food. Tripe, on the other hand, remains for only one hour in the stomach and is one of the easiest of all foods to digest.

A period of one and a half hours is required for apples, celery, cheese and oysters, while twice this time is required by rye bread, onions, sausage or raw milk.—Boston Herald.

Something Suitable.

"When a statesman has something to say, let him say it," said a congressman. "But this continual getting up and talking on every subject under the sun just for the sake of getting one's name in the papers—well, that sort of thing gives statesmanship a bad name.

"A deputation visited a jeweler's.

"'Yes, sir; yes, sir.' And the jeweler rubbed his hands.

"'It's for a senator.'

"'In that case, sir,' said the jeweler, 'you will want something with a long spout.'"—Chicago Herald.

The Riming Speller.

A correspondent mentions the difficulty experienced by budding authors in spelling words in which dipthongs "ei" and "ie" appear. An easy manner to recall the order of precedence of the vowels is contained in an ancient rime:

"I" before "e"
Except after "c"
Or when sounded like "a"
In "neighbor" and "weigh."

Palpitation of the Heart and Nerve Troubles

WERE CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills

When the heart begins to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beat fast for a time, then so slow as to seem almost to stop, it causes great anxiety and alarm and the least excitement or exertion seems to affect it.

Many people are kept in a state of morbid fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable through this unnatural action of the heart.

To all sufferers from heart troubles we would advise the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, which by their action in strengthening the heart and regulating the beat remove all the distressing conditions, and impart vigor and vitality to the system.

Mrs. Thomas Davidson, Mount Brydges, Ont., writes: "I have been a great sufferer in the past with nerve troubles and palpitation of the heart. I tried several remedies, but without any good results. My son came in one day and advised me to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. After using one and a half boxes, I am fully recovered, and am in a perfect state of health, thanks to your valuable medicine."

There is hardly a country in the world where the pipe is not smoked in one form or another. In many villages of the northwest provinces of India are to be found public hookahs for the use and comfort of travelers. Every one has heard of the North American's pipe of peace. General Blucher's pipe smoking was of a very different character. He appointed a man to the post of "pipe master," whose duty it was to fill a long clay pipe and hand it to the general before every engagement. Blucher would then enjoy a few puffs, give back the pipe and gallop into the firing line.

Cities Render Practical Help

IT is not often that the residents of a city have an opportunity of seeing farming operations on a large scale carried on right at their own doors. Even in Western Canada, where hundreds of thousands of acres of virgin land are being turned over and cultivated in order to raise increased crops of wheat and other food grains to supply the needs of the Allies, the spectacle witnessed by the citizens of Calgary, Alberta, recently was an unusual one. Not far from the centre of the city—about a mile from the city hall to be more exact—two hundred acres of vacant land were to be put under the plow. The use of the land had been granted to the city of Calgary through the courtesy of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, the owners.

But how was such a tract of land to be plowed when all the available machinery was being used to the utmost capacity in the country; when the demand for all kinds of machinery is so great that it cannot be delivered to the farmers fast enough. That was the question asked by many of the city fathers. The implement companies came to the rescue. A day was set when the work should be begun. Telephone and telegraph wires were put into operation. And by the date set seventeen tractors and the requisite plows and other implements were got together. One large tractor rolled sixty miles over the country in order to participate in the event.

Seldom has such an array of farm machinery been concentrated on an area of two hundred acres. Never, perhaps, has such an area been broken and cultivated in shorter time. Although there was no competition, all engaged were animated by the good they were doing in the cause of greater production. Furthermore, the machinery was wanted in the country, and it must not tarry in the city. Unfortunately, rain prevented the work being completed in one day, an achievement which, if it had been accomplished, would no doubt have constituted a record not easily surpassed.

A crop of oats, potatoes and flax is now grown on the land and it is hoped that this will add considerably to the production now so earnestly desired. The illustrations show the workers on the land.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Beecher Street

By R. RAY BAKER

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

If Ethel Drayton had done some real reasoning instead of leaping at conclusions and acting on impulse, it is likely that her bark of romance, with Clif Eldridge in command, would have sailed serenely down the river of agreeableness into the sea of matrimony without encountering a storm. On the other hand, that kind of journey would not have been real romance—it would have lacked zest—so perhaps it is just as well that Herman Hartell came over to Ethel's desk that dreary, rainy afternoon in April and unfolded the secret.

"I have something to say that is very disagreeable to me," began Hartell as he brushed a hand caressingly over his miniature moustache and looked down at Ethel's curly brown hair coiled on the back of her head in a business-like knob that served as a pencil holder. "Nevertheless," he went on, "I feel in duty bound to say it."

Ethel jerked a sheet of paper from her typewriter and turned her black eyes up at the head shipping clerk. The tiny, bristling ridge of hair on Hartell's upper lip forced a smile to her face, but this was dispelled when Hartell explained:

"It's about Clifford. You see, last night—"

While this conversation was taking place, the subject of the remarks sat on a high stool at the other side of the Lewis Wholesale Paper company's shipping office and poured over a file of orders. Out of a corner of his eye he saw the head shipping clerk approach the stenographer's desk, and he frowned.

Hartell leaned over Ethel's chair as he revealed the secret, and Cliff ruffled his flaxen hair with one hand and thrummed on his desk with the other.

Half an hour later Cliff slipped from his stool and into his light overcoat. Carrying his hat, he approached Ethel, who was still busy at the typewriter. He passed and smiled pleasantly, but she continued rattling the keys.

"You needn't trouble yourself to wait for me," she informed him in icy tones without pausing in her work or looking up. "I'll be a little late, and Mr. Hartell has promised to see me home."

Cliff's smile vanished. Before he had a chance to reply, she had slipped a ring from a finger of her left hand and extended it toward him. She looked into his eyes with a stare encrusted with ice.

"I can't wear this any longer," she said, "after the way you have acted lately. I have heard that all men must sow wild oats, but I assure you that my man won't. If you must gamble and carouse, you can't expect to become my husband. I have learned all about your going to a saloon or gambling den on Beecher street almost every night, and that's enough for me. Good-night."

Cliff stumbled down the steps to the street and walked three blocks, heedless of the pouring rain, before he came to himself and found the ring clasped in his hand. Then he stopped dead still in the middle of a street crossing, undecided whether to leap in the river or go back and throw Herman Hartell from the roof of the six-story Lewis building. He decided to do neither; instead, he headed for Beecher street.

Ethel completed her work and was escorted to her rooming place by Hartell. At the door she took his hand and said earnestly:

"You don't know how I appreciate the revelation you have made to me. I know it must have been hard for you to come and tell me about seeing Clifford go into that terrible place so many times; and I am grateful."

"Don't mention it, please," protested Hartell, striving unsuccessfully to reach his mustache with his tongue. "I couldn't bear to see you throw yourself away on a worthless fellow. I saw a good many blocks by cutting through Beecher street on the way home and that's how I happened to notice him there."

The next day Ethel failed to appear at the office, telephoning that she was suffering from a headache. The succeeding day was Sunday. The rain had ceased but the weather had turned chilly and the sun hid behind clouds. Ethel listened in vain for the doorbell or the telephone, hoping Cliff would appear as he had done each Sunday for more than a year. True, she had told him it was all over; nevertheless, she had expected him to come and make some kind of a protest and attempt an explanation. The morning passed very gloomily for her.

Early in the afternoon the landlady summoned her to the telephone, and Ethel tripped over a chair in her haste to answer the call.

"This is Mr. Hartell," said the voice on the wire. "Could I call on you this afternoon?"

"I'm sorry," she replied, "but I'm too ill to entertain." And she went back to her room to gaze thoughtfully at a picture of a flaxen-haired, smiling youth.

About five o'clock a delegation of three girls from her Sunday school class called on her.

"We were anxious to learn if you were ill," said one, "and if not we wanted you to go with us to visit a poor family that the class has decided to help."

Ethel took decided interest in the excursion when it was explained that the family lived on Beecher street.

They walked past the gloomy, rickety wooden dwellings, through throngs of dirty urchins who hooted and made faces at them, and finally came to a dingy opening that proved to be the entrance to a flight of stairs.

Up these steps the girls stumbled, their way lighted by only a few rays that sifted through the cracks in the flimsy outside wall. One of the party knocked at the door that confronted them at the top of the stairs.

Footsteps sounded on the floor, evidently those of a child. Some one fumbled at the knob and the door was swung open to reveal a chubby, round-faced boy of about four years.

A maimed, disreputable toy bear was suspended by its leg from one hand of the tot, who blinked curiously at his four visitors. The opening of the door permitted a warm, pungent odor to penetrate the hall and each of the girls involuntarily shuddered.

"Who is it?" called a voice from within—a weak, plaintive voice, that of a woman.

The tot, who was clothed in a nondescript suit of several materials and colors, turned and called:

"Tree dirls."

"Come right in," answered the voice. "I am ill and cannot come to the door."

The girls entered and noticed that the pungent odor increased. The room was permeated with an unhealthful warmth, caused by keeping all the windows closed and thus conserving the heat radiated from the small wood stove.

The designs on the wall paper had all but become eradicated by accumulation of smoke, grease and dust. On one wall was a framed picture of a young man and woman, evidently a bridal couple. A row of picture postcards was the only other decoration.

A table occupied the center of the room, and nearby were a three-legged stool and a dilapidated rocking chair. The floor was covered with a faded rag carpet.

"Here I am," called the woman, from the dingiest corner of the room. "Don't look around. I'm too ill to keep the place clean, and Jimmy here is too young."

The girls found her lying on a narrow bed, or rather, a bunk. She was frail and emaciated, but she carried a pleasant smile of greeting.

Jimmy hovered near, still clinging to the bear. Ethel, a lover of children, picked him up in her arms.

"My, my, what clothes!" she murmured to herself, but Jimmy overheard her.

"I'm donna have new suit," he announced. "Man's donna bring it."

"Who do you—" Ethel began, but at that moment Jimmy, hearing familiar sounds on the stairs, scrambled from her arms and dashed toward the door.

"He hears his man," explained the woman on the bed. "Nearly every night he brings us food, and sometimes candy or something to wear. He found Jimmy on the street one night and came home with him. Jimmy told me his man was going to bring him a new suit today."

The door was flung open and a young man entered, placed a bundle on the stool and gathered the little boy in his arms.

"My man," breathed Jimmy, hugging the newcomer, while Ethel started forward in amazement upon recognizing him.

"Cliff!" she cried.

So it was decreed that a home of poverty should be the setting for a proud, sensitive, impulsive girl to ask forgiveness—and get it.

Let Children Pick Clothes.

Everyone remembers when he or she was a child how irritating it was to have our parents pick all our clothes without giving us any choice in the matter. In the Woman's Home Companion a writer says: "Now, what I am asking for the boys is this: Take your sons with you when you buy their clothing. Consult their tastes somewhat. Don't let them select anything ridiculous, but give them a choice of half a dozen sensible coats or hats or whatever it may be. Don't scold them too much if they come home with the straps on their bloomer trousers unhooked so the trouser legs are almost long. No doubt the captain of the baseball team and 'all the other fellows' wear theirs that way. Or if your boy comes up the street with his cap over his right ear, while you are telling him that he looks 'just like a little street tough' remember it was the style that you, yourself followed last winter, and that 'what all the fellows do' means just as much to Johnny as Paris notes do to you."

AN INDIAN MARATHON.

In the early days of Ehrenberg, Ariz., a man was frightfully burned by kerosene. There was no physician and no drug store in the town, and so a noted Mohave runner who lived near by was hastily engaged to run to Fort Yuma, a government post directly across the Colorado river from the present town of Yuma.

The distance from Ehrenberg to Fort Yuma, as the crow flies, is sixty miles. By the shortest trail that the Indian could take it was at least seventy-five miles, and he had to swim the river once each way. The Indian was to get $10 for the trip and $10 additional if he returned in twenty-four hours. He prepared quickly for the undertaking and disappeared down the trail.

Within twenty-four hours he was back in Ehrenberg, bringing with him the packages of medicine for which he had been sent. Each package bore the labels of the Yuma dispensary. There was no living being along the trail between the two places from whom he could have obtained any assistance whatever. That Indian ran 150 miles in less than twenty-four hours over a barren, stony desert, interspersed with deep, dry gulches and ravines, in and out of which he was forced to climb, and in addition he swam the Colorado river twice.

When he got his $20 he bought some of his favorite food, crawled into the shelter of some mesquite trees, ate and slept alternately for two days and then reappeared in perfect condition.—From A. M. Welles' "Reminiscent Ramblings."

A TRAGIC EXPERIMENT.

Concerning pythons, the following is a true story: A young lady in England for a long time resisted her lover's entreaties to go out to India with him as his wife. She had a horror of the wild animals she believed she might encounter there, especially serpents. At length, however, after he had issued a sort of ultimatum, she consented to accompany him. She did not, however, leave her fears behind her and lived in constant terror of some day meeting what she so intensely feared. Her husband did his best to laugh her fears away, but without avail. Then he resolved to try more drastic means.

A huge python was killed in the neighborhood of his bungalow. Without telling his wife anything about it he ordered the reptile to be brought into the drawing room and coiled up as if asleep on the hearth rug. Then he went out and called his wife, telling her to go into the drawing room and that he would join her in a few minutes. Soon after he heard a dreadful scream. "That will cure her of her fear of serpents," he smiled to himself and purposely delayed his entry. When at last he went into the drawing room he saw his wife lying dead on the floor, and coiled around her was another huge python, the mate to the one that lay dead on the hearth rug.—St. James' Gazette.

Jewish Flags.

The Zionists adopted a flag made up of a white ground with a blue horizontal stripe on each side and the shield of David in the center.

In reference to the direction from the book of Numbers, "Every man of the children of Israel shall pitch by his own standard, with the ensign of their father's house," the Midrash explains that the emblems and colors corresponded to the twelve precious stones set in the breast plate of the high priest. The colors for the different tribes were as follows: Reuben, red; Simeon, green; Levi, tricolor—white, black and red; Judah, sky blue; Issachar, black; Zebulun, white; Dan, blue; Gad, gray; Naphtali, wine color; Asher, pearl color; Ephraim and Manasseh, jet black; Benjamin, all the above colors combined.—Philadelphia Press.

Keeps Down Malaria.

A very small fish known as "million" is said to keep the island of Barbados free from malaria by eating the fever carrying mosquito in the early stages of its development. Thousands of these fishes are being taken to South Africa in the effort to stamp out malaria there.

Very Different.

SINGING BEFORE ROYALTY.

The Part Mary Garden Found to Be the Very Hardest.

Mary Garden, the famous opera singer, says that it bores her to sing before kings. Her highly personal comments on some of the royalty of Europe reproduced below are taken from an article in the American Magazine in which she gives an intimate and extended account of her experiences on the stage:

"Singing before royalty is perhaps more of a professional than a social distinction. I have done it many times, but it bores me to distraction. It is such a nuisance. I never sang for the czar. But I did sing before the English court, the old court of Edward and Alexandra. The king slept through it all, as heavy a sleep as I have ever seen. But the queen would always pat his hand at the time to applaud and he would wake up.

"The king of Greece, a brother of Alexandra, was a special friend of mine. He used often to come to where I was singing. He told his sister of his admiration for me, and she had me come to Windsor to sing. While there I would sing and courtesy and walk off again.

"I am afraid I'm an anarchist in my heart. I don't love to courtesy. There are some who are not kings—such as Marconi, who has done big things—to whom I would go down on my knees because of their achievements, but I just had to get my courage in my two hands to courtesy to the king of England. It went against me."

Rapid Sightseeing.

Europeans are wont to talk of Americans who rush through Europe with a guidebook in one hand and a railroad timetable in the other, but an Englishman overheard on a Fifth avenue bus the other day was in a class by himself for speed.

"I've been up to the Metropolitan museum," he volunteered to a seatmate. "Rally fine place, but big. Took me an hour to see everything in it."—New York Tribune.

Old Winter Coughs Now Easily Cured

A New Remedy Now Cures Without the Use of Cough Syrups or Drugs.

Just think of it—you can clear away that hard, racking cough, drive it completely out of the system, make yourself perfectly well by the new breathing cure that employs no medicine at all.

You wonder how; very simple, indeed; you simply breathe in through a Catarrhozone Inhaler, rich balsamic essences that heal and soothe away the cough in a few hours' time.

In using Catarrhozone you bathe the lining of the nose and throat with that powerful antiseptic of the Blue Gum Tree of Australia, which is probably the surest cold and cough cure in the world to-day.

Clarence E. Cromwell, writing from Medicine Hat, says: "To cure a sneezing cold in about ten minutes the one thing I know of to do it is Catarrhozone. To relieve an irritated throat quickly, nothing can excel Catarrhozone. It simply eats up a cough or cold of any kind. I know of colds that have hung on for months that Catarrhozone cured quickly. Nearly every man I know carries a Catarrhozone Inhaler with him day and night, and in this country it makes a wonderful protection against all winter ills."

Get the dollar outfit, including the hard rubber inhaler, and medication to last two months; medium size 50c., sample size 25c., at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

THE ITALIANS CAPTURE 45,000 PRISONERS

AUSTRIAN STRIKERS SHOUT "DOWN WITH GERMANY"

AUSTRIAN FORCES ARE CUT TO PIECES BY ITALIAN TROOPS ON PIAVE RIVER FRONT

LARGE NUMBER OF PRISONERS CAPTURED

Forty Five Thousand Prisoners and vast war booty, including an enormous number of Guns have been captured by the Italians.

(Special to Examiner)

ROME, 24—Italian Cavalry has crossed the Middle Piave in addition to the Bridging of the lower river and is chasing the fleeing Austrian troops along the east bank, it was announced today.

Two thousand Austrians were captured at Montello last night.

Numerous squads of our bombers have crossed the river, where our artillery and aircraft are hammering the enemy.

Considerable bodies of our troops have reached the old Piave lines in large sectors and are harassing the retireing enemy.

Nine Austrian Divisions Reported Cut to Pieces.

(Canadian Press)

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The capture of forty thousand Austrian prisoners with large number of guns and enormous stores of material has been made by the Italians in their counter offensive which has driven the Austrian invaders back across Piave river in veritable disorder. The Italians' offensive took the place of the defensive on Sunday and Austrians are still in flight, says a despatch.

After violent artillery preparation which destroyed all bridges except one, the infantry moved forward with irresistable impulse. The flooded Piave river contains thousands of enemy corpses. Divisions which had passed the Piave were decimated by our artillery and infantry.

One report says, nine divisions were annihilated.

Montello was attacked in three columns. Enemy lines at Cenna Dolla, Madonna and Nervessa were smashed and reoccupied. From Maserada to Serdona, Austrians after early resistance were forced to retreat to the left bank. Battle continues fiercely in some sectors. American airmen displayed great bravery.

AUSTRIAN DIVISIONS HAVE BEEN WIPED OUT

Italian artillery action has destroyed all but one bridge thrown across the Piave, during the Austrian advance it was stated, and the withdrawal of the enemy is being effected only with tremendous losses. Several divisions have been practically wiped out.

Entire battalions attempting to force the swollen streams have been swept away, the cables stated and the muddy waters are choked with Austrian dead. The attack on the Austrian forces remaining on the Montello began yesterday and completetd today was carried by three Italian columns. Picked Austrian troops ordered to hold the line from Maserada to Sardona to protect the Austrian retreat have been completely defeated after a desperate stand and are being pursued by Italians on the left bank of the Piave.

The Word Piave is Being Written in Blood

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, June 24.—Cruelly harrassed by a steady and accurate artillery fire, compelled to face bayonet attacks by Italians and being constantly bombed by Allied aviators, flying low in defiance of machine gun and anti-aircraft fire, Austrians have been fighting recently with the courage of despair. Local counter attacks have been launched without regard for losses against Allied trenches on Montello Plateau, but have been everywhere broken by granite resistance interposed to foe's progress. The crest of the Piave river flood passed yesterday, but the falling waters came too late to relieve the positions of the Austrians. The inundation went sixteen feet above the low water mark.

Italian Pressure on Austrian Troops Has Been Constant

Along the lower Piave the Italian pressure has been constant. The tired enemy has been given no rest although fighting has been intermittent owing to fact that neither side has been able to see more than fifty yards through heavy bushes and tall swamp grasses growing in lowlands.

The heroic deeds of Italians in fighting upon Carso Plateau, east of Isonzo, are recalled by repeated examples of valor and endurance shown in present struggle. With Italian armies along the front there is only stern intention to do or die. There is no effervesent boasting, no victory chants, but realization that harder fighting may yet come.

The word Piave is being written in blood. Red letters on Austrian hearts, said dust covered sweat stained Italian officers who has been fighting every day for weeks with scarcely any rest.

ITALIANS HAVE BROKEN THROUGH AUSTRIAN LINES.

WASHINGTON, June 24—(Special to Examiner)—Counter attacking in the face of German reserves, the Italians have broken through the Austrian lines at Celle Bella and are threatening the retreat of the enemy after crossing the Paive, an official report Rome, announced today.

ITALIAN TROOPS CAPTURED A LARGE QUANTITY OF WAR MATERIALS ALSO MANY GUNS AND PRISONERS

(Canadian Press)

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, June 24.—The great retreat by the Austrians along the Piave front continued under cover of darkness during the night. The retreating troops left cannons behind them. Italian detachments are pursuing enemy, east of Piave.

Italian troops have crossed old channel of the Piave river, west of main stream and recaptured several of their old positions there. From Capo Sile, other detachments are advancing toward the main stream of the river.

The Italians have thrown numerous bombing detachments across the main stream where artillery and aircraft are hammering the enemy.

When it was observed that the Austrians had begun a retrograde movement, the Italians began to attack virtually all along the Piave river line from Montello on north, well towards the mouth of the river.

Belgians Tried By Court Martial

Sixteen Were Sentenced to Death.

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, June 24. — Forty-four Belgians were tried by court-martial at Ghent on charges of transmitting to the Allies certain papers concerning the German army and the effects of air raids on the Bruges canal, the Echo De Belgie declared today.

Sixteen were sentenced to death, five were acquitted and the remainder sentenced to prison terms of two to twenty years.

One Of The Oldest Who Registered

Undoubtedly one of the oldest residents to present himself for registration last week was Mr. Wm. Hayes, aged ninety-three years, who for a number of years has made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Carpenter, Concession Street. It had been arranged to have some one call at the house to register Mr. Hayes, but the nonogenarian had other ideas. He quietly disappeared, and was eventually found in the registration booth at the house of Mrs. J. C. Anderson, where he had given all the particulars required of him under the National Service scheme.

Bolshevik Doctrine

People in Vienna Are Hungry Enough to Accept Bolshevism —The Front Lines At Home Are Breaking Up

A FINE FEAT

(By William G. Shepherd.)

WASHINGTON, June 24. — The Bolsheviki doctrine has spread into Austria. What Leon Totszky started in Russia, is working in the Austrian army. It is a doctrine that takes hold in a hungry, a down-trodden land like Austria. The food ration in Vienna makes people sufficiently hungry to accept Bolshevikism. The tremendous military feat of the Italian army is not to be discredited in any way. But it is only fair to say the Russian doctrine has had its part in what has happened along the Piave. The once Bolsheviki-tricked Italians have done as fine a thing in coming back and putting victory before Bolsheviki beliefs as they have done even in a military way. Their sanctity and fidelity is proven. The front line trenches in this war are really back at home. If the line breaks back home, the second line trenches, up where the guns are sounding, will break also, just as the Austrian firing line has fallen away before the revengeful Italian smashes.

Italians have played a magnificent part. She has more than evened the score with Austria, but the Russian docrine of rights of separate peoples to govern themselves, and the American doctrine of government only with consent of the government, was weakened Austria as a fighting country.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, June 24.— The Associated Press war summary to-day says: The Italians' victory over the Austrians on the Piave front appears likely to assume proportions of veritable triumph for the Italians and disaster of great magnitude for the defeated enemy.

There is every indication that the Austrian "hunger offensive" has been a forlorn hope for several days. The effect of the defeat on internal conditions of Austria-Hungary, when once the news is made public, can only be conjectured, but it may mean that the Italians have dealt the enemy a harder blow than merely involved in the military feat of pushing him across the Piave.

Young Men Are Not Liable

Captain Who Led Raid on Guelph College Transferred to Ottawa —Raid Was Conducted in an Offensive Manner

Canadian Press:

OTTAWA, June 24.— According to an intimation, a statement of the Militia Department to-day, none of the young men at the Jesuit College at Guelph will be liable for military service under the Act, judging from the evidence submitted by the authorities.

The Department further says that Captain Macaulay, who led the raid, has been transferred to Ottawa, no charges have been laid against him in connection with the raid, but it was made in an offensive manner, and at an untimely hour.

A CORRECTION.

Investigation Will Follow Publication of Marriage Notice.

In connection with the marriage announcement in Saturday's issue of Miss A. Reader to J. Anderson, it was stated that Mrs. David J. Latimer, of Toronto, was present at the request of Miss Anderson and her father, Mr. A. Anderson, to draw the reader's attention that they claimed entirely incorrect.

The copy came to the Examiner and looked genuine, but it now appears to have been sent in to the paper by some one who, if they are found out, will find a police court case before them. The matter is now in the hands of the police for investigation.

Political Crisis.

Specia lto The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, June 24.—Emperor Karl has refused to accept the resignation of the Austrian Cabinet, according to a dispatch from Vienna today. The political crisis is expected to be solved by the reconstruction of the Ministry.

The Hungarian Cabinet is reported to be about to resign. Count Tischa, former Premier, will form a new ministry at Budapest, a dispatch says.

Hurried Back.

Specia lto The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, June 24.— Emperor Karl hurried to the front Sunday according to a Vienna dispatch to-day. The last previous report said that Karl was at Austrian Healquarters, north of the Asiago Plateau. It is probable that he had returned to Vienna during the food demonstration and ministerial crisis.

Street Cars Stop Before Crossings In The Paved Area

Street cars, commencing to-day, do not cross street intersections in the paved area, to stop at corners. Henceforth they stop on the near side of the corners, a regulation that should be remembered by the public. At the Charlotte street transfer this new practice will be particularly noticeable. Southbound cars will stop at the south side of the Charlotte Street corner and northbound cars at the south side. The old rule is simply reversed, and although there were quite a few citizens who seemed to be aware of the change this morning there was no confusion.

Huns Prepare A Peace Move

Tremendous Effort is Being Made to Bring About a Unity of Purpose Regarding Russia

Specia lto The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, June 24. — Germany is preparing for a vigorous peace move at the expense of the Russian government, the authorities here are convinced. To meet this anticipated move, a tremendous effort is being made to bring about a unity of purpose in Russia between the British and French with Russia.

An Alternative.

The need for some agreed policy is admitted. Germany, by launching a peace offensive, offering to give up Belgium, Northern France and make satisfactory settlements with Italy provided she is allowed to expand in Russia, would confront the French and British governments with a very serious problem.

The time has come, Allied diplomats say, when President Wilson, if he will not sanction Japanese intervention in Russia must come forward with some other alternative if Russia is to be saved.

Lives With A Fractured Skull And Injured Spine

Employee of Quaker Oats Company Was Severely Injured Saturday

A fractured skull, injury to his brain, dislocated shoulder, injured spine, fractured ribs and crushed foot, were the injuries sustained by Max. Robichand, a mill-wright, employed at the Quaker Oats, when he fell about 12 feet at 4:30 on Saturday afternoon.

He was engaged in his work on the drying spans in the new building at the Quaker Oats on the seventh floor when either he missed his footing or the scaffolding fell hurling him down from the seventh to the sixth floor onto a pile of iron.

His fellow-employees rushed to him, and Dr. Amys and Dr. Mann were called. Bellehem's ambulance took him to Nicholls Hospital where miraculous medical skill has kept him alive, and to-day, at a late hour he is apparently resting easier.

Mrs. Robichaud arrived in the city from Pembroke, where the injured man's home is, to-day.

Registration Has Not Been Totalled

Local Figures Will Not Be Available For Several Days

Saturday, the last day of registration, was very slow at most of the booths, indicating that the majority of the people had turned out in good time to register as soon as cards were available.

Asked this morning for the total registration in the city, Mr. F. H. Dobbin, local registrar, said that he had no idea of the number of registrants, and would not have for several days. Indicating a pile of unopened parcels, he said, "There is all that to be gone through before I can have any idea of what has been done." The country returns are not in yet.

A Comparison.

HELP THE PLAYGROUNDS.

The question before the people of Peterborough this week is not whether or not Peterborough can afford to subscribe $1,2000 for supervised playgrounds. The real issue is whether or not the city can afford to do without these playgrounds.

The latter question will be answered in the negative by all citizens who have made themselves familiar with the work of the playgrounds during the past couple of summers. Supervised playgrounds are not a fad or an experiment—they are a necessity and the funds should be readily forthcoming during the canvass which commenced to-day.

The fact that the fathers of a large proportion of the children who patronize the grounds are overseas is an important factor in the appeal for assistance. These little ones are deprived of a father's care and guidance, and the instruction they receive at the supervised playgrounds is doubly necessary and beneficial in their case. The playgrounds mean safe rational, health-giving leisure hours for the little ones, and they mean in addition that not only are little bodies developed and improved but characters are also built up and strengthened The supervisors are experts in guiding the amusements of the youngsters, so that the hours spent at the playgrounds are not only happy ones, but are useful as well.

With the war's heavy drain upon the manhood of Canada, the proper development of the children should be looked upon as a sacred duty. The are our greatest asset, and surely $1,200 is a small investment to ask from the people of Peterborough for this all important work.

THE AUSTRIAN DEFEAT.

The first phase of the battle on the Italian front has ended, says an official announcement from the Italian headquarters. The result has been a complete victory for Italy, and the allied troops who have been fighting side by side with her troops. Austria, driven by hunger and revolt at home, and yielding to German pressure, has made a desperate attempt to break the Italian lines and overrun the Italian provinces of Venetia and Lombardy, but her gigantic effort has ended in almost total failure. The battle of the past week was found quite a different enterprise by the Austrians than their attack last autumn when the work of secret agents had undermined the morale of part of the Italian army, and left an opening for the enemy to pour through. There were no such breaches in the defending line on this occasion—the battle had to be fought on the field, and not with secret agents, and in spite of the masses of men and guns that the Austrians hurled against General Diaz's forces, a few miles was the most that could be gained—the line held like a stone-wall everywhere and thousands of dead Austrians testified to the valour of the allied defence. Austria is going to pieces at home—her huge assault that was intended to sweep aside the Italian army and force Italy out of the war, has failed in its first desperate phase at least. What is the next step? Will Germany come to the rescue and send reinforcements that she can ill spare from her fast disappearing reserves on the western front, or will she let her ally go down in disaster? Time alone will answer that question. In the meantime thousands of American troops are arriving each week in France—the reserves of the allies are growing steadily larger, and their reinforcements are the finest kind of fighting material, in the prime of age and physical fitness, and needing only the finishing touches of training to take their place in the allied battle line.

The latest reports from the battle front show that the Austrian campaign has ended in complete disaster for the enemy. The Austrian forces have been defeated along the whole line between Mortello and the Adriatic and forced to flee across the Piave in wild disorder, closely followed by the victorious Italians. Already 45,000 prisoners have been reported captured by the Italians, with vast stores of war booty.

READING FOR SOLDIERS.

The appeal of The Examiner for some local patriotic society to interest itself in the securing of a supply of reading matter for Peterboro soldiers in Canadian training camps, has been promptly answered by the local branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society. The matter is now put squarely up to the public. In calling attention to the fact that there were many dull hours in the life of the soldier in training, especially at Petawawa, which is far away from any good sized town, The Examiner expressed its confidence that the citizens of Peterboro would eagerly furnish the supply of books if some local society would see that they were forwarded. The Red Cross Society has accepted our view of the situation and have provided the means, so that nothing remains for the public but to make good the confidence that has been shown.

All that is necessary is to bring your contribution to the Public Library, where a special table is being placed for the reception of your gifts, and the Red Cross Society will undertake the work of packing and forwarding the books to Peterboro soldiers.

Mr. F. M. DelaFosse's admirable letter on the subject in the local press last week, thoroughly covered the ground, and it is to be hoped that there will be an immediate and hearty response. In the United States these book drives have had remarkable success. In all parts of the country thousands of splendid volumes have been secured, and sent to the training camps. Here in Peterboro with all our investment of flesh and blood in the war, and with all our money gifts, too, the matter of supplying reading matter for our soldiers has been neglected.

The present campaign, however, presents an opportunity to make up for the indifference in the past, and there should be a liberal response to the request. Mr. Dela Fosse rightly points out the need of providing good books, and of including volumes of travel, researches in all branches of science, and similar works, in addition to an adequate supply of choice fiction. In every household there are books which having been read by all the family, are stored away, and seldom taken down from the shelves. Bring some of these into the Public Library. They will be appreciated by the boys in Canada's army.

And above all things don't make the mistake of the kind-hearted but misguided lady who presented the Great War Veterans with several copies of the Ladies' Home Journal of 1904 vintage as suitable reading matter for returned soldiers.

THE KAISER WRONG AGAIN.

The Kaiser is quite right when he says that two opposing principles are at war in this world conflict, but he is woefully wrong in his interpretation of these principles, says the New York Herald. It is perfectly true that this is a contest of ideas rather than of nations. On the one side is democracy, fought for by the peoples of twenty-one nationalities; on the other is autocracy, represented by army-ridden Germany, decrepit Austria, ambitious Bulgaria, and retrograde Turkeq. The struggle must be fought to a finish. The world cannot exist longer half autocratic and half democratic.

With a curious inversion of facts, the Kaiser talks about "German principles of right, freedom, honour and morality which must be upheld." If the violation of Belgium, the sinking of the Lusitania, the submarine and poison gas attacks, and innumerable other crimes are in accordance with "German principles of right, freedom, honour and morality," the sooner those who stand for such principles are crushed, the better it will be for the world.

The Kaiser accuses the Allies of the "idolatry of mammon." In other words, he asserts that they put the acquisition of wealth above all else. Now, the wealth of nations is acquired largely by commerce and industry, of which justice and fair dealing are the very foundations. They by no means exclude ideals of right and freedom but are complementary to them. As a matter of fact, her enemies have always shown more idealism than Germany. France in her revolution gave the world the declaration of the Rights of Man. Britain, in her Magna Charta, laid the cornerstone of civil liberty. United Italy showed the idealism of national aspirations that would not be denied. The United States which put down slavery within its own domains, has ever set an example of freedom to the world, so that the Stars and Stripes have become a beacon light for oppressed peoples everywhere.

When has Germany ever fought for freedom? For centuries Prussia and her sister States have been the grasping, covetous disturbers of Europe, and have reinforced militarism abroad while carrying torture and slavery o every German colony.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Nine hundred thousand United States' troops have already gone overseas. The allied forces in France are growing steadily, while Hindenburg's strength is waning.

"Not only is our sea power increasing but our grip on the enemy is firmer than at any previous period of the war," so writes Archibald Hurd, the famous naval expert.

Remember the call for books for soldiers. Bring your offering to the Public Library, and the Red Cross will see that the reading matter is sent.

The Playgrounds are a necessity—not a fad. Every citizen should be glad to contribute to this most worthy cause this week.

Medicine Hat used to be blamed for all the cold weather. And now the west is enjoying balmy summer breezes while down in Ontario the weather is of the only-seventeen-buying-days-beforeChristmas variety.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

GETTING AWAY FROM OUR GIRLS.

(Hamilton Times.)

Canadian girls may not relish to be told that marriages of English girls and colonial soldiers—Australians, Canadians, New Zealanders, and South Africans—are taking place at the approximate rate of nearly 2,000 a month.

THE MILITARY DRAFT.

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

The announcement that the Militia Department is going to regard men who are called by draft, but who report before the time specified, as volunteers, and therefore not to be included in the Military Service Act draft totals, means that the act will bring to the colours many more than the 100,000 men authorized. From 15 to 25 per cent. at least of the men ordered to report do so before schedule time.

TIP FOR GERMANY.

(Philadelphia Ledger.)

Said Former Ambassador J. W. Gerard, the other day: "Mr. Lansing dared the Germans to make reprisals against our men if we do not give up von Rintelen. Von Rintelen abused our hospitality, blowing up ships and factories, and if they show any more of their frightfulness, there are here, we will fry German prisoners right here in Bryant Park."

ANOTHER SOCIETY.

(Exchange.)

Mr. W. A. Fraser, the novelist, suggests the organization of a new society, whose motto will be "Never again," the members of which shall wear a button bearing the initials, "N.A.," and take the oath: "I swear never again to take the hand of a Hun in friendship or in business."

THE CATSPAW.

(Rochester Herald.)

Austria, the catspaw used by the German Kaiser to begin the war, is now helpless to end it, and about equally helpless to continue it.

NO WONDER.

(Hamilton Herald.)

With their bread ration cut down to a pound and a half a week, with the prospect of a further reduction, is it any wonder that the Viennese workmen are clamouring for peace at any price?

AN EXPERIENCED FIRM.

(Kingston Whig.)

Hiram Walker & Sons, the Walkerville distillers, will shortly begin the manufacture of aniline and other dyes. They have already had considerable experience in coloring noses.

The 93rd Band instruments have been handed over to the Great War Veterans' Association by Mr. F. W. Miller, who was appointed by the City Council to take care of them until they were disposed of. They are now in the old cavalry quarters at the Armouries, which have assigned to the Veterans for band practices, the first of which will be held on Wednesday night under the leadership of Mr. Walter Hughes. Mr. Hughes was conductor of the old 93rd Battalion Band until it was broken up overseas, and is giving his services to the Veterans in the hope that the new band will develop into an organization worthy of the soldiers.

TREE IS NOW VALUABLE

SILVER SPRUCE WAS NEGLECTED FOR A LONG TIME.

It Was Discovered to Be the Best Tree for Airplanes and the Demand of This Resident of British Columbia Forests Has Boomed Lumber Industry In That Province.

TO-DAY the silver spruce tree is king. Growing upon the Pacific slope in Washington, Oregon and Alaska and, best of all, upon the islands and the mainland of British Columbia, this tree, long a humble and obscure resident of the western forests, is now the most valued of woods.

Mahogany, teak and ebony, all these rich and proud timbers of other times, step back, give place and doff their hats to the giant conifer, for airplane builders have found this tree the one and only from which can be produced lumber which best answers the most exacting demands of the man-made bird-machines.

All in a few short months the silver spruce has leaped into the limelight. In former years under the various names of sitka, tidewater and giant spruce, this tree, which scientists speak of as picea sitchensis, brought $15 per thousand feet board measure. In 1915 from British Columbia $12,000,000 worth of it was logged.

It has long been in favor with boxmakers, particularly for those intended for fruit carrying, as the wood is light, odorless, resinless and tasteless. It was also largely used for cooperage work and in the making of huge doors for freight sheds, docks and garages, where lightness of weight and strength of frame combined were a necessity. Under the name of silver spruce it was used much in buildings for framing, sheathing, joints, subflooring and shelving. But now through the war all this is changed, and it has probably forever passed out of this class and for the present is the most desired timber on the face of the earth.

Upon the number, strength, speed and lasting qualities of airplanes may victory ultimately depend. But in spite of the tremendous strides made in improving flying machines since the war began the superiority of the silver spruce over all others for airplane construction has been a very recent discovery. And when the immense importance of securing a large quantity of it was realized quick action was taken. The British authorities made known their requirements and expert lumbermen began scouring the Pacific coast.

Hundreds of wood veterans took their little blanket rolls and went on long cruising trips throughout the northern wilderness of British Columbia. And following their reports thousands of loggers, donkey engines by the hundreds and all the paraphernalia used in the highly expert work of steam logging were rushed on to the ground.

For four months now two special trains weekly have gone from the northern part of Prince Rupert loaded with airplane timber to the factories of Eastern Canada. And in February of this year the working forces were augmented by several thousand men and more donkey engines, and the Imperial Munitions Board, which is calling for 150,000,000 feet, has established a headquarters staff at Vancouver to look after the aeronautical contracts now under way.

The silver spruce, now new named airplane spruce, is found also in Washington, Oregon and Alaska, but the finest of all grows on the Queen Charlotte Islands and the northern mainland of British Columbia, the only place in Canada where it grows. Here the world's greatest supply of this timber is located. The demand for 150,000,000 feet may be in a little way appreciated when it is made known that only 125 board feet are used in the average airplane.

The tree grows to one hundred and fifty feet in height on the average, and is forty-eight inches in diameter, though large numbers grow ten and fifteen feet in diameter with a height of two hundred feet. What makes the tree so valuable is that it grows so straight with hardly any tapering. Thus from the lumber can be made the long wing beams and other parts of the airplane, which requires straight, strong timber from sixteen to thirty-five feet in length. The silver spruce is the only tree that consistently fills this demand. Added to this it is extraordinarily even in the grain and long in the fibre, exceptionally clear, tough and strong for its weight of twenty-five pounds to the cubic foot. It does not warp or split and is nonresinous. There is also no difference between the sap and the heartwood. It is white in color and despite its toughness is easily worked.

Formerly the timber brought about $15 per thousand feet board measure. To-day it is worth fifty times that amount, or at least by the time the finished product soars in the air as part of a war machine it has cost more than a dollar a foot to manufacture. The munition board pays $125 per thousand. But this is only the beginning. Much of the log is useless. The sideboards are not shipped. In all only 20 per cent. of the entire trunk on the average is finally made up.

One of the interesting features in connection with the tremendous leap in values this timber took was the action of the British Columbia Government taken to prevent profiteering out of limits where the timber was growing. When the demand became large for airplane spruce many valuable tracts were held by private interests. To prevent holding out for a huge profit on the part of these owners the Government took over the handling of all the tracts, whether crown lands or otherwise, and so a fair price was set for all. — Rene Bache in Philadelphia Public Ledger.

THE WEATHER IN FRANCE.

Some Comparisons With Temperature In the Dominion.

Canadian soldiers on the battle fronts in France probably escape our Canadian torrid spells of summer and our blizzardly winters, extremes of heat and cold in France being less severe. They experience, however periods of sustained cold in the trenches, cold of the moist, penetrating character peculiar to the continental climate of Northern Europe, but in general no startling change from weather conditions at home.

An exhaustive study of the subject shows that winter in Northern France is not so severe from the standpoint of low temperatures, but there is a consistency of moderately cold weather which is not usually experienced in Canada. Rather low temperatures sometimes occur there, but such extremity of cold weather range about zero, Fahrenheit, to 10 degrees below.

Summer in Northern France is cool as compared with most parts of Canada, the average temperature for July and August, the warmest months, being 63 to 65 degrees. Moderately hot weather sometimes occur, but extremely high temperatures, such as occasionally are experienced in Ontario and Quebec, are unknown in France. Temperatures as high as 100 never have been reported in France, but they are very rare and they do not have the 90 to 100 spells that are common here.

With the transition from winter to spring the rapid warming up, familiar to residents in most sections of Canada, is not so noticeable in France, the average temperature for March being only 2 to 4 degrees higher than for February. April and May are moderately cool and not unpleasant, while rainfall is comparatively light, although occurring rather frequently.

The summers are pleasant as compared with much of Eastern Canada, the day temperatures being mostly moderate and the nights cool. Occasionally hot weather is experienced, but the heat is not so excessive and the heated periods are usually of short duration.

Fall also is usually pleasant, especially in September and October. The rainfall usually becomes heavier, however. Along the northern coasts of France temperatures are very similar to those of our Pacific coast, the monthly average at Dunkirk, France, and Vancouver, being identical for nearly half the months of the year and differing only slightly for other months. Over the lowlands of Northern France snow is fairly frequent and may be expected from November to April, inclusive, although it rarely attains any considerable depth on the ground. At the higher elevations of Eastern and Southern France, particularly in the mountains bordering on Germany, where the winters are long and cold, snowfall is more frequent and much heavier.

Profit In Pine Trees.

Twenty-one per cent. of the Kingdom of Norway is covered with forest—that is, about 17 million acres. Of that, about 15 million acres is productive forest. The Government owns about two million acres. The commercial forests under Government supervision comprise about one million acres. The rest, or about 12 million acres of productive forest, is private property. Seventy-five per cent. of the timber is spruce (picea excelsa), and pine (pinus silvestris) in about equal quantities, as well as some oak, ash, elm and basswood. Birch is found everywhere. The annual forest growth or increment per acre is about 21 cubic feet. Nearly all the cut timber is hauled on sleighs to the river in the winter and floated to the coast in the spring. The felling is now nearly all done by piece work, which has proved to be a great success.

The value of forest products exported is about $30,000,000 annually. Until recently the export consisted chiefly of logs and staves, but pulp, planks, boards, doors and windows, etc., have now come into prominence. The pulp represents about 50 per cent. of the export value.

The people have awakened to the importance of improved and conservative methods, and planting in the coast districts has also been encouraged. Most of it is done by school children. Douglas fir, imported as seed from the Pacific coast and raised in nurseries, is being planted quite extensively in some parts of Norway. Forestry is taught in all public schools and instructors give lectures in the country districts.—Canadian Forestry Journal.

Constantinople.

Constantinople was known as Lygos until 658 B. C., when it blossomed forth into Byzantium and bore that name for close on 800 years. Byzantium, like Rome, was built on seven hills, and this resemblance led Septimus Severus to rechristen it Nova Roma. On making the city the capital of the Roman empire Constantine the Great bestowed his own name upon it, and ever since it has been known as Constantinople in the western world. This name, however, is ignored by orientals, who have called it Istambul and Stamboul since its capture by the Turks in 1453.

Monaghan's Adherence To "God's Time" Permitted Some Citizens To Register When Too Late Here

An impelling reluctance to report their private affairs to persons of their acquaintance led many of the registrants last week to seek booths where they were unknown. Residents of the north end selected some south end place to register a Gilmour street man went over the river to St. Luke's church, one citizen registered in Keene, some motored to May's school. Quite casually they entered these places comparatively remote from their home districts, but in reality there was studious design in their actions. Human nature was asserting itself, the desire for privacy, and a subliminal urge to defeat a fancied curiosity supposed to be resident in the officials to whom these registrants were known.

This was no new bloom of a trait that has been regarded as peculiarly feminine. Many of the women didn't care a "hoot," others concerned themselves about the personnel of the booths before reporting. But the men were equally influenced by motives, quite natural after all, and very human, to avoid registrants who knew them.

Difference in Time.

It was nearly eleven o'clock on Saturday night when one man rushed into the registrar's office. He said he had just arrived in the city by train. Mr. Dobbin instructed him o report at the Post Office on Monday or to go out into Monaghan where "God's time" is religiously adhered to, despite the Daylight Savings Law. In fact, it was stated that several citizens who had failed to register during the week went out from the city after ten o'clock and secured their cards at May's school, where it was not yet ten o'clock.

It was almost midnight before the last deputy registrar and other workers were taken to their homes. Some of the ladies gave the most faithful and invaluable services during registration. It would perhaps be invidious to single them out in this reference, but certainly they have merited every commendation for their efficient and unflagging work.

Arrangements had been made to register the Curve Lake Indians at School No. 8 in Smith, but they made a request for a booth in the village, and Mrs. W. R. Morris went out with supplies to organize the work there. Mr. McCue, the teacher on the reserve, who has been educating the Indians for 38 years, was appointed deputy registrar. Mrs. Morris registered him and thereby gave him his first instructions. Then when he wanted a subject for his first official work, he asked Mrs. Morris if she had registered. Mrs. Morris had let the first two days pass without obtaining her card, and on learning this, Mr. McCue jocularly suggested that Mrs. Morris register in the village, and hers was the first card Mr. McCue signed. But when the incident was related at headquarters some of the ladies pretended that Mrs. Morris had driven all the way to the Indian village to register.

Retreat Of The Austrians May Be Turned Into Complete Rou

Condition of the Piave River May Interfere With the Progress of the Italian Forces—Heavy Casualties.

(United Press Service.)
(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, June 24.— Italy has wrested the offensive from the Austro-Hungarians. How far the initiative can be pressed depends on the condition of the heavily flooded Piave river. The Austro-Hungarian troops on the western bank of the river were cut off from their bases of supply by the impossibility of transporting materials across the torrential stream. Italy may encounter similar difficulties in following up the present drive against the invaders. If the Piave suddenly returns to its normal sluggishness, the retreat of the Hapsburg armies may then be turned into a disastrous rout that might force the Austro-Hungarians to abandon all the Italian territory they now hold.

Whether or not the present offensive of the Italians reaches this magnitude the retreat of the Austro-Hungarians from their newly-won positions must certainly contribute to the spirit of revolt at home. The adoption of Von Hindenburg's strategy of slaughter by Austro-Hungarian leaders will now profoundly re-act against German influences in the Dual Monarchy. The casualties suffered by the Hapsburg forces have been very heavy in their adventurous imitation of Von Hindenburg's ruthlessness. There can be no adequate explanation to the war weary mobs in Austria-Hungary crying for food and for peace.

FOOD SHORTAGE.

Austria Hungary has not the militaristic spirit of her arrogant northern neighbour. There is good reason to believe the population of the Dual Monarchy did not approve of the drive against Italy from the start. Otherwise there would have been a less demonstrative attitude of protest against the food shortage while the drive was under way.

AUSTRIAN FORCES ARE CUT TO PIECES BY THE ITALIAN FORCES

The attack was quickly pressed and became more insistent, accompanied by violent artillery fire. The number of guns left behind by the Austrians as they retreated has not been computed, but is said to be very great

(Special to Examiner)

ROME, June 24—The Austrian retreat across the Piave continues on the whole forty mile front. The Italians are closely pursuing the enemy cutting them to pieces; infantry, cavalry, airplanes and light artillery co-operating in the defeat. The Austrians attempted rear guard actions, Great numbers of the enemy have been wiped out and the announcement of huge numbers of prisoners is expected. All the Italian guns lost on this front last week, are reported to have been recaptured. Nine Austrian divisions (108,000 en) have been completely annihilated, fifteen others have been worn out in the San Done Di Piave region of which entire regiments have been destroyed.

The total Austrian losses in the drive are now estimated at more than 200,000.

Austrians Are Worse Off Than When They Started.

The reports indicate that Gen. Diaz, seized the phsychological moment for a renewed and vigorous counter-attack along the whole river line, where the Austrians had only two brigades of any size. The others had been swept away by the flooded waters, leaving the enemy detachments on the western bank short of food an munitions and without means of obtaining re-inforcementt. The retreat will leave the Austrians in a worse position, both military and politically, then before they started their drive a week ago yesterday. If they yield all the ground they captured, they will have to face their enormous losses of men without any concrete objective having been obtained.

This not only will have a serious effect on the army's moral, but will add to the already serious depression at home. There is considerable speculation as to the effect of the retreat on the Piave, will have in the impending renewal of the Austrian drive southwards fro the mountain area. It is known the enemy had massed heavy forces in the mountains preparatory to another offort to reach the Venetian Plateau. Whether the Piave defeat will hasten this drive, as a devension or will cause its indefinite postponement, is problematical.

ITALIANS HAVE CROSSED THE PIAVE RIVER

Infantry and cavalry forces have crossed the flooded river in the region of Capo Sile, it was semi-officially stated today.

The western bank of the river has been practically cleared of Austrians. Montello has been entirely retaken. Only a few pojnts on the right bank from Irnson, southwards to the sea are now occupied by the enemy. The Italians have taken thousands of additional prisoners. Great quantities of material have been added on.

FARMER GUIDED HIS RUNAWAY TEAM TO A TELEGRAPH POST.

W. J. Davis, a farmer living on the road to Omemee, displayed a clever turn in driving this afternoon when his team bolted on Simcoe Street, and tried to run away. The pole broke, and the waggon was left like a ship without a rudder. Davis pulled his team back on to the waggon, but they were still careering along the street, the waggon beginning to waver dangerously. Apparently selecting what he considered the least of two dangers, Mr. Davis steered the team for a telegraph post, and so successfully that they were guided astride the post. Both fell, one on each side of it, smashing a bicycle that was leaning against it. Neither horse was hurt, and Davis offered to pay for the repairs to the bicycle. Eye-witnesses of his skill declared that they had not seen in a long time so clever a piece of work.

More Talk About Patent Medicines

What is the Motive of Doctors Who Seek to Cast Discredit on Package Medicines

WHAT IS THE MOTIVE OF THE DOCTORS WHO SEEK TO CAST DISCREDIT ON PACKAGE MEDICINES.

Why all this talk about "Patent Medicines?" Is an article of any less value because it is patented or trade-marked? Do you think any the less of your Gillette Safety Razor because it is patented, or because of your Borsalino hat because the name is trade-marked? Is not this rather an indication of merit?

As a matter of fact very few of the medicines you use in your home are patented. Only the name is trade-marked.

Take for example, Dr. Chase's medicines, which are so well known in almost every home in the land. These medicines are not patented. The manufacturers have always invited the medical profession to investigate their formula, knowing that any fair-minded physician will immediately acknowledge their superiority.

There is absolutely nothing to withhold in regard to these family medicines. They are manufactured in a clean, up-to-date building, from pure, tested drugs. Any one is welcome at any time to go through the laboratories and witness the various processes of manufacture. The high standard set by Dr. Chase when putting these medicines on the market has been fully maintained, and modern machinery and methods installed whenever improvements could be made.

In view of these facts, why should the doctors try to cast discredit on all so-called "patent medicines." They cannot question the merits of the great majority of such medicines, because they are the tried prescriptions of physicians of wide experience. Then their motives must be entirely selfish—an effort to make a hard and fast monopoly of the medicine trade.

Why should there be druggists and medicine manufacturers when the doctors could do this all themselves? Why should people be able to buy Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for a quarter and Nerve Food for a half dollar, when the doctor could realize dollars for his time and medicine.

Is the Canadian public going to stand for legislation that will give such a monopoly to the doctors? That is what the doctors are planning. They want to make it unlawful to advertise medicines or to manufacture and sell them. While we are fighting abroad for freedom, it is very necessary that we shall refuse to enslave ourselves at home.—Advt.

Local Italians Are Jubilant

"This is the Italian Marne" Was One Opinion Expressed To-day

"This is the Italian Marne," said E. Olivero, when asked to-day his opinion of the Italian situation. With tears of exhaltation in their eyes, several of our brother allies from Sunny Italy held a post mortem on the news from The Examiner bulletin in Longo's store at noon and in lapses from their mother tongue it was gathered that Joe Longo thinks "this is where the Italians take a sweet revenge on the hated Austrians."

"They'll sink or swim now before our armies," he said. J Simon, who is manager of the Charlotte street branch of the Longo stores, and has four brothers in the present conflict, also countless relatives, said: "It is the biggest victory in the world." Both Joe Longo and D. Minicola are proud to-day to say they are Italians, 'and always were," they said.

E. Olivero said that the Italian must serve three years in the army, and every man hates the Austrians. 'We'll avenge the death of every man and every atrocity in this drive," he said. "This is the beginning of the end and the Italians are the best fighters in the world," was the consensus of opinion.

Voice of The People

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir: Can you enlighten me as to how long the restrictions on the restaurants are going to continue, and if there is any possibility of any improvement as far as any accommodation for the people who depend upon restaurants is concerned? Last evening returning to the city after a motor car trip I found every restaurant closed, and as a result had to go without any supper. I believe in saving food, but don't believe all the saving should be done by those who are unfortunate enough as to not have a home here. Yours, etc.,

GIRLS ARE GIVING SATISFACTORY SERVICE ON THE FARMS

A Number of Women Experienced in Outdoor Work Are Still Available During July and August

GIRLS ARE DOING SUCCESSFUL WORK

The women's farm department reports still more girls being placed on mixed and dairy farms in districts where one or more were placed in the early spring. One farmer writes:

"Yesterday Mr. —— called to see how he could procure two girls for farm work from now until after harvest." He adds: "Do you think it possible for a number of girls to manage a threshing outfit in the same way that men do in the west, and thresh by the bushel? The girls who are here now can handle machinery and almost everything the ordinary man can do."

This letter came from a district that two months ago was afraid to try girl help on farms at all.

Two months has seen a great change in the attitude of the farmers in many districts of Ontario to the farmerette. The Women's Farm Department now has difficulty in finding enough experienced girls to fill the orders that come in.

A number of women experienced in outdoor work are still available during July and August only. A few women have applied for work in butter factories, but as yet no orders have come in for that kind of worker.

Several girls are now doing successful work in a cheese box factory, while one drives a truck and delivers the boxes. A number of girls are now handling milk routes satisfactorily.

Fruit growers, truck farmers, mixed and dairy farmers cheese factory managers, may still apply to Miss Martin, Director of Women's Farm Department, 43 King street west, Toronto, and secure competent help.

Decoration Day

Oddfellows to the number of two hundred, representing members of Otonabee Lodge No. 13, Peterborough Lodge No. 111, also several visitors from district and other lodges, took part in the annual decoration day service held yesterday at Little Lake cemetery. The parade, which was marshalled by Bro. Colonel J. W. Miller, Past Grand, was headed by the band of the 57th Regiment. Bro. M. Breckenridge, P.G., officiated at the cemetery, and the chaplain for the occasion was Bro. J. Goodfellow P.G. One hundred and thirty-one graves were decorated, including the family grave of the late Bro. Major George Bennett, who was killed in action during the present world conflict.

A Large Gathering.

There was a large gathering of people at the cemetery by the time the Oddfellows arrived. "God's Acre" by the shores of Little Lake presented a pleasing and restful appearance as friends and relatives of loved ones who have solved the great mystery went from grave to grave and placed thereon their floral tributes. Many lingered over the graves in humble and silent reflection as they mentally recalled the associations which death had terminated.

"Nearer My God to Thee" was sung at the cemetery by the Oddfellows' choir and others who gathered in the open space adjoining the chapel.

After a short prayer the decoration of the graves was proceeded with.

List of Graves.

Following is the list of graves that were decorated:

Rev. Dr. Wilson Will Preach Farewell Sermon On Wednesday

The Regular Mid-Week Prayer Services Are Withdrawn for the Occasion

The Ministerial Association of Peterboro, anticipating the desire of the various congregations, have prevailed upon Rev. J. P. Wilson, of Trinity Methodist church, to preach one sermon to the citizens of Peterboro before giving up his present charge, and retiring from the active ministry.

Dr. Wilson has spent two terms in Peterboro, first as the pastor of the George street church, and presently as minister of Trinity.

Those who have a right to express themselves on such a subject, are probably agreed that if Dr. Wilson has peers in the pulpit of Peterboro, he has no superiors. His has been a student's life, and while he has been seeking to help others, his own life has been constantly enriched. His sermons, while they ring true to the old gospel are presented in such fashion as makes the old, old story ever new.

Dr. Wilson will preach his farewell sermon to the congregations of Peterboro, and to the citizens who have learned to love him, in St. Paul's Church, at eight o'clock on Wednesday evening of this week.

All the regular prayer meetings are withdrawn for that evening and every denomination will be represented at St. Paul's. The church will probably be full in every part.

Returned Soldier Honoured At Lang

Pte. W. C. Edwards Was Presented With a Fob and Locket

Pte. Wm. C. Edwards of the 247th Battalion who has returned home, was presented with a fob and locket suitably engraved, and the following address at Lang Hall The hall was full to overflowing, with Lieut.-Col. Johnston in the chair. The following programme was rendered:

Chairman's address.
Solo by Miss Bryce, of Keene.
Address by Rev. L. S. Wight.
Duet by Mrs. McEachern and Miss Bryce.
Song by Mike McCarthy.
The meeting closed by singing God Save Our Boys.

The address was read by Mrs. Cameron and the presentation was made by Earl Kimball.

Private Wm. C. Edwards:

Since the beginning of the present war we have had many occasions when we have felt it not only a duty but a pleasure to meet with the boys in khaki. We have met them under various circumstances. Too often it has been a gathering to bid them farewell and while there was pride and pleasure because of their bravery in pledging themselves to leave home and friends and go where king and country called them, there was also sorrow, for we could not close our eyes to the facts concerning the grave danger and severe treatment to which many brave lads have been subjected at the hands of a cruel and relentless foe.

On such occasions we were afraid to hope too much for their return, and indeed time has proved that many of them are asleep in foreign lands, undisturbed by the noise of guns and din of bursting shells.

But to-night we are assembled under the happiest of conditions. You whom we have the honour of addressing, have returned to us after having done duty to your country. You have suffered that our rights might be preserved. Therefore we have met to bid you a hearty welcome on your return, and to promise you the best that we can give you of our kindness, our thankfulness and our sympathy. In addition to these gifts of heart we would like to offer you a small material gift to prove our appreciation. May it carry to you the best wishes of your friends and may you in future years find great comfort in knowing that your work was appreciated, and above all that your duty was done.

Signed on behalf of Lang community

Edith Armstrong,
Alex. Keitel.

Building Ships In Canada.

The war has taught Canadians many things they did not realize before. One of these is that Canadians can build ships. A few years ago a great many of us were inclined to think that it was not practicable for Canada to enter upon construction of steel ships on a large scale. With a remarkable admixture of modesty and caution—or was it lack of confidence?—we were inclined to the view that we lacked the skill, experience and material necessary to build ships on an ambitious scale. The war has shown us that we were wrong. In the House of Commons, recently, Hon. C. C. Ballantyne, Minister of Naval Affairs, not only assured us that we are already building and are going to keep on building steel mercantile ships in Canada, but went on to say that we had also constructed war craft "equally as well as they could have been constructed in the Old Land."

Aviators as Rangers.

The St. Maurice Forest Protective Society has engaged two aviators, who, with hydroplanes, will patrol the wilds of Northern Quebec and other forest territories for the prevention and discovery of forest fires. This mode of protecting forests in Quebec will be introduced this summer.

Large Baskets.

Some of the California Indians store their corn supply in willow baskets, which are as large as the rooms of a house.

"I Need Hardly Say"

how thankful I was to get out alive, and fully made up my mind that I would write and tell you how useful Dr. Chase's Ointment was," writes a survivor of the Gallipoli Peninsula campaign. "We found that it afforded instant relief from poison from shrubs and bushes, and got to using it for all manner or minor wounds and grazes."

TELL YOUR WIFE CORNS LIFT OFF

Doesn't hurt a bit to lift corns or calluses off with fingers

Not a twinge of pain or soreness before applying, or afterwards. This may sound like a dream to corn-pestered men and women who have been cutting, filing and wearing torturous plasters. Yes! Corns life out and calluses peel off as if by magic.

A small bottle of freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store. Apply a few drops directly upon your tender corn or callus, and instantly the soreness disappears; then shortly the corn or callus will be so loose that it lifts off.

Freezone dries instantly. It doesn't eat out the corn or callus, but just shrivels it up so it lifts away without even irritating the surrounding skin. Women should keep a tiny bottle handy on the dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice

An Appalling Number Of Austrian Dead Cover Ground

Austrians Admit They Were Compelled to Retreat From Martello—Internal Troubles in Austria Have Reached a Serious Stage—American Transport Sunk Off the Deleware Capes.

TUESDAY MORNING BULLETINS

WAR GARDEN BULLETIN

Practical Daily Guide For Vacant Lot and Backyard Gardeners Enlisted in Greater Production Campaign.

MARY GET YOUR HOE.

Any seeds sown in June should go deeper than those planted earlier in the year and care should be taken to press the soil into firm contact with the seeds when covering them because the soil is apt to be dry to a depth of several inches, in sections where the rainfall has been low. Where watering is resorted to the water should go under the seeds in the row before sowing. It does no good to sprinkle the top of the ground after sowing.

June is a hard taskmaster as a rule for the amateur gardener. Weeds grow apace; bugs flourish; the ground is thirsty. Watering can, spray pump and hoe must be kept working overtime.

The woman in the home can spare half an hour or so a day from her household duties to cope with the weeds. "Mary, get your hoe," is one of the patriotic refrains of the year to which she might give some heed.

The Germans Covered Up Their Vast Birth Rate

Dr. C. D. Usher Tells Senate Committee Real Population is 90,000,000—Falsification Due to Wish to Deceive Other Nations in Man Power.

HINDENBURG REVEALS IT

WASHINGTON, June 25.—For the twenty years preceding the outbreak of the present war the Imperial German Government, through studied and systematic falsification of the vital statistics prepared under the direction of the national census department, had prepared the public minds of all Europe to meet the man-power in war natural to expect from a nation of 68,000,000 persons.

In reality the growth of the German Empire in population had been to a point 22,000,000 greater than this, and when the war broke over Europe in 1914 the actual population of Germany was 90,000,000.

These facts were communicated to Chairman Hitchcock of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee by Dr. C. D. Usher of Auburndale, Mass., formerly actively engaged in the study of political and commercial conditions in the trans-Caucasian region and for many years a resident of Germany and other Central European countries.

Dr. Usher gave as his authority for the astounding statement of Germany's concealed man power no less a personage than Field Marshal von Hindenburg. During the summer of 1913 Dr. Usher's daughters had been guests in the home of the then retired German General. They were intimate chums with the daughters of the present Field Marshal.

Germany's War Plans.

Von Hindenburg related to them the fact that a part of Germany's war plans, extending back over a score of years, had been the deception of the entire civilized world as to her multiplication of population within her own borders.

Hindenburg said that the concealment had been effected through the partial falsification of the statistics as to illegitimate births. The German Government's published figures had disclosed an illegitimate birth rate in the neighbourhood of 25 per cent. In fact this ration was wholly false, and the actual percentage was nearer 50 per cent.

According to Dr. Usher, this will account in large measure for the great strength in men of military age disclosed by Germany in the course of the present war. On the basis of the German census figures, if true, the German armies should have been from 20 to 25 per cent. smaller than they have been, and in turn the various classes of recruits should have been smaller in approximately this degree.

The deception has served to throw out of alignment the calculations of the general staff corps of Germany's enemies from the start of the war until now.

GRAIN MARKET

General tone of the grain markets was weaker, reflecting the favorable war news and the excellent crop situation. Oats were weak, closing 1 1-8c lower on the July option at Chicago and 1 1-4c lower at Winnipeg. Barley and rye are again quoted lower.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 191 cars, with 3537 cattle; 356 calves, 1808 hogs, and 562 sheep and lambs.

There was a slightly easier tone to the market yesterday morning although the deliveries were not very sharp except on the lower grade cattle. The fact that Buffalo was early reported a dollar lower did not help to strengthen the market here. Choice stable fed cattle are now getting quite scarce; one load of these however sold at $16.25. Choice heavy steers were barely steady to 15c lower. Fair to good butcher steers and heifers about 25c lower, and cows and common grass half fat steers and heifers, 40c to 50c lower.

Calves steady to firm.

Sheep weak.

Lambs a little easier.

STOMACH TROUBLES ARE DUE TO ACIDITY

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, gas, sourness, stomach-ache, and inability to retain food are in probably nine cases out of ten, simply evidence that excessive secretion of acid is taking place in the stomach causing the formation of gas and acid indigestion

Gas distends the stomach and causes that full oppressive burning feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the excessive development or secretion of acid.

To stop or prevent this souring of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid and, make it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a good and effective corrector of acid stomach, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after eating or whenever gas, sourness or acidity is felt. This sweetens the stomach and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments and is a perfectly harmless and inexpensive remedy to use.

An antacid, such as bisurated magnesia which can be obtained from any druggist in either powder or tablet form enables the stomach to do its work properly without the aid of artificial digestents. Magnesia comes in several forms so be certain to ask for and take only Bisurated Magnesia which is especially prepared for the above purpose.

ADDING MACHINES.

They Are Not New, as Pascal Invented One in the Year 1642.

The adding machine is of modern development, but not a modern invention, a passable one having been invented in 1642 by Pascal (1623-1662), a celebrated French geometrician, philosopher and writer. Later, in 1671, the adding machine was modified to facilitate multiplication by Gottfried Wilhelm Leibnitz, a German mathematician of great achievement, and his invention was followed by many improvements.

A notable experimenter in this line was Charles Babbage (1782-1871), an English mathematician, many years professor of mathematics at Cambridge university. In order to secure accuracy in tables of logarithms he conceived the idea of doing the work by machinery and was commissioned by the British government to superintend the construction of a machine for the purpose. He spent much time and money in experimenting and attained some remarkable results, but died before perfecting his machine.

All calculating machines contain certain features devised by special reference to the work to be done, including circular metallic disks, wheels with teeth, etc., ingenious, but not more complicated and no more responsive to human intelligence than many other machines. The thinking is all done by the operator.—Philadelphia Press.

GREAT POTATO WASTE

Can Be Prevented by Thorough Spraying.

Women's Meetings In Full Swing—The Summer Institute Meetings Are of Benefit to Every Woman Who Attends—Topics to Be Discused and Work Planned.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

POTATOES are sprayed to prevent such fungus disease as Early Blight and Late Blight and Rot. These diseases are caused by plants known as fungi Those fungi which derive their nourishment from living plants injure them in so doing in various ways and thus give rise to what are known as fungus diseases.

In combating the great majority of fungus diseases methods of prevention only are practicable. Spraying potatoes is not done to cure but to prevent disease. In other words the object of spraying is to cover the surface of the leaves and stems with a substance, poisonous to the spores of fungi, in which they cannot grow, and penetrate the plant. Spraying, therefore, in order to be effective, must be timely and thorough. The spray mixture must be on the plants before the spores reach them and the surface of the leaves and stems must be covered so completely that there is not the smallest space on which a spore can germinate.

Efficient spraying of potatoes depends:

1. Upon the use of the proper fungicide. Bordeaux mixture has so far proved to be the only satisfactory spray mixture for potato diseases.

2. Upon timely and repeated spraying. Spraying should be commenced when the plants are from six to eight inches high and repeated at intervals of from a week to ten days throughout the growing season. From three to seven applications will be required, the number depending upon the weather, the wetter the weather the more frequent the spraying.

3. Upon the liberal use of Bordeaux mixture. From 50 to 150 gallons of Bordeaux mixture should be used per acre at each application.

4. Upon thorough spraying, which means the covering of every portion of the plant with the Bordeaux mixture in the form of a fine mist. This can be done only when the solution is applied with good pressure so as to insure covering every portion of the plant. The best results from spraying are obtained when potato sprayers are used which are fitted with T-joint attachments, so as to insure covering both surfaces of the leaves at each spraying.

5. Upon spraying before rather than after prolonged rainy periods. Infection of the plants takes place during or soon after rain. Therefore it is of the utmost importance to have the spray mixture on the plants when the rain comes.—Prof. J. E. Howett, Ontario Agricultural College.

The Importance of Women's Institute Meetings.

A series of meetings which, to the women of rural Ontario, have always proved worth while, and increasingly so the last year or two, is the Women's Institute meetings. These are important because they are so far-reaching in their nature. They afford the town and country woman, no matter what her denomination may be, a channel through which she can be of all-round service to humanity.

Since the war began Red Cross and other patriotic work has, of course, received first consideration. The alleviation of suffering seems peculiarly woman's work. The need is greater to-day than ever.

The great demand by the Allies for certain foods such a beef, pork, wheat and sugar has caused the housewife to change her methods of pre-war days. She must now learn to substitute and to eliminate various forms of waste. Perishable foods must be more widely used, not only in summer, but also in winter. These must be conserved through proper storage, canning or drying. Such subjects as these may be discussed at the meetings. An expert demonstrator may be secured from the Department to give information or a practical demonstration to assist the housewife. The members may club together and do their canning at one centre with one fire if they so choose, and in addition to the work accomplished may have a sociable time together.

The children in the rural districts must not be forgotten. They must be prepared for the great responsibilities which are too soon to fall upon them. Their education must not be neglected. They must not be handicapped by physical imperfections. Subjects of importance to the child must be discussed and means adopted to improve conditions. The Medical Inspection of rural schools and the clinics held through the Women's Institute are doing much to improve conditions.

The girls also need attention. We are apt to forget the girls in our anxiety for the boys. Their lives and their prospects for the future are being affected by this war. Hence opportunities for study, for amusement, for developing their talents to the full, must be afforded them. Many of these opportunities may be secured through the Institute.

Surely with subjects of such vital importance as the above-mentioned, all meetings should be worth while.

We would call the attention of all to the importance of the summer meeting, held throughout June, when the delegate from the Department is in attendance. She has the latest information on all subjects of importance to the Institutes, and is a specialist on her own particular subjects. — G. A. Putnam, Superintendent Women's Institutes.

FOR BABY'S TENDER SKIN.

A child's skin is tender as well as beautiful and eczema may be caused by chafing of clothing, the use of poor soap, exposure to cold or sudden change of temperature. Probably no treatment for eczema has ever proven so successful as Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this applies particularly to baby eczema. This ointment is delightfully soothing, stops the itching and consequently prevents scratching. Gradually the sores are healed up, and the skin is left soft and velvety.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

A BUSINESS MESSAGE

CHAPTER CI.

The day that we were to start for Bar Harbour found us ready and anxious to be off. About an hour before the train started, George received a telegram.

He was called to Morelands at once. Some matter of business required his immediate and personal attention.

"It's a good thing we are all packed," I remarked, when he told me.

"What do you mean?"

"Why, that we can start home at once."

"You will go on up to Bar Harbour and wait for me. No—I have it," and without giving me the slightest inkling of what he intended to do, he went to the telephone. He called Julia Collins and told her that we would go when she did, after all—that he was going back home on business but would be back in time to go when she had planned.

After he had hung up, he turned to me again: "Have Mrs. Sexton remain with you until I return."

There was no time for talk, for expostulation. His train went in half an hour, and he would have to hurry. My disappointment was intense. I had been so happy, in the thought that I had the best of that "Collins Woman" (as I designated her in my thoughts). Now it was she, not I, who could be happy. She had gained her point.

Merton Gray Sympathizes.

The afternoon George left, Merton Gray called to bid us good-bye. He was very much surprised, when he found that George had gone back home, and that the time of our departure for Bar Harbour had been postponed. I had called Mrs. Sexton on the telephone and she had consented to stay with me until George returned. "It would be only a few days, at the longest," he had said.

I really was delighted to see Merton. It was a nasty, rainy afternoon. I could not go out, and the prospect of a cozy chat with him was alluring.

"The portrait has been shipped, and I am lonely," he said apropos of a remark I made.

"Really. I did not know you were to send it away so soon."

"Yes. Mr. Howard wished it properly framed and ready to hand immediately upon his return. He is rather impatient of any delay, I judge."

"Indeed he is. He is so absolutely prompt, himself, where business is concerned, that he has little patience when things lag."

"Now play for me!" Merton ordered, after a time. "I have heard no real music since you played the last time."

"Flatterer! I am horribly out of practice. Newport isn't just the place one would chose, if they kept up their music."

"No, not when one has married a society man, and when one is the best tennis player, the most accomplished swimmer—" he stopped. "Pardon me! I had forgotten your accident, for a moment."

"Don't take it back because of that!" Then, without meaning to in the least, I told him of Julia Collins. How she had blamed me, saying I was trying to show off, etc. "Just as if I would choose six o'clock in the morning, when no one was around, to 'show off'," I finished.

"Wasn't your husband, Mr. Howard, there? I have an idea the lovely Julia was referring to him."

"Of course he was there," I answered impatiently. "How could he have saved me, had he not been?"

Mrs. Sexton Arrives.

I played and sang for some time. I was really glad to have the practice for music would have allowed me to keep on indefinitely, but Mrs. Sexton came, so interrupting.

For just a moment, I was embarrassed that she had found Merton Gray with me. I recalled her warning—that he was a "fascinating, a dangerous man," and I almost wished I had not asked her to stay with me. Then I remembered her faith in me, and her knowledge of my love for George, and smiled at my lack of trust in her good, common sense.

She greeted him pleasantly, me affectionately. She then excused herself and unpacked the few things she had brought for her short stay with me.

Merton remained to tea, and we chatted and laughed happily together. Mrs. Sexton doing nothing to interfere, in fact joining us.

"Mr. Gray looks very well," she said, when he had gone.

"Yes, I think so, too. He is very tanned, and it is becoming. My picture has gone; he sent it yesterday."

"Does he remain in Newport?"

"Only a few days." He had told me he should go when I left for Bar Harbour—that there would, then, be nothing to keep him. I did not repeat this to Mrs. Sexton, for various reasons.

To-morrow—A Contretemps.

You Feel Fine

Fatigue is the result of poisons in the system, the waste matter resulting from the activities of life. The kidneys have failed to filter these poisons from the blood and you are tired.

But awaken the kidneys and liver by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and you soon feel fine. The poisons are swept from the system, the pains and aches are gone and you are ready for work and for play.

ORIGIN OF THE CURFEW.

The Cover Fire Bell Was Rung Way Back In King Alfred's Time.

What is the curfew? Its etymology carries its history with it. The word comes from the French couvre-feu (cover fire), a bell tolled at evening as a signal to the inhabitants to cover fires, extinguish lights and retire to rest. It is erroneously said to have been instituted in England by William the Conqueror as an arbitrary bit of tyranny, and the nursery historian has waxed sentimental over the wrongs of the conquered Saxon, and conjured up pictures that must be balm to the downtrodden Celt. Even Thomson tells us:

The shivering wretches at the curfew sound
Dejected sunk into their sordid beds.

But the couvre-feu was known before William's time, both in England and on the continent. He did, indeed, issue an edict on the subject, and although this edict may incidentally have helped to put down the Saxon beer clubs, which were hotbeds of political conspiracies, its primary aim was as a precaution against fire. That danger was an ever present one in those days of chimneyless wooden houses.

The ancient city ordinances of London abound in stringent fire regulations. None of them, however, was more effective than the "cover fire" bell, which as far back as the time of King Alfred was rung in certain places in England. William's edict rendered compulsory an ancient custom. But it was a wise legislative act and not a bit of arbitrary tyranny. We find plenty of early traces of the custom or its equivalent, as, for instance, the blowing of a horn at the market place in continental Europe.

LIVER TROUBLE and HEARTBURN

CURED BY

MILLBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

When the liver is torpid and inflamed it cannot furnish bile to the bowels, causing them to become bound and costive. The symptoms are a feeling of fullness or weight in the right side, and shooting pains in the same region, pains between the shoulders, yellowness of the skin and eyes, floating specks before the eyes, coated tongue, bad taste in the morning, heartburn, water brash, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills gently unlock the secretions, clear away all effete and waste matter from the system, and give tone and vitality to the whole intestinal track, and are by far the safest and quickest remedy for all diseases or disorders of the liver.

Mrs. A. Cummings, Manchester, Ont., writes: "I have used Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills some time, and can faithfully recommend them to anyone suffering from heartburn and liver trouble. I tried a great many other remedies but they only relieved me for a time. I believe Laxa-Liver Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from liver troubles."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

No Airs About Her.

"Airs!" exclaimed the proud mother and shook her head vigorously. "My Elsie, for all her learning, hasn't any more airs, so to speak, than her poor old dad."

"Then she won't turn up her nose at her old friends?" queried the visitor.

"La, no!"

"How refreshing! Most girls who go through college nowadays will hardly look at you after they're graduated."

"Well, they ain't like my Elsie, that's all I can say," retorted Elsie's ma. "She's become a carnivorous reader, of course, and she frequently importunates music, but stuck up—my Elsie? Not a bit! She's unanimous to everybody, has a most infantile vocabulary and, what's more, never keeps a caller waiting while she dresses up. No, she just runs down, nom de plume, as she is."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Her Dainty Speech.

There was one young woman in the box party at the theater who took no part in the noisy clatter and giggle. With her gaze fixed upon the stage she watched the progress of the play, indifferent to the gayety around her except that her delicate, aristocratic, finely chiseled features bore a look of weariness and a scornful smile curled her lips. At last, however, she turned her head slowly and looked at the other members of the party. Then she spoke to the elderly matron sitting by her side. "That chicken in the blue kimono," she said, "thinks she is the whole custard!"—Argonaut.

Linen of Bohemia.

One of the oldest and most important industries of northern Bohemia is that of linen weaving, which furnishes employment under favorable conditions to fully 25,000 people, who are so skilled and clever in the production of fine linens that these goods are favorably known and find a ready market in all parts of the world.

Fashion Note.

"Swell gown your wife has, Mac; cut into a V," said a friend.

"Cut into a V!" growled Mac. "It cut into four Xs."—Truth.

SHORTHAND BLUNDERS.

Misplaced or Wrong Vowels Lead to Queer Translations.

A volume could be filled with amusing stories of shorthand mistakes, the greater number of them due to misteken vowels. For instance, "This day is big with fate" was transcribed "This day is big with fat," while "Do not indulge in spite" came out "Do not indulge in spit," and "A house of many gables" was transcribed into "A louse of many gabbles."

The use of the wrong vowel may have the most amusing result, as in the phrase "Man, know thyself," which was once converted in the report of a sermon into "Man, gnaw thyself." To misplace a vowel is in shorthand the easiet thing in the world. T. A. Reed the well known reporter, tells of a pupil who by this means turned "mighty acts" into "mighty cats," and another report of a sermon was spoiled by the advice "Return a blow with interest," instead of "a kiss."

The "reporting style," in which the vowels are omitted altogether for the sake of rapidity, is responsible for the famous American story of the shorthand clerk who took down a note of his wife's instruction to "be sure to remember to bring home some castile soup" and, as a result, returned home with a tin of oxtail soup!—London Strand Magazine.

An Eye Opener.

"Eight o'clock," exclaimed a guest at a hotel, yawning, "and I'm so sleepy I can scarcely open my eyes!"

"Shall I bring your bill, sir?" inquired a waiter.

Then She Might Help.

Madge—Would you marry a spendthrift, my dear? Marjorie—It wouldn't be so bad if he were just starting out in his career. London Advocate.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Fifth Intermarriage

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Mrs. Stewart's house parties were always admiringly planned, and it was because everyone was always sure of finding a congenial companion at her house that the younger members of her kindred and acquaintance always accepted her invitations. For if truth were to be told there was nothing luxurious in her hospitality, and there was little amusement or entertainment save what the guests and the hostess could provide by their own wits, for the fine old Stewart mansion contained none of those short cuts to hospitality and amusement. If one wished to dance there was no phonograph to provide music—and the dancing could not progress unless one of the guests happened to know some dance tunes to be played on the old piano. There was no nearby country club and there were no automobiles in the Stewart stables. But despite these shortcomings Mrs. Stewart never wearied of getting up little parties and thought nothing of filling her eight guest rooms at a time, and the guests always came with enthusiasm. The secret of her success was that she was at heart a matchmaker, and though she did not think of every girl at her parties as a possible wife for one of the other guests, she always did think of them as partners for a country walk. She never invited a girl unless she was sure she could provide some nice young man who would find her society delightful, and never invited even the least prepossessing of young men without making sure that there was one young woman in the number gifted enough to appreciate the fine points of his personality.

Mrs. Stewart even went so far as to make little lists of her guests on the backs of discarded envelopes—for she was instilled with the spirit of old-time thrift as well as with the lavishness of old-time hospitality. And in these lists she would pair her guests off, making sure, of course, that they would pair, and that there would be no three-handed affairs—no two men hanging at the feet of one young belle while one of the young girls went partnerless.

For the first party of the season she had planned to have all the guest rooms filled, and as four of them contained large double beds, this meant that she would have 12 guests. Most of them were young people who had already met at similar parties—some of them already engaged as the result of her careful planning. The only names on her lists that she had not been able to link up with any other names were those of Miss Nancy Marbury and Mr. Nathaniel Stobridge.

"There really isn't anything they can have in common," sighed Mrs. Stewart. "Miss Nancy is a college girl, keen about suffrage and a tennis shark, and a perfect dance fan—and poor Nathaniel can't abide college women, is an anti at heart and the most indolent old dear that ever drew breath. He could lie all day in a hammock under a shady tree with a dusty book of family records in his hands and an occasional renewal of cooling beverage at his side and think himself delightfully entertained—while to keep up with Nancy a man would have to take cross-country tramps, play tennis madly and know all the new dance steps."

Mrs. Stewart tried to revise her list so as to pair some one off with Mr. Stobridge and have some one left over that would be congenial with Nancy. But the arrangement for the other guests was perfect. The affinity between each of the other two couples was inevitable. So Mrs. Stewart took the most recent letter she had received from Nancy and the letter she had from Mr. Stobridge accepting her invitation from her desk and read them through in search of some sympathy in common.

"I shall be mighty glad of a little rest," said Nancy in her letter, "for I have been working night and day for a month or more on the Marbury Family Record. Our family association commissioned me to get the data together and put it in shape for publication. You'd be surprised how interesting it has been and of course my work in college fitted me for that sort of research. What we were most anxious to show was that the Marbury family is one of the Stobridge-Claridge connection. You have heard of them, I am sure. It is an alliance of a group of the most distinguished colonial families in the state and to prove our connection we have to show at least five intermarriages with either of the two families since they came to this country. Well, I have at last been able to find the fifth intermarriage, though it was not easy, as the Marbury records are fragmentary. Now that the Record is practically complete I shall be delighted to come to your house party and take a little relaxation before sending the copy to the printer."

Mrs. Stewart had on first reading the letter glanced but hastily over this passage, as she was not herself, particularly interested in genealogical matters. But now the mention of the Stobridge family—that to which the indolent Nathaniel belonged—caught her attention and then she recalled that Nathaniel himself had dabbled more than casually in the study of his own and allied family records.

"Well, I'll get them started on genealogy and perhaps they can find enough in common to keep them amused for the week-end." And rather reluctantly, for she still felt that the temperaments of Nancy and Nathaniel would be no more sympathetic than oil and water, she turned her attention to ordering the wherewithal to keep her large family abundantly provisioned, seeing that the old-fashioned four-poster beds in her guest rooms were newly made up with linen sheets and otherwise making ready for the house party.

Nathaniel had at first shown only a polite attention to Nancy when, on the first day of the party, Mrs. Stewart proposed that they be partners for one of her nice little woodland strolls that were so important a part of the program for the other members of the party.

She could not fail to notice that conversation between them lagged as they wound their way after the others through the freshly leaved trees in the woodland. "And you aren't interested in tennis, either," she heard Nancy say, laughing, to Mr. Stobridge—"really you are most hard to talk to."

"Oh, Nancy dear," Mrs. Stewart said suddenly coming up to them. "I forgot to tell you that Mr. Stobridge is almost as enthusiastic about genealogy as you are and he is one of the colonial Stobridges. But I know you have found much in common," she fibbed, "without discussing anything so dry as family records."

Thus having sowed the seeds of congeniality she sauntered ahead to watch over the interests of the other members of her little party.

"It is really most extraordinary," Nathaniel told his hostess that night as the party broke up to retire, "to find a young woman of Miss Marbury's type so seriously interested in genealogy. We've had a delightful time talking—perhaps I should say that I have and now I am impatiently looking forward to tomorrow."

The next day—Saturday—Mrs. Stewart was content to notice that Nathaniel and Nancy actually did continue their discussion and comparison of notes. "But don't you see how important it is to prove that fifth intermarriage?" she heard Nancy saying almost pleadingly. "Because if I don't my little volume of Marbury records will be almost useless. I was so sure that Hannah Jane did marry Nehemiah Stobridge. It was Nehemiah, I am sure, and the rest of the name was blurred in the family Bible!"

"Positively, my dear girl," she heard Nathaniel reply. "He was a confirmed bachelor. There always have been bachelors in the Stobridge family, and I am true to type. It must have been some other Nehemiah."

That night after all the guests had retired, Mrs. Stewart heard low voices in the hall below and only slightly alarmed at a vague thought of burglars, she started to descend the broad stairs of the front hall. Then she stopped short. For there by the last dying glow of the fire that had been lighted to drive off the chill earlier in the evening sat Nathaniel and Nancy. Nancy had met him there to show him her records.

"You see, there is every reason to believe that it was Nehemiah Stobridge that my Hannah Jane married."

"But my dear little girl—" Mrs. Stewart's pulses began to beat fast for words like that are dear to the heart of a born match-maker—"my dear little Nancy, Nehemiah was an old bachelor." Then Mrs. Stewart tiptoed back to her room and slept content. She forgot the discussion and disagreement about Hannah Jane and Nehemiah and thought only of those words of Nathaniel's.

It was two weeks after her little house party had come successfully to a finish and all her guests had declared it the most wonderful party they had ever attended, when she got a letter from Nancy.

"Nathaniel and I want you to know first," the letter began, "and I think perhaps you knew which way the wind blew before your house party ended. Yes, we are engaged and we are so congenial. And this is how it happened. I just had to find that fifth intermarriage, and the idea struck Nathaniel first that we could do it—I mean provide a fifth intermarriage between the Marburys and the Stobridges. Only of course we would have done it any way—we just couldn't have helped it. And you, dear, are responsible for it all."

THIN, NERVOUS PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Weak, thin people—men or women—are nearly always nervous wrecks; thus conclusively proving that thinness, weakness, debility and neurasthenia are almost invariably due to nerve starvation. Feed your nerves and all these symptoms due to nerve starvation will disappear.

Eminent specialists state that the best nerve food is an organic phosphate known among druggists as Bitro-Phosphate, a five-grain tablet of which should be taken with each meal. Being a genuine nerve builder and not a stimulant or habit-forming drug, Bitro-Phosphate can be safely taken by the weakest and most delicate sufferer, and the results following its use are often simply astonishing.

Weak, tired people regain strength and vigour; thinness and angularity give way to plumpness and curves; sleep returns to the sleepless; confidence and cheerfulness replace debility and gloom; dull eyes become bright, and pale, sunken cheeks regain the pink glow of health. Bitro-Phosphate, the use of which is inexpensive, also wonderfully promotes the assimilation of food, so much so that many people report marked gains of weight in a few weeks.

CAUTION:—Although Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh. It is sold in this city by McDermid & Jury and all good druggists.

WOLVES OF LABRADOR.

A Labrador missionary, says Mortimer Batten in the Wide World Magazine, told me a curious story which occurred on the Labrador coast some years ago. One night the little daughter of a certain brave was missing, and, on discovering the child's tracks in the snow, a party of squaws set out to look for her.

What was their alarm when, a little way from camp, they found that the footprints of a great gray wolf accompanied those of the child. The brute did not appear to have harmed her, but had apparently frisked along ahead, enticing the child farther and farther from camp. In all probability the child mistook it for a dog and followed readily, though the superstitious Indians, of course, believed that the brute had exercised some devilish influence over her.

Darkness was creeping on and, though much afraid, the squaws continued to follow the tracks of the wolf and the child. Night found them far from home, when what was their horror to find that they themselves had been deceived and were now surrounded by wolves!

Only one squaw survived the night of horror that ensued to return next morning to bear tidings of the calamity to camp.

GOT RID OF BRONCHITIS.

Mr. W. H. Walker, Calmar, Alta., writes: "I am pleased to say that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has done much good to myself, wife and children. My eldest girl, seven years old, had bronchitis and the doctor who attended her did not seem to do much good. We got Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for her and she soon got well. We always keep this medicine in the house now ready for use and find that it soon cures coughs and colds."

Why the Earth Cannot Explode.

The theory is frequently advanced that planets and even suns sometimes explode and that the earth may some day blow up like a bombshell. No celestial body the size of the earth could possibly explode. If the entire molten interior of our globe could be replaced with nitroglycerin and detonated the explosion would not lift the earth's crust. In other words, if we assume that the crust of the earth is from fifty to a hundred miles in thickness it would require something much more powerful than even nitroglycerin to burst the shell. It is necessary only to do a little figuring to see that the pressure of the earth's crust at a depth of from fifty to a hundred miles far exceeds the pressure exerted by the most powerful high explosive.—Hudson Maxim.

One Crisis In Our History

WITH the truer perspective obtained in the passage of years, it is to be seen how errors of judgment on both sides produced the Rebellion of 1885. Riel had virtues as well as vices. He was sincere in motives possibly—a fanatic, but a very dangerous one, and as such he was properly dealt with. He had been made the tool of subtly-moving forces, compromise with which was impossible. Audience the blood-stained page in the history of Canadian occupation and settlement of the Imperial wheatfield.

Louis Riel himself expiated his crimes with his life — and thirty years afterwards his grandson, Charteris, washed the stain from the family escutcheon with his own blood, when he "went out" in France with a sniper's bullet through his heart—but not until he had accounted for no fewer than thirty-seven of Britain's enemies, as shown by the notches on the stock of his rifle, the rifle taken from his dead hand and returned to Canada by the officer commanding to become the treasured trophy and most zealously guarded possession of the Rod and Gun Club at his home town of Merritt, in British Columbia.

With the gathering of the storm clouds which broke in the second Riel Rebellion, the strength of the Northern Division of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police was increased, in October, 1884, to two hundred of all ranks, and Superintendent Crozier, with a hundred men, started north on the following St. Patrick's Day and succeeded in quieting matters for a time.

Simultaneously, on March 18, Lt.-Col. Irvine left for Prince Albert, with four officers, 86 non-commissioned officers and men and 66 spare horses, reaching his objective, 291 miles distant, in seven days, through country held by the rebels. He subsequently united with Supt. Crozier and organized the home defence company at Prince Albert. Crozier later encountered the rebels at Duck Lake, losing nine men and a few wounded, but the enemy failing in his attempt to get the stores under convoy. The total strength of the force, supplemented by volunteers, at Carlton Post, after Crozier's retreat and Irvine's arrival, was 225 rank and file, with eleven wounded. These left Carlton for Prince Albert, where preparations for defence were completed, all able-bodied men, to the number of 309, being enrolled as special constables—their armament being limited, however, to 116 Snider rifles—and a corps of scouts, 47 strong, being organized under Thomas McKay.

The first few weeks of Col. Irvine's occupation of Prince Albert found the position of that isolated post very critical, the normal population of 700 having been swelled by the influx of refugees to approximately eighteen hundred, in addition to police, and Prince Albert being cut off from supplies, all the trails to the railway running through rebel territory. Lt.-Col. Irvine, kept well informed by his scouts as to the movements of the Indians, rendered excellent service in driving back Riel's scouts, who were even sufficiently bold to come into Prince Albert itself. Another important duty performed, after the battle of Fish Creek, was that of maintaining the line of communication with Gen. Middleton. The police were kept absolutely in darkness as to the military operations transpiring on the other side until, on April 16, messages were received from Gen. Middleton stating that he hoped to attack Batoche on the 18th or 19th. The police were not to join in the engagement, but to watch for and make prisoners of fleeing rebels.

Until the militia column reached Prince Albert, the presence of the police unquestionably saved the town from falling into the hands of the Reds. Had such a catastrophe occurred, the rebellion would have inevitably assumed proportions of much greater magnitude, possession of Prince Albert being the key to the entire situation. The Indians only desisted from their raids on the town upon seeing the trail of Lt.-Col. Irvine's forces leading thither.

The capture of Big Bear was made by Sergt. Smart and three men of the police; while Inspector A. H. Griesbach, in command of Fort Saskatchewan, did all in his power to maintain peace in and about that centre which he was successful in doing until the arrival of the citizen soldiery there. Three detachments of the R.N.W.M.P. — commanded by Supt. W. H. Herchmer and Mole, Inspector S. B. Steele and Inspector A. Bowen Perry—actively participated with the militia columns in the operations of the exciting campaign and acquitted themselves throughout with courage, coolness and distinction.

Offended.

A soldier from the wild backwoods of the far west was in the city for the first time, and went into a restaurant.

All went well until the waiter brought him a serviette. The eyes of the backwoodsman flamed, and, pulling a six shooter from his hip pocket, he told that waiter his mind.

"You take that blamed thing away at once," he said, evenly. "I reckon I know when to use a handkerchief without having any darned hints thrown out."

Old Hockeyist a Hero.

The dash which "Jack" McCamus once displayed with Toronto hockey teams he has again displayed in France, according to the evidence furnished by the official award of the Military Cross to Capt. John McCamus, Canadian infantry. At great personal risk he made three daring daylight reconnaissances for the purpose of selecting forward machine gun positions.

THE ARMORED MOTORS.

Canadian Corps Did Splendid Work Against the Germans.

The work of the Canadian Motor Machine Gun Corps during the last great German offensive is dealt with in the following article by Roland Hill, correspondent with the Canadian forces at the front.

Delaying of the great German attack on the Somme the Canadian Motor Machine Gun Corps did heroic work, and gained special mention from the commander of the British army, which fought the brunt of the wonderful retirement. Several times these swift armored cars found themselves fighting alongside tanks, and more than once they followed the track of their heavier allies. Tanks were the battleships of great fighting, Canadian armored cars were the light cruisers. They remained hidden in broken buildings until sections of Huns had rushed down the main roads and then, like Juggernauts, drove down on the enemy, sweeping clear paths with their batteries of machine guns.

At the crossroad at Villiers-Carbonnel on the St. Quentin road, they delayed the Hun advance five hours and gave the infantry time to dig some semblance of shelter.

The Germans brought up light field guns to try to catch some of them, but they shifted too quickly to ever become a target. One car only was lost in this sharp engagement. It had run off the road into a deep ditch and the Germans had come on so densely that it was impossible to get the car back on the road. The last the others saw of it was when only two of the crew remained alive. A young Canadian officer was standing in the road keeping a group of about twenty of the enemy at bay with rifles of his dead comrades. Another man was firing the remaining machine gun at a body of Germans who were trying to surround some British infantry.

An almost similar affray, but without the loss of any car, happened at Bray. Three cars worked along the roads which centred on the village. They dropped little parties with extra guns in farm buildings on the outskirts, and held back the Huns until fresh infantry battalions could come up and take up the defence. "We just slaughtered the Huns by the thousand," said one dirty, blood-stained officer, "and more than once they broke back into their second waves when we got all our guns spraying on them at the same time on a section about a hundred yards wide."

In hot corners where we were fighting the British must have taken a toll of ten to one. They were magnificent. Some of them who had been fighting steadily for three days refused to be taken out — declared they would stick to it to the end if we could get them rations. Our ammunition lorries brought them up plentiful supplies in less than an hour and many of those fellows kept fighting until they fell asleep from sheer exhaustion. By that time reserves were up in plenty, and the line at Bray was saved for a time anyway.

Another good work the cars did was in bringing in wounded. Each time they returned for ammunition and petrol they carried in scores of battered men. One car rescued a badly wounded British brigadier. "Pluckiest officer I ever saw," explained a Canadian sergeant in charge of the car. He had stayed with a little post of about a dozen men right to the last, and when the machine gun crew were laid out, fired the gun himself until badly wounded. He made us leave him with the field ambulance and would not let us take him back to a casualty clearing station. "Go back and give them blazes," were his parting words to us.

Canadians Give Aid.

One of the most unique undertakings to raise money for the American Red Cross has been an all-star production of a successful war play, "Out There," which has been visiting the large cities of the republic and playing to enormous audiences. The cast is made up entirely of famous stars, several of whom are Englishmen like George Arliss and C. P. Heggie. There are two Canadians in the cast, Miss Julia Arthur, who came from Hamilton, and Mr. George McFarland, whose home was in Montreal. Another less well-known Canadian, Miss Catharine Proctor, of Toronto, is understudying all the female roles. The play selected for presentation is by an Englishman, Mr. J. Hartley Manners, and it is familiar to Canadians, as it was presented for an all-Canadian tour during the past season, visiting practically every town that had theatrical accommodation from coast to coast. James K. Hackett, who is sometimes claimed as a Canadian, has a role in the drama, but Mr. Hackett only happened to be born in this country and his parents were Americans, so we can hardly lay claim to him.

Government Grows Seed.

A beginning has this year been made in the growing of standard seed on the available lands of various provincial institutions, this being rendered possible through co-operation between the Provincial Secretary's and Agricultural Departments. One hundred and eighty-one acres in all are being thus utilized, 32 acres being seeded at Fort William, 15 at Burwash, 22 at London, 5 at Woodstock, 25 at Hamilton, 55 at Whitby, and 27 at Brockville. The planting includes 60 acres of oats, 27 of potatoes, 27 of barley, 27 of wheat, 10 of mangolds, 10 of peas and 10 of beans. Much difficulty has been experienced in securing suitable seeds, this being further evidence of the urgent necessity for the inauguration of the new and practical policy.

A Record Prison Record.

When Onesime Charbonneau came up in the courts in Montreal recently he informed the judge that he had spent eleven out of the last fifteen years of his life in jail. He asked for a two-year term, and as he does not make a very good citizen anyhow, the judge obliged him.

CANADIAN BOAT SONG.

I.

Listen to me, as when ye heard our father
Sing long ago the song of other shores;
Listen to me, and then in chorus gather
All your deep voices, as ye pull your oars:

Chorus.

But we are exiles from our fathers' land.

II.

From the lone shieling of the misty island
Mountains divide us, and the waste of seas—
Yet still the blood is strong, the heart is Highland,
And we in dreams behold the Hebrides.

III.

We ne'er shall tread the fancy-haunted valley,
Where 'tween dark hills creeps out the small, clear stream,
In arms around the patriarch banner rally,
Nor see the moon on royal tombstones gleam.

IV.

When the bold kindred, in the time long vanished,
Conquered the soil and fortified the keep—
No seer foretold the children would be banished
That a degenerate lord might boast his sheep.

V.

Come, foreign rage—let Discord burst in slaughter!
O, then, for clansman, true and stern claymore—
The hearts that would have shed their blood like water
Beat heavily beyond the Atlantic roar:

But we are exiles from our fathers' land.

[This poem representing the feeling of exiled Highlanders in Canada, appeared in "Noctes Ambrosianae" in Blackwood's Magazine for September, 1827. It has naturally been assumed to be by Christopher North, but it is also attributed to J. G. Lockhart. It is probably by neither.]

NATURE OF THE ESKIMO.

Good-natured and Humorous and Very Inquisitive.

In Herschel Island, where the sun shines continuously for eight weeks in summer, the Eskimo had a sundance, not always clothed in the garments of propriety. They had an idea that when the sun came back its movements were directed by an invisible power, but they had no tangible conception of a God. They had no belief in a future life, either of reward or punishment. To-day they are religious, truthful, kind to their children and to the aged. They are ambitious to learn; they are practical, extremely industrious, sanitary in their habits, well clothed and well housed. Insanity is unknown but tuberculosis is quite common.

They whale in summer and trap in winter. They are clever in trading, good workers on land, water and ice, and take excellent care of their household effects. Tools if broken are neatly repaired. When at Herschel Island or Fort McPherson they eat the white man's food with great relish. In summer they eat their fish and blubber raw and in winter frozen. They like food cooked, but it is a matter of indifference to them. They will barter for the white man's food, eat a hearty meal of it, and then go out and eat blubber and raw fish as dessert. The contents of a deer's stomach they consider a great delicacy.

The Eskimos have no fear of death; if told that death is approaching they will respond with a complacent smile. They are even more stoical than the Mongolian. Trouble does not affect them at all. They are a very happy people. Their natures are child-like; and they do not continue in the same frame of mind for two minutes at a time. They are good-natured and humorous and very inquisitive. Their emotions are sudden and short-lived — uproariously happy one moment and almost crying the next. Their faces are now wreathed in smiles, now a picture of woe.—Christian Herald.

Victimized by Changing Times.

"Now, then, Cousin Emma, let me give you a bit off the breast."

"Yes, please, I should like to taste that, for in my young days they always gave it to the grownups, and now they keep it for the children, so I've always missed it."—London Punch.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

BLACK, MIXED OR GREEN

The Australian Blacks.

It is believed by many persons that the blacks in Australia are dying out. As a matter of fact, says a correspondent of the London Standard, no such thing is happening. The belief, however, is easily explained. As civilization advances, and it is yearly advancing, the blacks recede farther and farther into the back blocks and unknown country, save a few who have acquired the craving for opium or drink. These latter succumb amid the advancing wave of civilization and seldom leave any children. Those who have passed inland, if they do not increase, have certainly not decreased. In some few cases whole tribes have died out when civilization has reached them, but these have usually been small tribes.

Foundation of a Fortune.

The late William Gibson, who left a fortune of half a million pounds, was, when a little watchmaker in Belfast, one day examining a watch which had been sent to him for repair. It was during the time of the Belfast riots. A stone was thrown through the shop window and hit Mr. Gibson in the eye. Under the malicious damages act Mr. Gibson was awarded £6,000. This was his start in life.—London Sporting Times.

Dancing as an Art.

"As a pastime dancing is capable of becoming the most potent influence in favor of national health and beauty that America ever had," declares Troy Kinney in the Century. "As an art it is a vehicle not one shade less eloquent than painting, music, drama or literature. Ballet pantomime, in fact, combines the resources of these, adding, for any one attuned to line harmony, a supremely poetic message of its own. It becomes an obligation to consider means by which the present magnificent beginnings of a national choreography may be conserved."

The Farmerettes

Whether from city or country find themselves living under an unusual strain. The unusual work necessitates the use of differend muscles and this development demands a good supply of pure, rich blood.

Because it goes directly to the formation of new blood, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is of the greatest assistance in building up new cells and tissues and strengthening the muscles.

ITALIANS HAVE FOLLOWED ENEMY ACROSS PIAVE

ROUT OF THE AUSTRIAN FORCES IS COMPLETE

HUN ATTACKS REPORTED ON WEST FRONT

Austrian Retreat Continues And Importance Of The Italian Success Has Not Been Overestimated

The Piave River is Choked With Enemy Dead and the Debris of Their Equipment---Large Section of Austrian Army May Be Forced to Surrender---Italians Have Crossed the Piave River at Three Points on a Twenty Mile Front---Infantry and Cavalry in Action---Thousands of Austrians Captured.

BRITISH FORCE PENETRATED AUSTRIAN LINES

(Canadian Press)

WASHINGTON, June 25.—An official despatch from Rome says that the Austrians are in full retreat and that papers taken from prisoners show that Austria had not contemplated the possibility of defeat and was promising her soldiers that this offensive would be the last stroke to put Italy out of the war.

(Special to The Examiner)

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMIES IN THE FIELD, June 25.—The Austrian retreat continues. The importance and scope of the Italian success grows hourly. It is now expected that the Archduke Joseph and Gen. Von Wurm must surrender or be annihilated.

The Piave is choked with enemy dead and the debris of their equipment. The attempt of the Austrian war office to represent the retirement as voluntary is false. In only a few scattered places could the river be forded and these were under constant pounding by the Italian artillery and allied airmen. The handful of bridges also was pelted with shells and air bombs.

It is positively established that the enemy losses are even greater in the retreat than as a direct result of Italian counter offensive. Allied air forces were particularly active in harrassing the Austrian retreat across the river at Falze after the enemy had been swept from Montello.

The Italian Cavalry is Pursuing the Enemy

Thousands of Austrians have been captured. Other thousands have been wiped out by artillery and machine guns and rifle fire by air bombing and by drowning.

Italian cavalry is pursuing the enemy for beyond the Piave, the horsemen are pushing forward toward the line between Coneglian and Oderzo.

The infantry has followed the cavalry across and is operating on the east bank at three points on a twenty mile front, between Montello and Ponte Di Piave. Gen. Diaz, has made no announcement as to the extent the Italians will follow the retreating Austrians. It is known that the greater part of Austrians reserves are concentrated in the Mountain area to the north which has now become the Italian flank. A considerable British force penetrated Austrian lines on the Aisgo Plateau and returned with a number of prisoners who may furnish valuable information regarding the enemy's intentions in this region. Just what effect the Piave retirement may have on expectant Austrian drive southwards from the Mountains, cannot yet be determined.

(Canadian Press)

PARIS, June 25.—(Havas Agency)—Austrian losses total two hundred thousand men according to the "Secolo" of Milan. It is certain that enemy divisions lost two thirds of their effectives. A despatch to the "Matin" from Turin says that the rout of the Austrians is complete and that the Piave has carried away many Austrian dead. Italian cavalry it is added have advanced beyond the eastern bank of the river.

French newspapers continue to acclaim the Italian victory. The hope is expressed that General Diaz is profiting by the demoralization of the enemy and will not confine the fighting to local actions, but will strike out boldly into an offensive and transform the Austrian retreat to the Piave into a decisive victory.

ITALIANS HAVE CAPTURED SEVERAL NEW POSITIONS

(Special to The Examiner)

ROME, June 25.—The Austrians have been swept across the Piave river on the whole front from Montello to the sea, except for a three mile sector between Musile and Cape Sile, where a covering force is still holding out, it was semi-officially announced today

The Italians have occupied enemy trenches on Montalbrella and Mont Ausclove and have captured hill 1473. "Prisoners are still flowing in" the statement said.

(Canadian Press)

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Despatch to the Italian Embassy from Rome today confirms announcement yesterday, that the prisoners taken by the Italians in fighting at Piave numbered 45,000. This includes some twelve or fifteen thousand captured during past week before Austrian offensive, was turned into a rout.

Von Hindenburg May Have to Aid Austria.

(Special to Examiner)

NEW YORK, June 25.—Von Hindenburg's plans for a new offensive on the western front may be disorganized by the development of a major Italian offensive against the Austrians. If the present retirement of the Hapsburg armies becomes a disorderly route, Von Hindenburg must go to the assistance of his ally at any cost. If he does not, German military men will certainly lose their influence at Vienna—and Austria-Hungary might well be driven out of the war, not by hunger, but by defeat on the field of battle. Von Hindenburg has already taken chances by not hurrying help to the Hapsburger. The Austria-Hungarians are doubtless already blaming the Piave disaster on Germany's reluctance to send troops into Italy.

A series of fast drives by Gen. Diaz at this time might easily demoralize the retreating Austrian-Hungarians. Once a disorderly rout begins on the east bank of the Piave, pressure from Vienna for help from Germany would assume character of an ultimatum.

Italian Front is Under Supreme Control of Gen. Foch.

There are difficulties, however, in the situation which may make in adoption of forward tactics by the Italian impracticable. The Italian front is now under the supreme control of General Foch. The Italians themselves have made no preparations for a major offensive of their own this summer. They have been waiting until Gen. Foch gives the word for a concentrated effort by all the Allied armies.

To insure success to a great thrust against the Austria-Hungarians Gen. Foch might have to delay important units from his forces in France. If this were done, disclosure of weakness in Flanders might be folowed by important consequences.

The Italian front is not the mainstay of the war. It is doubtful whether Gen. Foch would be warranted in weakening his defense of Paris and the Channel ports by moving large bodies of troops into Italy for offensive purposes.

REPORT THAT THE FORMER CZAR HAS BEEN ASSASSINATED

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 25. — Unconfirmed reports from Petrograd were in circulation here to-day that the former Czar had been killed at Ekaterinberg by the Bolsheviki.

Dispatches from Petrograd declare that Mensheviki and Social Revolutionaries of the right are expected to control the coming Soviet elections, despite the professional policies being brought into play by the Bolsheviki.

A Moscow report said that M. Volodarsky, Bolshevikl Commissioner of Press Affairs, was shot dead on the street in Petrograd on Friday.

Americans In Hun Territory

Germans Made This Discovery For the First Time on Sunday as Result of Raid

(United Press Service.)
(By Frank J. Taylor.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, June 25. — American troops are holding a mountainous sector south-east of St. Die, where the battle line crosses from Lorraine into German territory, it is now permissible to announce.

They have been in the trenches here since the first of June, but no mention of their presence was allowed until the Germans had made the discovery themselves. This occurred Sunday when an enemy raid on this sector resulted in two Americans being captured.

Another Boche raid near Baccarat, between St. Die and Luneville, resulted in the capture of other American prisoners.

BLAME FOR THE CONFLICT

Russia is Charged With the Responsibility of Instigating the War —Want Freedom of the Sea

GERMANY'S WAR AIMS

Canadian Press:

LONDON, June 25.— Dr. Richard Von Kuehlmann, German Foreign Secretary, declared to the Reichstag in Berlin yesterday that Germany could not bind herself to any pledges in regard to Belgium. Referring to Germany's war aims, Dr. Von Kuehlmann said: "We wish for the German people and our allies a free, strong, independent existence within boundaries drawn for us by history. We desire overseas possession corresponding to our greatness and wealth and freedom of the sea, carrying our trade to all parts of the world."

The chief blame for instigating the war was laid at Russia's door by Dr. Von Kuehlmann, German Foreign Secretary, in his address to the Reichstag yesterday, in which he also dealt with Germany's war aims. France and England were named as next powers in order of culpability.

The Peterboro' Presbytery Was in Session This Morning

Rev. J. P. McInnis, of Omemee, Was Appointed Moderator For the Next Six Months

At the meeting of the Peterboro Presbytery this morning in St. Paul's church. Rev. J. P. McInnis of Ommee, was appointed moderator for the next six months to succeed Rev. Mr. Skeene of Havelock.

The Home Mission committee of the Presbytery is considering cooperation with the Methodists in "week charges" of the mission field through the Peterboro Presbytery. This would prevent over lapping with the two sections. A definite decision will be arrived at in September.

Rev. Mr. McIntosh of Campbellford, read a hopeful report of the Sunday School and Young People's Societies and the Sunday School programme. In his report he emphasized the values of teacher training for efficiency in their work.

The meeting as a whole was occupied with routine work and reports. It was well attended, most of the districts being represented.

Considerable Activity On The Western Battlefront

Germans Launched a New Attack on the French Front But Were Repulsed—Americans Took Remainder of Belleau Wood.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

Canadian Pres:

LONDON, June 25.— Activity was displayed during last night by German artillery in the region to the east of Amiens, between Villers Bretonneux and Moriancourt. There was some artillery activity also in other sectors. Raiding operations in Arras region by Canadians resulted in the capture of prisoners and machine guns.

British airmen made a series of attacks on Metz, Sablon, Searbrucken and Lillingen Sunday night and Monday, it was officially announced today.

The railway establishment at Metz and Sablon, and factories in Searbrucken and Lillingen were badly damaged.

One enemy plane was brought down in flames. All the British machines returned safely.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, June 25.— The Germans last night attacked new French positions in the region of Leport, north of the Aisne, but were able to make no gains. In surprise attacks in the Wovre district and in Lorraine the French captured 20 prisoners.

THE STATEMENT READS:

North of the Aisne, after a violent bombardment and grenade fighting, the enemy attacked positions recently gained by us north-east of Leport. The French positions were maintained in their entirety. Artillery activity was rather lively in the region of Faverolles and Courcy, between the Aisne and the Marne.

A STRANGE INCIDENT.

(By Lowell Mallet.)
(United Press Service.)

WITH THE AMERICANS ON THE MARNE, June 25.— The fighting in which the Americans completed their conquest of Belleau Wood, was one of the strangest of the war.

German machine guns, cunningly hidden in trenches, were forced from different points. Most of the enemy weapons were placed behind rocks, however, from where they spat continuously. The Americans crawled and wriggled forward. When the enemy's machine guns opened up they would lie motionless. Then they would resume their stealthy progress when the firing ceased.

Eventually they swarmed over many emplacements only to find that the Boches had fled with their guns, leaving the ammunition behind. A series of such evacuations resulted in an appreciable advance of the American line.

ITALIANS HAVE STARTED A COUNTER OFFENSIVE IN THE MOUNTAINS SAYS LATE DESPATCH

The Austrians Are Making a Strong Stand But Have Been Forced to Give Ground—British Forces Have Made a Substantial Gain on the Aisago Plateau

(Special to Examiner)

LONDON, June 25.—The Italians have started a counter offensive in the Mountain region is was learned from an authoritive source this afternoon.

The Austrians are making a strong resistance, but the Italians have gained.

The above dispatch does not show the extent of the Italian counter-offensive, but British forces already have made an appreciable gain on the Aisago Plateau in conjunction with Italian gains along the Piave.

It is possible that General Diaz knowing the Austrians contemplated a renewal of their drive south-wards from the Mountains, "Beat them to the pinch."

(Special to The Examiner)

WASHINGTON, June 25—Italian forces are preparing for a great drive against the Austrians in the Trentino and expects to repeat the disaster inflicted upon the enemy along the Piave, the official report declares today.

UNITED STATES WILL HARDLY ATTEMPT TO ENFORCE PROHIBITION

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, June 25.—"We can't afford to experiment with a nation's destiny," was the answer to-day of Edward N. Hurley, chairman of the Shipping Board, to those advocating war time prohibition of the use of beer and wines. Hurley frankly said he does not know whether prohibition would reduce the efficiency of the shipyards. "But," he said, "I don't want to take any chances."

"There would be more risk in war time prohibition than conscription of labour," he said.

Peterboro' Girl Killed Overseas

Nursing Sister Marion Overend Met Death in An Aeroplane Accident

Mrs. L. J. Picard, 497 Park street, received word yesterday that her sister, Nursing Sister Marion Overend, of the hospital staff, connected with the 3rd Aerial Squadron, France, had been killed on June 16th, in an aeroplane accident. Whether the accident was due to a hostile or friendly aeroplane was not stated.

Miss Overend left New York in February with her sister, Nursing Sister May Overend, both of whom, graduates of Mount Sinae Hospital, were attached to the American hospital corps. In a letter received by Mrs. Picard only yesterday from Miss Marion Overend, she spoke enthusiastically of her life with the Aerial Camp Hospital, of which there were three nursing sisters attached, and said life was quite lively enough there. Miss May Overend is at a base hospital, perhaps closer to the lines.

Crop Report From The West

WINNIPEG, June 25.—In its fifth crop report this season the Winnipeg Free Press today said:—It is fairly evident that the Canadian west will not have bumper crop this year, but with good weather from now on there is reasonable hope of a fair crop. It is expected the crop will be later in some districts. The situation in coarse grain is good especially in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Toronto Doctor Heavily Fined

BRITISH ARE THREATENED

German Troops Have Been Landed Near Batum—Serious Disturbances in Russia

WAVE OF PROTEST

(United Press Service.)
(By Joseph Shaplen.)

STOCKHOLM, June 25. — Three thousand German troops, accompanied by a cruiser two destroyers and a submarine, have landed at Portus, near Batum, is was learned to-day.

They probably will seek to affect the complete occupation of the Caucasus, thus threatening the British in Persia and Mesopotamia. It is believed they will immediately extend their occupation to the provinces of Kuban and Kutais.

Batum is an important seaport on the south-eastern shores of the Black Sea. It is connected by railway with Baku, the great oil centre, on the western shore of the Caspian Sea. Portus is about 23 miles north of Batum. The Kuban province lies north of Batum, while Kutais borders Kuban on the north, extending along the eastern shores of the Sea Azov and reaching nearly to the Don river.

AID FROM GERMANY.

A serious disturbance occurred in Moscow when the Bolsheviki arrested the fifty-six members of the Workmen conference who demanded a constituent assembly. Those arrested included ten Mensheviki.

The Bolsheviki are reported to be planning to expel the entire right and Mensheviki faction of the Pan-Executive committee. The Bolsheviki are getting direct aid from Germany for their fight against the Siberians and Czecho-Slovaks.

REV. W. D. SPENCE IS NOT SATISFIED

(Special to The Examiner.)

GUELPH, June 25.—"Just evasion and not an answer to my telegram," declared Rev. W. D. Spence to the reporter commenting upon Hon. Mr. Doherty's published statement defining the status of his son, Marcus, under the Military Service Act. "Mr. Doherty does not even say the young man was medically examined in a duly accredited manner. Does he tell us whether he has any papers to show whether or not he had registered or anything else. I did not expect I would get a satisfactory answer and only sent the letter to let the Minister of Justice know we are conversant with the facts."

"What further action is contemplated by the Guelph Ministerial Association?" asked the reporter.

"We will not meet until we hear of a definite move on the part of the Government. We will give them time to make up their minds, but there is no intention on our part to let up the pressure until we get what we want. We have succeeded in getting all we wanted up to the present. We have brought the facts before the Government and made out our case for a different interpretation of the Military Service Act, which will not permit immunity from service in the case of Roman Catholic religious students and operate to the disadvantage of Protestant Divinity students.

Will Investigate.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, June 25.—The Government will, it is understood, take into consideration to-day the interview given by Lieut.-Col. Machin, Director of Military Services at Montreal, in which it is alleged that a plot against Hon. C. H. Doherty exists among colleagues of the cabinet as reflected by the Guelph Novitiate affair. Circumstances are to be fully investigated.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, JUNE 25TH, 1918.

A SERIOUS CHARGE.

Whatever may be the truth of Col. H. A. Machin's statement that there is a powerful cabal at Ottawa against the Hon. Mr. Doherty, Minister of Justice, the charge made by the director of the Military Service Branch of the Ministry of Justice that the Militia Department has fallen down on its job as far as Quebec is concerned is a serious one. Col. Machin bluntly states that although at the present time there are 11,000 men in the province of Quebec eligible for service and ready to be called, it has been impossible for the Department of Justice to order these men to report for service because the Militia Department is not able to handle them. The figures given out last week show that only 8,000 have been called in Quebec as against 28,000 in Ontario and Col. Machin's statement may be taken as an indication that he is not going to allow himself to be regarded as the scape-goat for this condition of affairs. His remarks throw a new light on the Quebec situation and it is not a very flattering commentary on the management of the Militia Department to say that now that there are thousands of recruits in Quebec ready to be summoned to the colours, the military authorities are in no position to handle the men. There has been ample time to make preparations, and Col. Machin's advice that before tackling any new work such as the administration of the Military Service Act they should first clean their own house seems to be timely and needed.

As Col. Machin points out, his frank statement will probably cost him his appointment.

OUR HOLIDAYS.

In an article upon Canada's patriotic holidays, the Montreal Star uncovers a rich vein of truth when it remarks upon the meaningless manner in which they are observed by Canadians. Says the Star:

Holiday after holiday passes listlessly along in one protracted procession of odious boredom. Those who can do so escape from the cities, which ought to be the headquarters for truly national celebrations, every time. The people who cannot escape endure it as best they may and long for the morrow.

All this implies a serious short-sighted policy on the part of those responsible for the up-keep of the Canadian patriotic spirit amongst the large number of people in the country who come from foreign lands. Also, it is a matter of regret that patriotic holidays in Canada should be permitted to become the subject for jest that they are even amongst the native-born.

The United States make July the Fourth, every year, mean something. This year, part of the celebration will be the launching of 63 ships in various parts of the country, with appropriate ceremonies. What about July First in Canada? Will it pass as usual with no other notice than a few flags on the houses and a slight increase in the sale of cigars?

There is little doubt of the truth of the contention advanced by our Montreal contemporary. For instance next Monday is Dominion Day, and while there will be games and picnics in many cities, it is doubtful if at any of these events will there be any reference to the significance of the occasion. Doubtless many citizens would be at a loss to explain just why July the 1st is a holiday. At this time when Canada occupies a prouder position in the world than at any time in h[illegible]istory, no Canadian [illegible]o forget that Do[illegible] Canada's national [illegible]resents the feder[illegible]n provinces into [illegible] is so gloriously taking its part in the war for the freedom of civilization.

It should be possible at all the celebrations that are taking place for some speaker to briefly explain the reason Canadians celebrate the occasion. We are sometimes inclined to jest at the spread eagle nature of the oratory that distinguishes the observance of July 4th in the United States, but in our hearts we must confess that our neighbours to the South, as the Star points out, "make July the Fourth every year mean something."

Here in Peterborough it is not too late to arrange to have a short address in connection with the celebration at the Exhibition grounds. There is no need for long speeches, but some local orator should be asked to devote five or ten minutes to an address to the crowd on the significance of "Dominion Day."

We are too inclined to regard such occasions as merely an opportunity to escape from work for a day.

TOBACCO FOR SOLDIERS.

For the benefit of Mrs. Gordon Wright, president of the Dominion Women's Christian Temperance Union, and the other speakers at last week's convention, who deplored the sending of tobacco and cigarettes to Canadian soldiers overseas, and who appealed to the women of Canada to refrain from forwarding any further supply of smokes, this article on the subject by Sergt. Arthur Guy Empey, is published. Sergt. Empey is an American who fought with the British forces in France, and whose book, "Over the Top," published last year, has scored a sensational success.

The picture that he has given in the sketch published below of conditions at the front, and of the value of tobacco in maintaining the morale of the soldier, should convince everyone of the necessity of disregarding Mrs. Wright's appeal.

Sergt. Empey says:

"We all know that a soldier's work is to destroy and kill so that we may live.

This work to him is repulsive. He is not a murderer; he does not revel in bloodshed. He is human. He doesn't want to work all the time. He needs play, recreation and comfort, just as we do.

He wants a smoke—is dying for one. His over-strained nerves need one.

These are facts, not theory. I know, I have been in the trenches, and craved the comfort of a good, delicious smoke, and didn't get it.

Perhaps you will say, 'My boy is over there, and he doesn't smoke.'

Don't fool yourself—after he has 'sat it out' on the fire step of a front line trench for a few days, he will smoke. He can't help it.

The public to be convinced must have facts. Well here are some facts—actual happenings in the trenches of France, and in the hospitals. These incidents will show the crying need of the soldiers for smokes.

Are we going to send them some, or are we going to let them keep on longing?

A wounded Tommy Atkins is lying on the ground, the blood running from a hole in his leg made by a bit of shrapnel; he is yelling for the stretcher-bearers. Here they come on the double. They stop beside him, placing the stretcher on the ground, open it up, and one of them unbuttons a little pouch he is carrying. He sticks in his hand and pulls out—no, not a bandage—but a smoke. Hands it to the wounded Tommy, who is grinning. The grin makes cracks in the dried mud on his face, then the following conversation ensues

Stretcher Bearer: 'Want a smoke? Where are you hit?'

Tommy: 'Yes; in the leg.'

The stretcher bearer lights the smoke, binds up Tommy's wound, and placing him on the stretcher, the two Red Cross men start with him on their way to the nearest advanced dressing station. Wending their way through the muddy and narrow communication trench, the leading stretcher bearer stumbles over a trench grid—down he goes, and Tommy is nearly dumped in the mud.

He lets out a yell.

The offending stretcher bear, red-faced and ashamed of his carelessness, in a nervous voice inquires: 'Did I 'urt your waund, mate? I'm sorry.'

Tommy answers: "Ell, no!'

Tommy meekly: 'I dropped my smoke, mate, tip us another.'

The stretcher bearers search their pockets, and pouches, but find none.

The stretcher, with its bleeding burden, resumes its winding course through the trench, its wake blue with curses and sarcastic remarks from Tommy directed at the stretcher bearers.

If there had been another smoke Tommy would have been contented and happy, but as it was he was miserable and complaining, making it unpleasant for everyone who handled him in his long trip to 'Blighty.'

But such is our creed of the trenches—keep our boys warm, their bellies full, give them plenty of smokes, and they will plant the flag in Berlin. Just stop filling any one of the three needs—especially the 'smokes'—and although the flag will eventually land where it belongs, it will take much longer.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The amount wanted for the upkeep of Supervised Playgrounds in Peterboro, is $1200, not $12,000, as a typographical error caused the Examiner to say last night. Only $1200, and this sum will pay heavy dividends, invested as it will be.

The book drive for the benefit of Peterboro soldiers is on in earnest. Already a splendid offering of reading matter has been made. Bring your gifts to the Public Library this week. The Red Cross will do the rest.

The Austrians seem to be making satisfactory progress—that is progress satisfactory to the allies, at least.

Judging by the comments heard yesterday the first Sunday of closed restaurants, did not make much of a hit with the public. The sooner the City Council amends that bylaw the better. In the meantime, hundreds of citizens will suffer. Already one restaurant is offered for sale, and the final result of the drastic regulations may be to leave Peterboro without any restaurant accommodation.

It is a safe bet that Peterboro was the only city in Canada in which a meal could not be obtained in a restaurant on Sunday last—a fine advertisement of this city as a progressive community.

Tom Minnecola hasn't been so happy since Italy entered the war as he was yesterday. And everybody rejoiced with him in the success of the Italians.

It is hoped the reports of the arrival of the Bolsheviki doctrine in Austria is confirmed. The policy wrecked Russia in record time, and here's hoping for similar results in Austria.

County Tax Rate Of 10.47 1-3 Mills To Be Paid By Municipalities

A Slight Advance Over Last Year's Rate—County's Financial Obligations Total $96,781.50—Peterborough's Condition Strong and War Contributions Are Paid Out of Taxes.

The taxes to be raised for county purposes by the townships of Peterboro amount to $96,781.50, for which a rate of 10.47 1-3 mills was struck by the county council last night, was announced by Mr. F. A. Eason, in his statement as chairman of the Finance Committee.

The rate last year was 10.43 mills, and the comparatively slight advance may be regarded as an indication of the policy of the County Council in this year's work. Although there was no explicit pronouncement of the Council's design, the facts clearly show that the County's administrators have been guided by economy, confining their expenses to essential and necessary requirements.

Warden Anderson stated in a brief reference to the County's financial strength that it takes place among the first half dozen counties in the province. It is paying its war contributions out of the current taxes, and the only debentures issues have been for the rebuilding of the Court House, and some public work, such as bridge building. In other words, the County is securely solvent, and its war time undertakings are evidently based on economy that is consistent with efficiency.

Mr. Eason's statement follows:

ESTIMATED RATES.

General County rates	4.10 mills
House of Refuge	.60 mills
Schools	.14 mills
Patriotic Fund	3.33 1-3 mills
Provincial war tax	1. mill

Patriotic Fund	30,857.00

ALLIES CONFIDENT OF ISSUE

Editor of The Examiner,—

Sir: While the government has placed certain restrictions upon beef, pork and bread, there is nothing to prevent hotels and restaurants from serving all other meats, fish and vegetables, as before, seeing that they are in abundance and cheaper than formerly. They charge the same, if not more as when they gave a full meal, instead of reducing their prices. The government is lax in its duty when it stands idly by and allows the people to be thus imposed upon.

Yours truly,
"Fairplay."

PICNICS, GARDEN PARTIES, ETC. MUST FOLLOW FOOD REGULATIONS

Recent Amendments By Canada Food Board Make Laws More Sweeping — Boarding Houses Must Be Licensed.

The Canada Food Board has extended considerably the list of places comprehended by the term "public eating house." It includes hotels, restaurants, cafeterias, clubs or club rooms, private families keeping boarders, boarding houses, schools, dining cars, steamships or any place where meals or refreshments are regularly sold or served to others than members of the family or household of the proprietor or caterer.

Police Sergt. Reid this morning drew attention to the inclusion of private boarding houses in the regulations, and, since all such places must obtain licenses, he advised that persons in Peterborough who may be affected by this change, should lose no time in securing a license from the Food Board at Ottawa.

For Picnics and Luncheons.

The Canada Gazette, under date of June 12th, also sets out the food law as it applies to public entertainments, lawn socials, tea meetings, public luncheons, picnics, fairs, lodge and fraternal society meetings and all similar places where food may be served or sold. In short, the rules that apply to eating houses are, generally speaking, the same that have been adopted for these public and social affairs. Hence it is advisable that those who are holding lawn socials, picnics and similar assemblies should first obtain copies of the Gazette of June 12th, and fully inform themselves of the regulations to which they must adhere.

The Registration In Peterboro' City And County Successfully Completed

That the registration of the Man and Woman Power of Canada in this district has been accomplished so quietly and successfully is due to the hearty, faithful and efficient service given those whose names are enrolled as per list following. Being practically inexperienced, except in a few instances, the work has been done in a thorough and satisfactory manner.

Contrary to expectations, there did not develop on Saturday as was to be expected, a rush for the places to close up the work. Citizens have taken advantage of the provision to keep open the several places for registration purposes during the week, and the bulk of the work was done and finished before Saturday. Fortunately the weather was favorable, otherwise the result might not have been so satisfactory. Saturday saw comparatively little to do though the several staffs were on duty and ready. Each deputy and his or her assistants stood loyally to line and a most efficient service. Especially was this the case, and at considerable personal inconvenience, during Friday and Saturday, when many of the places, lacking heating facilities were positively uncomfortable. But for the brief time occupied it was impossible to provide warmth.

Churches Used

It is agreed that using the several churches and Sunday schools was a good feature. People going to the schools found there friendly faces and cordial attention. At the day schools a similar state of good feeling prevailed, children asking their parents to register at "Our School". But several places, off the direct line of travel had comparatively little to do though most amply equipped. With the total number of places at hand the whole population of age within the limit of years, was enrolled with expedition and in no case has there been the slightest trouble.

As to the matter of paying. The orders were to enroll volunteers. But in cases of organization work, of a purely administrative character, of positive employment, payment will be made. A work of the size and importance cannot be carried on without some expense for service. But in the aggregate the expense will be comparatively trifling. And just what it will be cannot be determined until the work is closed up. If the Government has effected the registration and saved $10,000,000 of expense, then that amount will be so much less for the country as a whole to find. The public will accept the statement that not one person, on the list as given has been or will be paid. Only a few have asked that if one were paid all should be treated like. All have been treated, or rather have treated thmeselves alike, to the great advantage of the work and to the good of the expenditure of the country, as a whole.

It was the intention of the Registrar to make public, so soon as a definite list could be made up, of the names of those who would give service. Manifestly there have been many changes since the enrollment began. Were the first lists taken, and made public, then many who did not serve would get the credit of serving, and others who served have been felt out. So that any calls for a list were premature. As printed the list is taken, after careful revision, as being accurate and complete. If any have been overlooked then on advice being given the fault will be remedied.

Voluntary Workers.

As might be expected in a work of such a size, there has been degrees of service This has been apparent all through the work of organization which has taken from the 6th of May to the present to complete All over the riding people were to be seen and written to, constant correspondence and much personal conference has been necessary. And as would be expected, the automobile has been a most useful accessory, for work in the outside territory, which has been covered from South Monaghan on the south, to the borders of Galway and Cavendish, on the north of the deputies who have been assiduous in supplying service, the Registrar has pleasure in acknowledging his indebedness to Mrs. W. R. Morris and to Mrs. Gerald Wood. Each has been at disposal and brought their cars, personally driven, and stayed in service up to eleven o'clock on Saturday night. As lieutenants in the service, the work of these ladies was admirable. Cheerfully and with the greatest readiness anything that was asked was done. And without renumeration Mrs. Morris, greatly assisted in the organization from day to day.

The Registrar is indebted to Mr. T. E. Bradburn, for friendly personal assistance from day to day during the last month. To Mr. F. Brownscombe who came into the work cheerfully and was of large help. To Mr. G. A. Smith, who was on the job day and night. The experience of these gentlemen in election organization and detail was of great assistance. And to the whole list of Deputies and Assistant Deputies the Registrar expresses thanks and appreciation, and the public may well add its part of commendation. They have done an important public work and done it well.

From the outset the teachers of the local schools and throughout the riding have given helpful service. In fact the initial appeal was made, as directed to the profession. This appeal was well directed, for with the advantage of the educational training the teacher was well fitted to grasp the details of the service and carry out. Without exception the school staffs responded, and to that fact the attention of the Board of Education in the city and the trustees of the schools in the rural sections is directed, and if those bodies made official recognitions, it would only be within the line of acknowledgment. Schools were without exception made the enrollment places in the several townships on the ground, that having been placed convenient, as may be to meet the attendance of children the places would not be too far out of the way for the parents to visit.

The assistance of the Press is cheerfully acknowledged. Once again, as before, the newspapers have cheerfully added the service of publicity, and placed before the people the facts as to what was expected and how to accomplish that which should de done. And in printing this list, at considerable cost in its production, the papers add one more service to the already large roll to their credit.

The Aliens

The care of registering accurately the Chinamen in the city was handed as a special service to Deputy T. Walker, of 377 Park St., Mr. Walker took as his guide philosopher and friend, Hun Jim, of the Dominion Cafe. Our Chinese friend speaks English, very well, and he acted as interpreter. The several places of abode were visited, in the evenings, and the facts recorded. It is of interest to learn that the Chinese population numbers 41. Many of these it developed, have had in their own country, education that is equivalant to the grade as taught in our Collegiate Institute. They have the diplomas or certificates. This fact is one that is contrary to general conception as to the extent of education among the Chinese that have come to Canada.

Those of the Italian colony who were not able to express themselves in English, were registered by Deputy D. N. Minnicola, who was engaged as interpreter for the purpose Of other nationalities, all were registered by Deputy Abram Lowe, who, as has been stated, is conversant with a number of languages and dialects, principally of peoples of what our German enemies, call Mittle Europe.

The Deputy George Howson, and his assistants belongs the honor of the largest registration, outside the factory district. In all 964 persons registered with Deputy Howson. He may now very stoutly claim that he and his staff were exceedingly popular, and that the facilities afforded were appreciated. Mr. W. I. Hopwood, seeing that things were extreely lively, came into the service and gave most valuable assistance.

Action To Contest A. J. Gaddye's Will

Mrs. Ethel May Guerin has issued a caveat claiming that the will of her grandfather, the late Alfred John Gaddye, was made while he was mentally incapable, and alleging that undue influence was used in procuring the execution of the will. Mrs. Guerin is the daughter of Mrs. Eva Fidella Crouter, who she maintains is the only and lawful daughter and not the stepdaughter of the deceased A. J. Gaddye. It is stated that Mrs. Guerin was excluded from the will on the ground that her mother, Mrs. Crouter, was only a stepdaughter. Mrs. Crouter is the widow of Private Albert Crouter, who died here some months ago. The estate is in Peterborough and valued at more than $18,000. Mr. W. J. Outram is the executor. Gordon, O'Brien & Widdifield are solicitors for the plaintiff.

OBITUARY

RICHARD B. WAREHAM.

Word was received in the city this morning of the death of Mr. Richard B. Wareham, only remaining brother of Mrs. R. E. Shera, George Street.

Mr. Wareham passed away at the family residence, 300 Cooper Avenue, Hancock, Mich., on Friday morning, after a week's illness, resulting from a fall. He was well known in Peterborough. The funeral took place to Mount Forest Cenetery, Houghton, on Sunday, June 23rd.

FREDERICK C. TAYLOR.

The call came at an early hour yesterday in Lindsay to an honoured and respected citizen of the community in the person of the late Frederick C. Taylor. In his passing Lindsay loses a citizen of the highest type. Born in Peterborough, where he was closely associated with the late Senator Cox, in the insurance and express business in the early seventies, he was transferred to Lindsay as manager of the Canadian Express Co.'s business and as agent of the Canada Life Insurance Co. His success in the insurance business was so marked that he was rated as one of the ablest of the Company's representatives. His business activities brought out all his high qualities as a man of large human sympathies and keen interest in the promotion of the welfare of Lindsay and its citizenship.

He served the town in the capacity of Mayor in the year 1881-82, and those who were associated with him around the Council board often refer to him as a Chief Magistrate who controlled the affairs of the municipality with tact and ability, giving the citizens loyal and conscientious service.

In politics the deceased was a Liberal of the old school and an enthusiastic supporter of Liberal principles.

A Methodist in religion, he was one of the veteran members of Cambridge street church, and for a number of years filled the position of treasurer.

Even after his retirement from busines life the late Mr. Taylor still manifested a deep interest in the affairs of the community. His life was an exemplary one, and his name, familiar to everybody in the district, will be held in peculiar honour and associated with a career characterized by sterling integrity, sincerity and genuineness.

The late Mr. Taylor's business associations were confined during the past several years to two financial institutions in which he took a warm interest—the Central Canada Loan & Savings Co. and the Victoria Loan & Savings Co., being a member of the directorate.

During the past year the deceased's health began to decline, but it was hoped that with the advent of spring he would speedily recover. He was able during the past few weeks to take afternoon automobile trips, but during the past few days his condition became worse, the call from the Great Beyond coming at 2.00 o'clock yesterday morning.

The passing of Mr. Taylor removes the last member of the family. He has a couple of nieces residing at St. Ignace, Mich.

The funeral will leave the family residence, Mill street on Wednesday, June 26th, at 10.15 a.m., and proceed to the G.T.R. station. Service at the house at 9.45 a.m. Interment at Little Lake cemetery, Peterborough, on arrival of Lindsay train.

A Chinaman, who wanted two railway tickets to St. Mary's was refused because he did not have a certificate.

BAND WILL PLAY AT GARDEN PARTY THIS EVENING

The 57th Regimental Band will play this evening at the garden party at the home of Mr. D. J. Lundy, East City, under the auspices of the Otonabee Chapter Daughters of the Empire. The bandsmen will meet at 7.30 at the Armouries.

Officer At Fault Says Department

Capt. MacAuley Was Offensive When Raiding the Guelph Institution.

OTTAWA, June 24. — Apparently none of the young men, members of St. Stanislaus Novitiate at Guelph, are liable for military service. The Militia Department stated this morning that information had been received by telegram from the rector of the Novitiate to the effect that John O'Halloran, one of the young men referred to in a former statement as being liable for service, is an American citizen and in possession of his United States registration papers. The other young man, John Holland, the rector states, was a tonsured cleric before the proclamation under the Military Service Act was issued. Investigation showed that these two young men were apparentely the only members of the Novitiate liable for service. Upon the statement of facts, which regard to them, submitted to the department by the rector, neither of them is liable for service.

It was stated at the department that Captain MacAuley, who led the raid on the Novitiate, and who has since been transferred to Winnipeg, was at fault, not in wishing to find out whether there were any defaulters domiciled there, but in the method he adopted in doing it. He was acting under the authority of the department in investigating conditions in the Novitiate, but he should have chosen a more sutable time and a less offensive method of procedure.

HE SLEPT STANDING UP.

Went Into Land of Nod in Court Room and Blamed His Asthma Habit.

Dan Kelly, arrested on a misdemeanor charge at Marysville, California, narrowly escaped facing an additional charge of contempt of court when he was found sound asleep standing up in the court room. Kelly, who has only one natural leg to stand on, the other being of seasoned oak, explained to the court that for years he has suffered from asthma and has long been accustomed to sleeping standing up. He said he had become so accustomed to this position for slumbering that he forgot he was in the courtroom.

Not Reading Matter.

"I won't pay one cent for my advertising this week," declared the storekeeper angrily to the editor of the country paper. "You told me you'd put the notice of my shoe polish in with the reading matter."

"And didn't I do it?" inquired the editor.

"No, sir!" roared the advertiser. "No, sir, you did not! You put it in the column with a mess of poetry, that's where you put it!"—Exchange.

Indian Jugglers.

Magicians and jugglers were found among the Indians by the Jesuit missionaries as early as 1613, and they were common among all the Algonquin tribes, and Charlevoix mentions them among the Iroquois in 1635. The Spaniards met them in Mexico and South America.

Oil of Bergamot.

The world's supply of oil of bergamot comes from a comparatively small part of Calabria, in the extreme south of Italy, fronting on the strait of Messina.

Stoney Lake Service

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

Fed Up.

(Hamilton Times.)

You don't need to go to the front to get gassed. Just go to Toronto.

A Generous Tribute.

(Bache Review, New York.)

England's part in the war, in every development of it, has been a marvelous manifestation of able, righteous, gigantic energy. Her progress has been made without ostentation, as is the English character and without propaganda, criticized and blamed wherever sneaking German influence could poisonously diffuse lying misrepresentation.

His Wife Knits Socks for Soldiers.

(Clinton, Ill., Republic.)

The button supply of the country is reported as running short, but thank the Lord, the politicians have not legislated the thorns off the locust trees and there are plenty of shingle nails left.

Probable Coal Shortage.

(Buffalo Express.)

None should delude himself with the belief that there will be plenty of coal as measured by pre-war uses. There will not be. Everybody must make up his mind that the supply will be short and must make his arrangements accordingly. You may not get more than four shovelfuls where you had five last winter; maybe you will not get even that much.

Almost Miraculous.

(Chicago Tribune.)

Considering that Foch has no reserves and there is no American army, the Allies are holding well. The Berliners must wonder how they do it.

No Mere Luxury Now.

(Toronto Star.)

In 1913 the number of motor cars owned by farmers in Ontario was 996. Last year this number had grown to 23,409. In the province of Saskatchewan there are 30,000 cars. The motor car has come to stay. It is used not only for pleasure, but it is the greatest or modern utilities.

Some Mistake Here.

(Hamilton Herald.)

It is officially announced that the Yankee troops hold 38 miles of the front in France. Which makes us doubt the truth of the official German statement that there is no American army in France.

Not An Uncommon Class.

(Vancouver Sun).

There are some fellows in this town who if they went to war would certainly give a good account of themselves—after they got back.

THE DECEASED WAS WELL KNOWN HERE

SEAFORTH, Ont., June 24.—One of the best known commercial travellers in Canada, W. E. Southgate, sen., died at his home here Saturday morning, aged 69 years, from heart trouble and other complications.

He had been a resident of Canada about 50 years, living in Toronto about 35 years after coming from England, and for the past twelve years had made his home here, being engaged in the manufacture of clothing and latterly returning to his former vocation as representative of several of the most known American and Canadian factories.

He was well known in Peterborough having travelled through here for the past thirty years.

Italians Have Captured 3,000 More Austrian Prisoners

Main Bank Of The Piave Has Been Cleared Of The Enemy

Austrians Have Been Forced From West Bank Of Piave

Naval Forces Aid in the Operations—Heavy Losses Inflicted on Enemy in Vigorous Assault Between Piave and Brenta—Last Austrians West of Piave Surrender

ITALY'S GOOD WORK GOES STEADILY ON

Canadian Press.

ROME, June 26.—Italians took three thousand more prisoners yesterday on the Piave and the Mountain front.

ROME, June 26.—Italian troops have forced the last rearguard of the retreating Austr'ans to surrender and completely reoccupied the west bank of the Piave, the War Office announced.

On the mountain front between the Piave and the Brenta, in the Monte Grappa sector, the Italians vigorously attacked the Austrians inflicted heavy losses on the enemy and gaining considerable ground.

..BULLETIN—LONDON, June 26 — (Austrian) — The Italian line along the Piave has been restored right up to the waters edge on the west bank of the river, the Evening Standard's advices report. The Piave, it added, began rising again, washing away some bridges the Italians had thrown across the stream, thus hindering their pursuit of the Austrians.

WASHINGTON, June 26. — Gen. Diaz, is cautiously pursuing the battered Austrian armies because the advance of the Italians leaves their left flank open to an attack by the Austro-German reserves in the dominating hills of the upper Piave. Officers here stated that the Austrian disorder will permit the Italians to strongly fortify themselves on the east bank of the Piave.

Despatches to the Embassy announced the co-operation of the Italian navy in the counter-offensive that precipitated the Austrian retreat. Destroyers battered the Austrian positions along the Tagliamento River and north of Castellazzo, while marine battalions from the warships advanced across the Piave and took hundreds of prisoners.

Austrian aviators attacked Brindisi during the battle, but were driven off with the loss of two planes. Italian and British aviators bombed Cattaro and Durazzo across the Adriatic Sea in retaliation.

Czecho-Slovaks, Jugo-Slavs, Rumanians, Serbians and other nationalities oppressed by Austria were represented at a demonstration to the victorious Italian forces given by the British Ambassador at Rome, yesterday.

ARMY DRAFT LAWS MADE RECIPROCAL

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Treaties between the United States and Great Britain for reciprocal operation of army draft laws to their citizens, including Canadians, were ratified late to-day by the Senate without a disserting vote.

British subjects in the United States between 20 and 44 years of age—the British draft ages—and American citizens in the British Empire between the ages of 21 and 31, would be subject to draft under the treaties, but they would be given the option of returning to their own countries for service under their own flags.

It is estimated that some 54,000 American citizens in the British Empire, including 36,000 in Canada, and 310,000 British subjects in the United States, including 60,000 Canadians, will be affected by the treaties. A new clause inserted in the treaty provides that citizens of signatory nations exempt from the draft at home, such as the Irish and Australians, shall not be subject to draft in the country of their foreign residence.

GERMAN PAPER CLOTHES FELL TO PIECES WHEN DRY CLEANED

Little Incident Related by Family Just Returned From Germany That Emphasizes Scarcity of Materials There—Brought Back Their Wooden Shoes

GERMAN MORALE LOW

An Atlantic Port. — Among the passengers arriving here on the Norwegian-American liner Bergensfjord, was Frederick William Wurzberg, 84 years old, proprietor of a department store at Grand Rapids, Mich., with his wife Theresa and his three daughters, Olga, Elsie and Dorothy. The daughters went to Germany six years ago to be educated, and were caught by the war.

Mr. and Mrs. Wurzberg were born in Westphalia and came to America when they were children. The daughters were born in Grand Rapids. They made several attempts to get back after the war, but were unable to obtain the necessary papers, until May 9th, Mrs. Wurzberg said. The family were living at Godesberg, near Bonn, on the Rhine, and left for home by Berlin and Copenhagen, where they were detained for two weeks until their passports arrived.

Olga Wurzberg, the eldest daughter who spoke for the party, said that they had been forced to leave Germany because the food was so bad.

"You should have seen us when we reached Norway in our paper clothes before we were fattened up with human food," she said. "We looked very different then. The clothes were sent to be dry cleaned and all fell apart, so we had to buy a new outfit in Norway. The only souvenir we have of the hard times in Germany is a pair of wooden shoes which we had to wear because leather ones could not be obtained. Mother lost 58 pounds in weight. I was reduced 24 pounds, and my sister Elsie suffered so from malnutrition that her face became partly paralyzed.

GERMANS' MORALE LOW.

"The morale of the German people is very low on account of their suffering through the long war, and they are becoming hopeless regarding the victories they have been promised so repeatedly by the war party. In my opinion they are nearly in a state of revolt, and something will happen if the people do not get better food before long.

"When I was ill in a hospital at Godesberg, a number of wounded soldiers were there, who took me for a German woman because I speak the language so well and they talked to me quite freely of their grievances. They said that the food given to the men in the hospitals was of the poorest quality, without any nutriment in it, while the officers were fed on the fat of the land. The men's food prevents them from recovering quickly, and reacts on their systems to such an extent that many of the soldiers never recover their health.

"One soldier said to me shortly before we left Godesberg: 'Some day we are going to lay down our arms. Why should we fight? Our officers used to lead us into the battle, but now they follow in the rear because the government wishes to preserve them from danger.'

"A Major, who was sitting in an armchair on the porch of the hospital said to me: 'You see that I wear the coat of the Kaiser. I only wish that you could know the feeling that lies beneath it. We are not going to stand this terrible war forever.' I have seen soldiers leave the hospitals to return to the trenches with only one arm.

"Now that the German people have learned that America has sent more than half a million troops to France they are beginning to worry about the war and express their regret that this country should have been forced into the struggle.

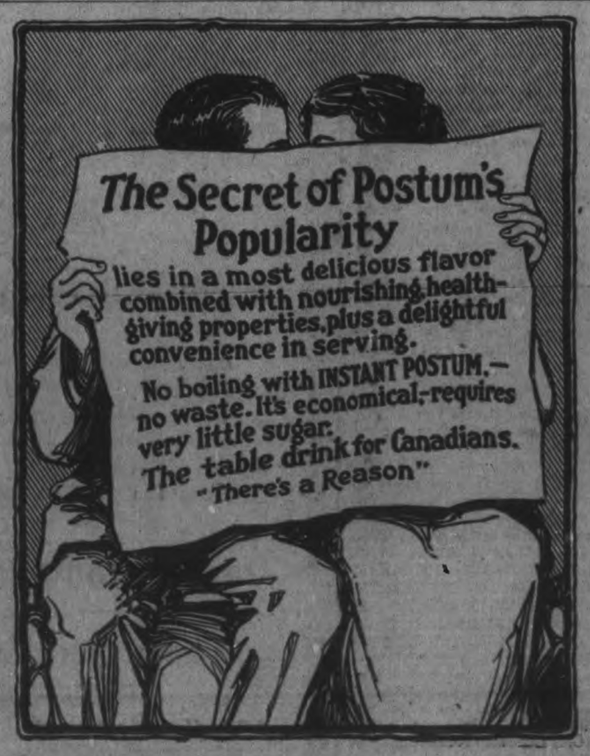
"The military party through the newspapers have told them that President Wilson was responsible for it, and they feel bitter against him, but are friendly towards the American people as a whole. A German officer started denouncing the President one day in the hospital where I was a patient, and after listening for a time to his remarks I said that he had no right to make such statements, as they were incorrect. I went on to tell the people who were standing by the officer that their Emperor and not President Wilson was to blame for bringing America into the war. The officer was so angry that he would have struck me, I believe, if there had not been others present to protect me.

"Soldiers on the train we travelled in to Berlin, after leaving Godesberg said that they did not care about who won the war."

SEES NO SIGN OF REVOLT.

Leon Rains and his wife returned on the same liner with the Wurzbergs after spending some five years in Geramny. Mr. Rains said he did not think there was any chance of a revolution in Germany and any country which banked on such an upheaval would make a big mistake. The people of Germany were sorry that America had entered the war, he continued, and felt that it would only prolong the struggle. They wanted peace, but the German military party had a deadlock on the throats of the people.

Passengers returning from the Scandinavian countries said that there was a shortage of food supplies of all kinds and the people were on ration cards for everything. In Sweden they could not get butter, tea, coffee, or potatoes, and the black bread and sugar doled out in small portions was of a very inferior quality. Board for workingmen cost nearly $100 a month.



COL. LYNCH, M.P., HAS ACCEPTED COMMISSION IN BRITISH ARMY.

London, June 24.—Arthur Lynch, Nationalist member of parliament for West Clare, has been offered and accepted a commission as colonel in the British army. It is understood that he is going to Ireland to assist in the recruiting campaign.

Col. Lynch has had a picturesque career. He was a colonel in the Boer army in the South African war, heading the Irish brigade, No. 11. For this he was convicted of high treason but was pardoned by the late King Edward.

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES
ASHAMED TO GO OUT

Many an otherwise beautiful and attractive face is sadly marred by unsightly pimples, blotches, flesh worms and various other blood diseases.

Their presence is a source of embarrassment to those afflicted as well as pain and regret to their friends.

Many a cheek and brow cast in the mould of beauty have been sadly defaced, their attractiveness lost and their possessor rendered unhappy for years.

Why, then, consent to rest under this cloud of embarrassment?

There is an effectual remedy for all these defects.

It is Burdock Blood Bitters. This remedy will drive out all the impurities from the blood and leave the complexion healthy and clear.

Mrs. Katherine Henry, Port Sydney, Ont., writes: "Two years ago my face was so covered with pimples I was ashamed to go out at all. I tried several remedies, but they were of no use. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I got a bottle, and by the time it was used I could see a difference. I then got two more, and when I had used them the pimples were completely gone. I can highly recommend B.B.B."

Yes, I Intend To But Not Now

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4,000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2,500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1,440 at age 21.

Besides while you may be insurable at age 21 you may not be insurable, AT ANY PRICE, at the other ages mentioned.

The one great fate that touches our lives is the verdict of NOW.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

A CONTRETEMPS

CHAPTER CII.

I received a note from Julia Collins.

"I am delighted that you and George are to go when I do. I really dreaded going alone. Another one of those "getting old" signs you talk about, I suppose. I shall try to run over and take tea with you some day while George is absent,"—and much more. In the note, she had used 'George' four times. Did she do it purposely, to annoy me or did she use it unconsciously? I showed the note to Mrs. Sexton and asked her the same question.

"Give her the benefit of the doubt," she told me.

The day after receiving her note, Celeste announced Merton Gray and Mrs. Collins, at the same time. I couldn't understand. Had they come together? But I had no time to speculate.

"When the cat's away, the mice will play!" Mrs. Collins said, after she had greeted me and I had spoken to Merton.

"Meaning that because George is away, Mr. Gray called," I asked rather putting her out of countenance. I suppose she thought I would avoid the innuendo.

"I told Mr. Gray I wouldn't whisper it, so he could come right along with me."

"I am very glad he came," I replied calmly.

Mrs. Sexton Joins Us.

"So am I!" Unperceived by me, Mrs. Sexton had come into the room. "How do you do, Julia? And I am very glad to see you, Mr. Gray. I have something pleasant to tell you."

"Indeed!" I shall be delighted to listen," Merton replied.

"Mrs. Howard's portrait has created a great furore. I have heard of at least two who will beg for sittings, when they return, in the fall, although as Mrs. Edgar said: "they can't hope to have so lovely a portrait as that beautiful Mrs. Howard.' Don't blush, my dear! You aren't to blame for being handsome."

"You shouldn't praise children. It makes them disagreeable," Julia Collins said. "At least, that is what I was taught."

"Were you praised?" I asked in pretended innocence.

Merton screamed with laughter.

"Look out, Mrs. Collins!! You have met your match in repartee. I never knew anyone quicker to take one up, than is Mrs. Howard. I speak from experience."

Mrs. Sexton changed the subject, and, for the rest of their call, everything was smooth and agreeable. When Mrs. Collins rose to go, Merton said:

"As we came here together, I will accompany you." Then he explained that they had met in the lobby of the hotel. I was delighted that it was so—that no prearranged engagement had existed.

George Returns After An Accident.

George was coming the next day. Had it not been that Mrs. Collins was going with us, I should have been delighted. But to have her as a companion was not alluring.

It was time for George to come. The train had been due some twenty minutes. Time, in plenty, for him to get to the hotel. I waited looking from the window. But, instead of my husband, I saw a messenger hurrying along the street. At once, I was seized with a premonition of trouble.

"Celeste! Celeste!" I called. "If that boy has a message for me, bring it here at once!"

"Oui, Madame!"

As I feared, it was for me.

Celeste brought it to me at once. "An accident to the train! Am unhurt. George."

The reaction was so great, I nearly fainted. Celeste brought me a glass of wine, and hung over me with so much solicitude that I finally succeeded in pulling myself together.

I called downstairs to the hotel office to ask if they had heard any details.

'Several killed, many hurt," the clerk told me. I hope Mr. Howard was not on the train?"

'He was, but is unhurt. He wired me," then I added, "If you hear anything further, please let me know."

"I wondered if George had told me the truth. If he really were unhurt, or if he had sent that wire to keep me from worrying? Finally, I determined to go down to the station and see what I could find out. Several people were before me. Among them I saw Julia Collins. What was she doing there? Suddenly, I heard her say:

"George Howard is on that train! I came to hear if he had been injured. He is a very old friend, you know."

I turned and raced back to the hotel. What right had she to go to look after my husband? What right had she to know upon what train he was expected?

To-morrow—A Widening Rift.

EFFERVESCENT DRINKS.

They Allay Thirst Quickly, but the Effect Is Not Lasting.

The reason why we like effervescent drinks is that the slight stinging or pricking of the palate that follows on drinking liquids charged with carbonic acid gas produces immediately an increased flow of saliva and thus diminishes for the moment the sensation of thirst.

But the relief they bring is only temporary and is followed by a reaction in which the thirst is actually increased. The salivary glands are no more susceptible to perpetual stimulation than any other, and after each period of excitement one of depression supervenes. Young soldiers on route marches quickly come to understand this and to discover that the more water they drink the more thirsty they get and that it is best, therefore, to limit the quantity of liquid swallowed. Moreover, the saliva contains matters of great importance for the digestion of food, particularly of starchy foods, and if it all be washed down the throat into the bowels as soon as it is secreted a great part of its usefulness is lost.

It would therefore seem that a less wasteful way, physiologically, of promoting the flow of saliva might be adopted with profit. The consumption of fruit containing subacid juices is about the most excellent way.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

He Got the Cheapest.

Old Hiram Pinchou was a born trader and a penny pincher besides. He was never willing to pay the price of anything he wanted, and all the shopkeepers at the village dreaded to see him enter their stores.

One day he did a little trading at Nelson's shoe store. He tried on a dozen pairs of boots, but could find nothing that was not too expensive. Then he guessed he would get a pair of rubbers. He rejected a pair that cost a dollar and another that cost 65 cents. Finally the clerk brought him a pair for 50 cents. They seemed to fit well enough, but Hiram was still dissatisfied.

"Hain't ye got any rubbers that are cheaper?" he asked.

"No, sir," declared the irritated clerk, "we haven't. That pair you're got on is the cheapest, poorest, most no account rubber there is made!"

So Hiram bought them.—Youth's Companion.

FRICTION REDUCING MOTOR OIL

"Makes a good car better"

For Crankshaft Bearings

EFFECTIVE lubrication of the crankshaft and the connecting rod bearings keeps down vibration. Unless these bearings are protected against excessive wear by a film of oil of correct body and lubricating quality, "play" soon develops.

KEEP BEARING WEAR DOWN AND CAR VALUE UP

The actual value of your car, whether in daily use or in the market for sale or exchange, is mainly a question of engine value. A car is no better than its engine. And engine upkeep is largely a matter of proper lubrication.

Polarine

has the right body to adequately lubricate every wearing part in your motor. It keeps your engine running smoothly with a wear-reducing film of oil that does not break down and run thin under the intense heat developed at high speed operation. It flows freely in low or high temperatures—insures full delivery of power the year round.

Polarine is made in two grades—Polarine and Polarine Heavy. It is supplied in one-half, one and four gallon sealed cans, also in 12½ gallon steel kegs, barrels and half-barrels. There are also Polarine oils and greases for effective transmission and differential lubrication.

A HISTORIC TRIANGLE.

Famous Battlefields of the Plains of Hesbaye, In Belgium.

Describing the road from Brussels to Liege, which skirts the plains of Hesbaye, Baedeker quotes the old proverb, "Qui passe dans le Hesbains est combattu lendemain"—"He who enters the Hesbaye is defeated the next day." Such was the reputation of the Hesbains for strength and bravery.

The ancient province of Hesbaye is indicated on the maps as a triangle, some fifty miles from its base to its apex, Liege. The river Meuse, from Namur to Liege, forms its southern side; the railways from Liege through Tirlemont and Louvain to Brussels its northern side. A line from Namur north to Brussels is its base.

This triangle contains many famous battlefields. Besides Waterloo, there is Neerwinden, where Marshal Luxemburg defeated the allies under William II. of England in 1693 and where a century later the Austrians, under the Prince of Coburg, uncle of the late King Leopold of Belgium, defeated the French, led by Dumouriez and Louis Philippe.

Then there is Quatre Bras, where Ney's division fought part of the British army and its German and Belgian allies in 1815. There had been a battle the day before at Sombreffe, and on that June night the Prussians accomplished their unparalleled retreat from Ligny. Fleurus, near by, won fame in 1622 and 1690 and again in 1794.—Newark News.

Historic Clontarf.

Clontarf is one of the most historic spots in Ireland. It was there that on Good Friday, April 23, 1014, Brian Boroihme and the men of Munster, Connaught and Meath fought the Danes.

Brian was killed in his tent; Sigurd, earl of Orkney and Caithness, perished also, and 11,000 Irishmen and 13,000 Danes are said to have fallen. Victory remained with the Irish, but the Danes reoccupied Dublin. In modern times O'Connell's monster meetings for repeal were to have culminated at Clontarf, but the meeting was prohibited by the government, and O'Connell was put upon his trial for conspiracy and convicted, though the verdict was eventually reversed by the house of lords.—London Chronicle.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Midwinter Proposal

By F. A. MITCHEL

It is said that balmy breezes, soft skies, mellow sunshine, or the light of the moon, constitute a fitting background for love making. I was not snared amid any such surroundings. Helen captured me in midwinter.

Helen and I were skating. A broad stretch of ice, smooth as glass lay before us. The morning was bright; the sun glistened on the frosty scene; the air was full of ozone. Occasionally we would skate over a place where the ice was thin and we would hear that crackling beneath us that I have always loved. This sound and the ozone of a frosty morning are far more delicious to me than the song of the birds and the fragrance of roses in June.

Helen's eyes were as bright as the sunlight on the ice; and her cheeks had been painted vermillion by Jack Frost. We were skating along with something of a roll, Helen's hands in her fur muff, and the long hairs of her tippit caressing her cheeks. How I envied her that tippit. She began to talk about the various marriage customs of different countries. When a girl discusses love and marriage the fellow she is with had better be on his guard. It indicates what she is thinking about.

"They have some funny customs in Russia concerning betrothals," she said. "One is that if a girl loves a man she goes to his house and remains there till he asks her to marry him. If he declines to do so her relations consider themselves insulted, and punish him accordingly."

"That's very queer, isn't it?"

In another part of Russia where there are several unmarried and unprovided for girls, they make a sort of raffle and dispose of them by lot."

"That's better."

"In Lapland" Helen continued, "they have a different way still. When a man wants a girl, without speaking to her he goes to her parents and asks for her. If they consent they inform her that she has had an offer. Possibly she may not know her suitor, may never have seen him. There is a feast at the end of which a race takes place between the suitor and the girl he wants. If she accepts him she permits herself to be caught; if not, she won't let him catch her."

"That beats all the other plans, doesn't it?' I saw nothing out before me over the stretch of ice on which there was not the slightest flaw: "It's mighty cold in Lapland; don't they do it on skates?"

"I suppose so."

I cast a glance aside at Helen. She said not a word further but I saw challenge in her eye. We skated on in silence. Presently we passed over thin ice; the crackling stimulated me; made me reckless; I have always prided myself on going into matters with coolness and deliberation; a woman has the faculty of taking that out of a man if she chooses. Helen, the frosty scene, the ozone in the air, the crackling ice stole away my brains.

"Do you see that point up there and the little landing for boats extending into the ice?" I asked.

"Yes," replied Helen in a low voice. She knew what was coming just as well as the spider knows what will happen when he sees the fly put his foot on the web.

"I think I can give you forty strokes and beat you to that landing."

"I don't think you can," said Helen under her breath.

"Suppose we try. You skate on until you have taken forty strokes, then stop. When you hear me say "go" the race begins."

"Very well."

She skated on leisurely while I counted the forty strokes. When the number was completed I called her to stop.

She took ten more strokes. I wondered if she had it, because a woman must take every advantage of a man she can. Perhaps after all she intended to beat me if she could. The true answer was that she wanted me to think that she was going to do her best. But that solution I did not think of then.

She looked back at me, then ahead, then turned again:

"It's fully a mile to the goal, I need more handicap."

"Very well make it a hundred strokes."

She took the hundred strokes and since I saw that she was going to take as many more as she liked I gave the signal, and the race was on.

Helen did her best on the start. I had all I could do to make any lessening of the handicap for the first quarter of a mile. The second quarter was not much better for me. The third quarter Helen began to lag. At the beginning of the fourth she made a spurt, but I did the same and in the middle of this quarter I was not more than a hundred feet behind her. When we were within fifty feet of the goal she seemed to be giving out. I dashed forward, she staggered and was about to fall when I caught her in my arms.

She lay quiet except for the panting induced by the exercise. I took a dozen kisses—and—well, the rest of the story is simply the beginning of the Lapland custom, wherein the suitor goes to papa and has it out with him in the usual conventional way.

Do You Wear One?

One thing you can wear year in and year out, that never grows monotonous, that never is unbecoming, that people are always glad to see, that never has to be made over or trimmed or sent to the cleaner's, is a smile.—Florida Times-Union.

Wasting Money.

"I guess it's just as well I didn't marry that girl. She evidently has no idea of the value of money."

"How's that?"

"Spent 60 cents postage sending me a bunch of old love letters."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Pig Iron, Steel —and War

In 1914, when the bottom was dropping out of things, the hazard of buying pig iron and steel in thousand ton lots was tremendous. It meant investing hundreds of thousands of dollars, with the risk that prices would drop, because industrial depression seemed imminent.

In fact, it was a gamble. And yet, the play had to be made, because if industrial activity resumed, and we wanted pig iron and steel, we might not be able to get it.

We made the play.

Fortunately for us, and for Canada, industrially, we won. Industrial activity resumed.

* * *

Were we wise in buying? That nobody can answer.

The risk we saw was not in being loaded with raw material, but in falling down through lack of raw material if big orders came, and we were unable to fill them.

What of buying pig iron and steel to-day?

Prices are sky-high, and there seems to be no canopy. Yet we must still buy, and buy heavily; and take the risk of a drop and consequent loss. The reason is that, at all costs, we aim to be ready to fill old and accept new contracts, whether the material involved weighs but a hundred pounds or a hundred tons.

From one department alone in 1917 we shipped one thousand tons (2,000,000 pounds) of equipment—i.e., grain elevator machinery.

* * *

What is going to happen? We don't know. But we do know this. No matter what contingency arises in the Power Transmission Machinery field, we are ready to meet it.

We have the steel, we have the men and we have the money, too.

Whether we lose or win, Dodge Service Standards will be maintained.

KEEPING HOUSE IN GREECE.

"Live From Hand to Mouth and Never Take Anything Seriously."

In "Days In Attica" Mrs. R. C. Bosanquet gives some valuable rules for the American or the European who takes up a residence in Greece, and we are not sure that most of these rules might not be applied with advantage elsewhere. In Greece housekeeping is a game, and, like all other games, you must know the rules before you can enjoy it.

"The first rule is 'Never take anything seriously.' If your cook bids you an eternal farewell two hours before your dinner party, if your new house maid scrubs your parquet floors, if your tulip bulbs are cooked for onions, here is only one thing to be done, and that is laugh. At home we housewives are inclined to feel that our reputation is at stake if anything goes wrong. In Athens we all know that 'such things will occur,' and we all judge each other kindly and are willing to lend our cooks or floor polish or our bulbs, as the case may be.

"The second rule is 'Live from hand to mouth.' The conditions of the climate make it unwise to keep any store of provisions in the house. Be content that your cook should bring you each day your daily supply of bread, butter, milk, meat and vegetables. If a party of English friends 'come up with a song from the sea' and unexpectedly claim your hospitality for luncheon your servants will gladly make all the show they can with everything there may happen to be in the house, though they and you must fast for it this night. Perhaps your butler will dash out to 'borrow' a leg of mutton from your neighbor or the roses from his garden. No Greek servant ever fails to arise to an emergency. He loves emergencies. It is the daily round that gravels him."

Know His Limitations.

"I don't want to brag about myself. I've done many foolish things in my time, but I've been wise in one way."

"What's that?"

"I never had an idea that I could paper a bedroom myself."—Detroit Free Press.

Wonderful For The Blood

Cures Sallow Skin, Headache, Languor and Tiredness

You don't need to be told how you feel,—blue, sort of sickish, poor appetite, vague pains, tired in the morning. This condition is common at this season.

Fortunately there is prompt relief in Dr. Hamilton's Pills which immediately relieve the system of all poisons and disease-producing matter.

Thousands have been so utterly depressed, so worn out as to be despondent, but Dr. Hamilton's Pills always cured them. "I can speak feelingly on the power of Dr. Hamilton's Pills," writes C. T. Fearman, of Kingston. "Last spring my blood was thin and weak, I was terribly run down, had awful headaches and a knawing, empty feeling about my stomach, I couldn't sleep or work until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills,—they did me a world of good." At all dealers in 25c. boxes.

Happy Youth.

It is so easy to say the word that checks laughter; to scowl at the exuberance that bubbles over in foolish girl and boy jests. It is difficult for us of an older generation to remember how, when we were young, we loved to laugh and sing and dance and make merry. Youth is so sensitive and it is so easy to spoil an evening with just a glance or an impatient word. When one comes in, glowing from a wonderful evening, a querulous voice or a faultfinding word is like sticking a pin into a gay balloon. Sympathy is so much better. Even if youth is headstrong the faultfinding does not do very much good, but often harm. But sympathy gains confidence, and confidence between the young and the old is a great safeguard for youth and well worth cultivating.

Canada Will Control It.

One of the Toronto shipyards recently launched a 4,200-ton freighter, the Trojan. People became anxious for fear that it might be sold to American or Norwegian interests. It was announced in Parliament, however, that the boat will be placed on the Canadian register and allocated by us to whatever trade is most advantageous to the interests of Canada and the Empire.

A Ten Years' Penance.

It is happily seldom that the revenge of a disappointed husband takes quite such an extreme form as in the case of the man whose will ran thus: "When I remember that the only happy times I ever enjoyed were when my wife sulked with me, and when I remember that my married life might, for this reason, be considered to have been a fairly happy one because she was nearly always sulking, I am constrained to forget the repulsion the contemplation of her face inspired me with and leave her the sum of £60,000 on condition that she undertakes to pass two hours a day at my graveside for the ten years following my decease, in company with her sister, whom I have reason to know she loathes worse than she does myself."—London Tit-Bits.

Easy Dusting.

Mrs. Florin had a new maid, and one morning as she entered the library she was somewhat surprised to find the girl seated in one of the chairs with her hands folded.

"What!" cried the mistress. "Here you are sitting down! Why, you were sent in here to dust the room!"

"Yes, ma'am," was the girl's reply, "but I've lost the duster, and so I am sitting on each of the chairs in turn."—Harper's Magazine.

Short-lived Natives.

The natives of New Guinea are the shortest-lived people in the world, which is attributed to their diet of the larvae of certain beetles and their practice of drinking sea water.

Fifty.

"Did your dressmaker give you a good fit?"

"Did she?—They had two doctors working on me when I saw how I looked in it."

KIDNEY DISEASE OVERCOME.

Mr. James Prouse, cattle dealer, Sheho, Sask., writes: "For about ten years I suffered from kidney disease; at times was bad with backache, and derangements of the digestive organs. During that time I was treated by four different doctors. One day I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac about the Kidney-Liver Pills and began to use them. Altogether I used six boxes. All I need say is that I feel well now and attribute this condition to the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

In Doubt.

The Blanks' maid of all work was a practical young woman of about twenty-seven years. One day when her mistress was making some plans for the future the matter of fact Sereida said:

"I don't know, ma'am. It might be that I won't be with you much longer, an' then mebbe I will. I ain't sure yet."

Knowing that a young man had called a good many times to see Sereida, her mistress said:

"Are you thinking of getting married, Sereida?"

Without the least show of embarrassment or enthusiasm Sereida said:

"Well, yes, to tell the truth, I am. Then again I don't know if I will. I've got a good place here with good pay, and he's such a fool, mebbe I'll stay on with you!"—New York Post.

Complimentary.

Gebhard von Blucher, the famous Prussian general field marshal, had as surgeon major of his army a man who was very homely, but extremely proud and vain.

One day, says Novellen-Schatz, Blucher entered the surgeon's tent and found him standing before a looking glass, arranging his toilet and admiring himself generally. "Doctor," said Blucher, laughing, "I suppose that you are the luckiest man in the world."

"How's that, sir, may I ask?"

"Why, here you are quite in love with yourself, and you haven't a single rival!"

THE CHRISTIANS NEVER FAILING BANK.

I have a never failing bank,
A more than golden store,
No earthly bank is half so rich,
How then can I be poor?

'Tis when my cash is spent and gone
And I without a groat
I am glad to hasten to my bank
To beg a little note.

I have a thousand times before
And never was rejected,
Sometimes my banker gives me more
Than I asked for or expected.

I know my bank can never fail
Its funds always the same,
The same three persons in one God,
Jehovah is his name.

Since then my banker is so rich
I have no cause to borrow,
I live upon my cash to-day
And draw on him to-morrow.

Should all the banks of Britain break,
The Bank of England smash,
Brint in your notes to Zion's bank
You will surely get the cash.

Al forged notes will be refused,
Man's merit be rejected,
There is not one single note will pass
That God has not accepted.

Sometimes my banker smiling says
Why don't you oftener come,
And when you take a one-pound note
Why not a larger sum?

Why live so niggardly and poor,
Your bank contains aplenty,
Why come and take a one-pound note
When you can have a twenty?

Yes, twenty thousand ten times told,
Is but a trifling sum
To what the father hath laid up
Secure in God his son.

LOOKING AT A PHOTOGRAPH.

Better Effects Are Obtained When Only One Eye Is Used.

Photographs should be looked at with only one eye to appear best, says F. W. Marlow in an article on "How to Look at a Photograph" in the Photo Era.

"Most photographs, particularly small ones of landscapes, street scenes and interiors, fail to produce their full effect or to be estimated at their true value because they are not looked at in the most effective way," the author says. "Take as an example a print resulting from a camera with a five inch focus lens. Such a print is usually looked at with both eyes open and held at a distance of twelve inches or more. Now a camera is essentially a one eyed instrument, or, at any rate, it views the object to be reproduced from a single point, the optical center of the lens. The object must be looked at, therefore, with one eye only and from a point corresponding as nearly as possible to the optical center of the lens if its characteristics as it is to be reproduced in the camera are to be appreciated.

"Let it be remembered that when a print is looked at with both eyes open binocular vision emphasizes the flatness of the card, and this tends to offset the illusion of greater or less distance produced by the light and shade and perspective of the print. By using one eye the impression of flatness is greatly diminished. If at the same time the eye be placed at the right distance everything is seen under its natural angle or perspective, and the picture unfolds itself, the different objects receding to their proper relative distances, making details very obvious which may be unnoticed if looked at in the ordinary way.

"As a sort of corollary to the above use one eye alone to decide whether a landscape or other scene is worth taking. If with one eye the scene looks flat it will not make a satisfactory photograph."

Snakes.

An explanation of this hallucination is offered by the result of French experiments a few years ago. Sixteen alcoholic patients were examined with the ophthalmoscope, and it was found that the minute blood vessels in the retina of the eyes were congested. In this condition they appear black, and are projected into the field of vision, where their movements resemble the squirming of serpents.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Place Names In England.

England can boast that no other country possesses so many Scriptural place names as it does. The name of Jericho occurs six times on the ordnance maps. Paradise five times and Nineveh, Mount Zion, Mount Ararat and Mount Ephraim three times each. In Bedfordshire there is a Calvary wood and in Dorsetshire a Jordan hill.

ON GUARD

At this time of the year people feel weak, tired, listless, their blood is thin, they have lived indoors and perhaps expended all their mental and bodily energy and they want to know how to renew their energy and stamina, overcome headaches and backaches, have clear eyes, a smooth, ruddy skin, and feel the exhilaration of real good health tingling thru their body. Good, pure, rich, red blood is the best insurance against ills of all kinds. Almost all diseases come from impure and impoverished blood. It is to be noticed in the pale or pimply face, the tired, haggard appearance or the listless manner.

Drink hot water a half hour before meals, and for a vegetable tonic there's nothing better than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the old-fashioned herbal remedy, which has had such a fine reputation for fifty years. It contains no alcohol or narcotics. It is made from Golden Seal root, Blood-root, Oregon grape root, Queen's root, Black Cherry bark, extracted with glycerine and made into tablets and liquid. Tablets fifty cents, at most drug stores.

In order to insure pure blood and to build up the system try this tonic known as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Get it now!

OLD WAGON TRAINS

There Used to Be Exciting Times on the Santa Fe Trail.

TRICKERY OF THE REDSKINS.

They Employed All Sorts of Ruses to Plunder the Caravans and Murder the Whites—A Bit of Treachery and a Battle With the Troopers.

As the overland trade between the American settlements in Missouri and the Mexican pueblos in New Mexico increased in value following the opening of the Santa Fe trail the greater necessity of adequate protection for the traders and their stocks was met by both the United States and Mexican governments furnishing military convoys. The troops acted in a capacity not unlike that of warships guarding merchant vessels from piratical attacks, for no pirates were more persistent or bothersome than the savages of the plains.

The caravans usually left Franklin and later Independence and Westport in the spring. United States troops would accompany them to the caches on the Arkansas river; then Mexican troops would guard them to Taos, and sometimes even to Santa Fe. The return trip later in the summer was similarly protected. Sometimes two trips each way would be made in a year.

The presence of troops usually kept the Indians from making a direct assault on the trains. Even in his bravest moments an Indian has small relish of a fight on anything like equal terms; consequently the savages developed their aptitude for treachery and deceit.

Every sort of ruse their fertile brains could devise was used to separate the various divisions of a train or lure a small part away from the main convoy, where it could be plundered and the whites murdered without serious danger to the attackers.

A favorite plan and one which many times hoodwinked large parties into suffering some loss was for a small party of Indians to appear at the camp with protestations of peace. For diplomatic reasons the reds would be hospitably received and their request to eat and sleep in the camp oftentimes granted. That night the small party of Indians would attempt to stampede the live stock of the train. If successful a large force of savages would be concealed near by to aid.

Some ruses were far cleverer than that. One which completely fooled a Mexican officer and came near being the cause of his death was believed by the traders to deserve the palm. That officer, Colonel Viscarro, with 100 troopers, was escorting an American wagon train through the foothills of what is now southern Colorado when a party of Indians appeared and asked for a parley.

The American traders refused the request. The Indians withdrew and held a consultation. When the convoy reached the Cimarron river the savages appeared again. One rode forward with an arrow tied transversely across the shaft of a spear, a symbol of the cross. Viscarro was a Catholic and honored this novel banner. He rode out and spoke to the brave.

"If the Americans will move aside to some distance we will lay down our arms and surrender," the Indian said.

"Certainly, red brother," the colonel replied. He ordered the wagons to retire beyond a ridge. Hardly had they disappeared when a large force of Indians rose from concealment behind the sand dunes and poured a destructive fire into the Mexican ranks. Only the heroism of a Pueblo Indian guide with the troops saved the colonel from death. He heard one of the Comanches yell, "Now for the chief!" which was the signal for the treachery to begin. The Pueblo jumped in front of his colonel and received a charge of shot aimed at the officer.

The firing was heard by the Americans, who returned to the troops. They rode swiftly to the flanks of the attacking Indians and charged. Caught between two fires, the savages soon scattered in flight, but not until they had been handled severely in a hand to hand encounter, where clubbed rifles and tomahawks played a part. Colonel Viscarro was profuse in his thanks to the Americans.—Kansas City Times.

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW.

Some Recollections of Trying Experiences at the Front.

I paused in one place and bent in my saddle to shake the hand of a brother officer of the old 17th Nova Scotia Highlanders. We had been together at the very start, and felt a camaraderie not known in later units of swifter changing personnel.

I had heard of dread presentiments in France, but never did I encounter a more remarkable case than that of my brother officer. He had been on the line for nearly two years, and was noted for his sangfroid. But that night his hand trembled, and he was ashen pale. He tried to smile at some pleasantry of mine, but his face was overcast by a cloud of sickening apprehension.

"By-bye, old man, my time has come," he said huskily in parting.

"Nonsense," I answered. "They haven't made a bullet that can hit you yet."

But I watched him move off as one who has received his death-warrant. Many a time he had passed unscathed, where it had seemed that scarce a blade of grass could live. I thought of him as one who lived a charmed life. For such a one to lose hear seemed direct tragedy.

Two hours later, in leading his company across a field, his head was blown off his body.

On leaving my pal of the old 17th, I felt overwhelmed by a wave of sadness that had been rising within me all day. This was the end of a bitter, bitter day. How could a man keep up his courage through weeks and months of such calamity?

With brooding sadness, I pulled my horse up at the cross-roads, to let a long column of motor-lorries pass. While I paused thus in moody silence, I heard from up the road the sound of singing. A small squad of men were coming out of the trenches, and, true to convention, they were singing as they came.

"Who are you?" I asked as they passed, thinking that they were some cyclist company, or fatigue party, that, had been up for special duty in the trenches.

"We're the Princess Pats," came the proud reply, and then I heard them launch off again into another song.

I had seen that same regiment, then nearly a thousand strong, pass down the road towards Ypres not less than a week before. I remembered how I was thrilled as I thought of their fighting prowess, and gazed at their colonel, appearing every inch a soldier, riding his charger at the head of his men. Behind the colonel came the pipes, playing Blue Bonnets Over the Border. After that came the long lines of companies with their full complement of officers. It took fifteen minutes for the entire regiment to pass, going in; but it took less than a minute for that remnant to pass, going out.

All that was left of them went by. They had been cut to pieces often before, but this time they were decimated. The gallant colonel had been killed while leading his men over the top. All the company commanders and other officers had been wounded or killed, and only one boyish-faced subaltern remained, who now marched at the head of the column.

Now, the remnant of the regiment that saved the day was marching back to billets. Their uniforms were torn, and caked with blood and filth. Their faces were haggard. Their regiment was shattered, but its spirit was unbroken. While one man remained the "Princess Pats" remained. With that same blithesome and light-hearted mien the handful went swinging by, joining with lusty voices in an old troop-song:

Steadily and shoulder to shoulder,
Steadily we'll ride and sing,
Marching along, steady and strong,
Like the boys of the Old Brigade.

Down the road I followed them into the darkness, until the sound of the singing grew faint and died away. Then, with light heart restored, I too struck up a song, and cantered down the road. For me the flashing glimpse of that brave remnant had swept all clouds away.

I had seen a star at the end of a bitter day. — Arthur Hunt Chute in the North American Review.

Ontario Sold Bonds.

Hon. T. W. McGarry, Provincial Treasurer of Ontario, announced on May 20th the sale of $3,000,000 10-year 6 per cent. gold bonds of Ontario to a syndicate headed by R. C. Matthews & Co. at 99.49. The issue was sold subject to tender. Altogether there were six bidders, and as the margin between all the offers was close it appears that competition was exceedingly keen. Compared with recent issues the price obtained by the province is considered highly satisfactory and is another testimony of the soundness of the financial position of the province. The loan is made to provide funds for important capital expenditures authorized by the Legislature, particularly the further extension of the Hydro-Electric. The proceeds of the sale will be paid into Consolidated Revenue Fund and paid out from time to time as the occasion makes it necessary.

WORLDS OF THE UNIVERSE.

All Might Be Annihilated and Not Affect the Solar Systems.

I am asked, "Are distant stars which shine by their own light visible only, or are worlds like our earth visible by reflected light?"

Go out to Neptune, our own last local world in our modest solar system; turn around, look back this way; then you must have a large telescope to see the earth. Only the sun of all bodies in our solar system is visible from space deeps. And it looks like the point of the finest sewing needle from stellar distances.

Thus from space depths only suns at terrific heat are visible in any telescope, even the largest that can be made. Then all worlds are invisible and unknown. The earth and man are both totally unknown to people on worlds revolving around any of the hundreds of millions of other suns, if there are such worlds and inhabitants.

Imagine that there are 1,000,000,000 suns, each surrounded by eight worlds like those revolving now around our sun. Then if an accident suddenly annihilated the 8,000,000,000 worlds, people and all, the accident could not even be noticed. The suns would all move on with velocities in between four and eighty miles per second precisely as if there had been no accident. Thus if there are intelligences in the depths of the sidereal universe they have not heard of man nor his infinitesimal world—the earth.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

Wouldn't Hear the Game.

"He's stone deaf."—Exchange.

GRAIN MARKET

Some apprehension is beginning to be felt as to the crop situation owing to continued drought and hot winds in many sections. Reports yesterday indicate that the drought is partially broken, rains having fallen over a considerable area. There is still urgent need for more moisture. The Winnipeg Free Press, in its annual crop report, claims that a large percentage of acreage originally seeded to wheat has had to be re-seeded with the coarser grains. Hopes of a bumper crop are gone, but there is still a good chance for a fair crop provided the needed rains come. The oats market was practically steady yesterday; cash oats are unchanged. Corn closed firmer at Chicago.

SUFFERED WITH NERVES COULD NOT KEEP QUIET

Diseases of the nervous system are very common.

All the organs of the body may be sound while the nerve centres may be affected.

Many women become run down and wornout by household duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with their nerves shattered, and the heart action weakened.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, flagging energy, or physical breakdown, do not wait until your case becomes hopeless.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will at once quieten the shaking nerves, strengthen the weak heart and build up the entire system.

Mrs. F. Bailey, 221 Earl St., Kingston, Ont., writes: "I was suffering very much with my nerves, so much so that I could not keep myself quiet at all. I was recommended to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I bought three boxes, and I must say I have derived much benefit from them, so much so that my friends have all noticed the change in me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ITALIANS MAY AGAIN HAVE TO RETURN TO THE DEFENSIVE

The Austrian Losses Now Total More Than 200,000

Terrible Scenes Marked The Retirement Of The Austrians On The Piave River Front

Maddened Austrians Jumped Into the River in an Effort to Escape the Withering Fire of the Italians —Movement is Slowing Up.

ENORMOUS BOOTY

Canadian Press.

LONDON, June 26.—The Italians have scored an important success in the counter offensive, it was learned authoritatively to-day.

In Grappa sector, south-west of Monti Asolone, they advanced.

We are cleaning up the battlefield. A few hundred prisoners have been taken. We are completely recapturing all our artillery, arms and material, with an enormous quantity of Austrian material.

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, June 26.—Under the fire of the Italian machine guns and artillery which were brought up rapidly, the Austrian withdrawal across the Piave river, soon became a disorderly rout. It is estimated the Austrian losses total more than 200,000.

It was a trerible sight as the maddened Austrians fled under deluge of the Italian bullets and shells. They leaped into the river and grabbed pieces of wood or anything that would aid. They tied themselves to mules and horses, but their efforts were in vain, for as enemy troops reached the opposite bank, they were again caught by the fire of the Italian guns which had been trained accurately on eastern bank for some days.

Terrific Slaughter.

On the Montello front the slaughter was terrific. Bodies of the Austrian troops were moved down almost in their entirety. At the crossing at Nervesa, both banks were strewn with dead and dying while hundreds of bodies were carried down in the current to the sea.

At one place the correspondent counted 300 bodies while walking a distance of a mile. One regiment of the covering troops which originally was composed of more than 2000 men had left Monday morning, but 88 men to the company and these were prisoners.

Along the lower Piave, the Austrians found themselves if possible in a worse position and sustained heavier losses.

Consentrated Reserves

(Special to The Examiner)

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMY IN THE FIELD, June 26.—With the Italian re-establishment of their original line, it is now a question whether they will be able to continue their offensive pressure or will be compelled to return to the defensive.

Despite the success of the limited counter-offensive began by the Italians on the mountain front, it is known that the Austrians have concentrated their remaining reserves there, and the Italians may soon be forced to change their tactics in that region.

The Austria losses are now estimated at 250,000. Of these it is reported that fully 20,000 were drowned in the retreat across the Piave river.

The 31st and 32nd Austrian rifle regiments covered the enemy retreat until only eighty men remained unwounded. Then they surrendered. Gen. Von Cronstadt, their commander, shot himself.

The body of Major Baracas the foremost Italian aviator, was found at the foot of a Montello crest, beside his burned machine. He had committed suicide to avoid capture.

(Special to The Examiner)

Demand Peace.

GENEVA, June 6.—The Austrian defeat has caused a severe despression in Vienna, according to a Basle dispatch. Fifty thousand persons marched through the streets, demanding peace. They were dispersed by the police.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT HAS PREPARED A DEFINITE POLICY.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 26.—The British government has prepared a definite policy regarding a League of Nations, the Express declared to-day.

Lord Curzan, President of the Privy Council, will make an important pronouncement on it in the House of Lords to-day.

Farm Labour Comes First

Sixty Girls Will Sort Registration Cards and Will Collect Information For Resources Branch

Light is beginning to dawn on the farm situation. And the registration cards are going to give more light, for with an abstract from these the Ottawa Branch Organization of Resources Committee will have the names and addresses of those in Eastern Ontario who are willing to do farm work. Of course if they do not accept the Committee's practical offer of a position on a farm, there is no compulsion in the matter. Nevertheless, the Committee think that many men will welcome a vacation spent in the open, and that through these men the farm labour problem in Eastern Ontario will be kept well in hand.

Civil Service.

A greater number of these temporary farmers will come from the Civil Service. The order allowing them three weeks' leave of absence with pay for farm service, has already tempted many to sign up for the period. Nor have the girls been backward. Civil Servants, school teachers, stenographers, and girls from every walk of life have shown a readiness to do whatever is required.

But, there seems to be a feeling among the farmers that girls would be a bother. In fact many of these undiscerning sons of the soil frankly don't want girls. The farmer's wife wants and needs assistance in the kitchen, but somehow patriotism dwindles when it comes to just plain "keeping house." So unless the girls rally to the call of the kitchen it will mean just a three weeks' vacation for them.

The Farmerettes.

Girls in general, do not include the farmerettes still receiving instruction at the Experimental Farm. Their instructors, the Committee, and the Women's Canadian Club are wholly delighted with the success of their proteges. Just three girls out of the twenty-one who ventured forth on June 17 have dropped out. The others will soon be successful farmerettes, practicing what they are being taught now.

Will Lose No Time.

Some sixty girls will start work in Ottawa on the registration cards on Wednesday, for the Ottawa Organization of Resources Committee have been promised first look, and they are losing no time.

All day the documental cards have been piling up on an upper floor of the Victoria Museum in Ottawa. By to-day the returns from Eastern Ontario will be practically all in, and then the staff will search the cards for possible farm workers. Subsequently the Resources Committee intends to use the information by offering those willing to do farm work an opportunity for the summer, or for the period of their vacations.

The French also carried out a number of raids during the night, in the regions of Mailly Raineval, in the Somme sector, Melicoq, west of the Oise, Vinly, north of the Clignon river and north-west of Chateau-Thierry, and at Mont Garnillet, east of Rheims, capturing prisoners and machine guns.

THE STATEMENT READS.

The French carried out a number of raids during the night at Mailly Raineval, Melecoq, Vinly, Mont Carnallet and Lorraine. Prisoners and machine guns were taken. New German attacks against small positions north of Leport, west of Soissons, were repulsed.

Canadian Press:

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, June 26. — The Austrian reverse in Italy is becoming known within the German lines and is causing depression, according to prisoners captured by the British. The German soldiers are surprised at the Austrian defeat, as it was believed firmly that the offensive movement intended to administer a knockout blow to Italy, would be a complete success, and thereby hasten an early peace.

Mr. Robert Weaver,

Dear Sir,—

This is just to let you know that your son previous to his proceedings to France partook of the Communion dispensed by the Chaplain to the draft of whom are proceeding to France today.

I am sure that you will be glad that your son Lorne is maintaining his connection with the church and his relationship with Christ while he engaged in the awful business of war, and my earnest hope and prayer is that he may come through the dangers and the temptations to which he is subjected unscarred in soul, and that he may be spared to return to those who love him so dearly at home.

May God comfort your heart during this period of anxiety.

Yours very sincerely,

Foreign Secretary Referred to the Prolongation of the War—An Atmosphere of Gloom

DECLINE INVITATION

Canadian Press:

AMSTERDAM, June 26.—There was an utter absence of enthusiasm in the Reichstag debate, says a Berlin despatch to the Handelsblad. Foreign Secretary Von Kuehlmann had hardly begun to speak when it became so dark in the House that the deputies could hardly be distinguished from the press gallery. This atmosphere of gloom, it is added, was symptomatic of the entire speech and its reception, especially the Foreign Secretary's reference to the prolongation of the war. Chancellor Von Hertling and Vice Chancellor Von Payer sat on either side of the Foreign Secretary.

Mr. Cook has been out from College only four months. When one takes into consideration the fact that he is only 17 years old and went to the position direct from the local College, it speaks well for the training given in this well and favourably known institution. It also gives one an idea of the excellent opportunities there are for those with a business training. 1d

KERENSKY IN ENGLAND

Former Premier of Russia Will Visit the United States—His Health is Bad

NO POLITICAL MOTIVE

KERENSKY LEAVES LONDON, ENGLAND, FOR UNITED STATES

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 26.—Alexander F. Kerensky, former Russian Premier, arrived in London recently, it was learned to-day.

LONDON, June 26.— Alexander F. Kerensky, the former Russian Premier, who arrived in London several days ago, was reported to-day to have left for America. Officials denied there was any political significance in his visit here, or in his proposed trip to the United States.

Ex-Premier Kerensky has been in London for several days. He has kept in retirement, however, and few were aware of his arrival. His health is bad and he has gone through remarkable adventures in escaping from Russia, and in his journey to England.

The presence of Kerensky in London, of course, is known to the British Government, as it is impossible under the present strict passport regulations for any alien to enter the country without the Government knowing of it.

Truce Abolished.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, June 26. — Alexander Kerensky, former Russian Premier, made a dramatic appearance at the British Tabour Conference here today. After being introduced by Arthur Henderson, the British Labour leader, Kerensky made a speech in Russian. He was loudly cheered.

"I am certain the Russian people shortly will join in the great cause of freedom," he said. "I have just come from Moscow. My duty as a statesman and Socialist is to tell the world why the Russian people are a democracy fighting tyranny"

The Labour Conference overwhelmingly adopted a resolution abolishing the political truce with the British Government

The judges and those in charge (six of them) have been appointed by the Health Association and this year baby show promises to be the biggest and best that has been conducted for years.

The prizes are all excellent ones. First prizes running in value of $5.00 and over; second and third being serviceable and valuable as well.

The Quaker Oats And Corn Flakes

In a Short While Their Production Will Be Enormous

In an advertisement of local grocers in the Examiner last evening, in mentioning a special price regarding corn flakes, it states that corn flakes will soon be off the market. This has particular reference only for an expected temporary period, as the Quaker Oats will in about two months' time be one of the largest producers of corn flakes in the market, and will be able to relieve the great demand for this popular summer cereal with an excellent brand of goods.

"Victory Bread" For Sale On And After July 15th

New Compulsory Order Specifies the Ratios of Substitutes That Must Be Used With Wheat Flour —Dealers Must Keep Substitutes For Sale.

FOOD BOARD'S DECISION

OTTAWA, June 25.—Compulsory use, by bakers, confectioners, public eating places and private households, of substitutes for white flour are prescribed in an order issued to-day by the Canada Food Board.

In making this measure public, Mr. Thomson emphasized the absolute necessity of conserving our small stocks of wheat in order that we may share them with our allies, especially during the next few months when their food situation will be extremely difficult.

The order defines as substitutes for wheat flour, 'pure and wholesome corn, oats, barley, rice, rye, buckwheat, tapioca, or potato flour; bran, shorts, oatmeal, rolled oats, cornmeal, cornstarch, hominy, corn grits, rye meal, rice, tapioca, or any mixture of same, and potatoes." Four pounds of potatoes will be considered equivalent to one pound of the other substitutes.

The order provides that on and after July 1, bakers, confectioners and public eating places, in making any bakery product in which the use of substitutes in certain definite proportions is not prescribed by previous orders of the Food Board, must use one pound of substitutes to every nine pounds of standard wheat flour. Similarly, persons baking for private consumption any product in which white or standard flour is used, must use not less than one pound of substitutes to every nine pounds of white or standard wheat flour.

Increased One Pound.

On and after July 15 this proportion, so far as places east of Port Arthur are concerned, must be increased to one pound of substitutes to every four pounds of white or standard wheat flour. Quantities of substitutes available west of Port Arthur are at present too uncertain to allow of a date being named for an increase equal to that required for Eastern Canada, but such increase will be made just as soon as the available supply of substitutes in Western Canada warrants.

On and after July 15 no licensed dealer may legally have in his possession for sale any wheat or standard flour unless he also has at all times a sufficient stock of substitutes to meet the demands of his customers, at reasonable prices.

Persons at points east of but not including Port Arthur must purchase substitutes in the proportion of not less than one pound of substiautes to two pounds of wheat or standard flour, while persons west of and including Port Arthur must buy not less than one pound of substitutes to four pounds of wheat or standard flour. Dealers are forbidden, on and after July 15, to sell flour unless substitutes in the proportion stated, or to a greater proportion, are purchased.

Victory Bread.

On and after July 15 every baker must place on each loaf of bread a label or sticker bearing his name and address and the words "Victory Bread." The latter prescription will be a guarantee that the prescribed amount of substitutes of standard flour required by the Canada Food Board have been used in making the loaf. Bread which does not bear such label or sticker may be seized and forfeited to his Majesty.

The order makes it an offence for any person to sell or have in his possession any bread, rolls or pastry or any other product in which white or standard flour is used which does not conform to the requirements of the Food Board. The penalty for violation of the new regulations is a fine of not less than $100 and up to $1,000, or imprisonment for a period of three months, or both fine and imprisonment.

Devey, the latter of whom went to the 5.12 train this morning to start the young lady on her journey to London, Ont.

Three of our machines are missing and one of them is known to have been forced to land inside the enemy lines.

H. E. Blondin Is Returning Home

Postmaster General Has Been Away on Leave of Absence

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, June 26.—The cabled announcement from England to-day to the effect that Lieut.-Col. H. E. Blondin is returning immediately to Canada to resume his duties as Postmaster-General is not capable of confirmation here, though the probability of the truth of the report is not questioned. Mr. Blondin, though he was defeated in both the seats in which he was nominated last election, is still Postmaster-General on leave of absence, and no successor has been appointed. The question of his return under the circumstances was raised in the House last session. Sir Geo. Foster replying to-night by saying that Colonel Blondin was doing good national service overseas. The question of securing a seat for Colonel Blondin is a difficult one. In fact it is an almost impossible one under the circumstances. It is, however, suggested that he shall go to the Senate where several vacancies may be said to be pending, and that he will administer the department as a member of that Chamber.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 26TH, 1918.

INTERCESSION DAY.

In conenction with the services of intercession on Sunday next, which the Dominion and Provincial governments have by proclamation, urged the citizens to heartily observe, the suggestion has been made to the Examiner that the fraternal and other societies in Peterborough could give a splendid impetus to the occasion if each would make arrangements to attend some one of the city churches in a body on Sunday morning or evening.

The Great War Veterans' Association have taken the lead in this movement and have arranged to hold a church parade to St. John's church in the evening. Other local bodies might perhaps be able to arrange similar parades and the result would be a splendid response to the appeal for the observance of Sunday next as a day of intercession.

SLANDERING OUR TROOPS.

So many zealous but misguided people seem to take a delight in making wild statements these days about the "manner in which Canada's soldiers are being debauched overseas," that it would appear necessary that some government action should be taken to prevent the constant repetition of such absurd and harmful talk. Capt. Bailey was arrested and sentenced for charging that the Canadians in France were drunk last Christmas, but there have been other statements made since his arrest that were equally to be condemned. In spite of the testimony of Bishop Fallon, after a visit to the front, that he had not seen an intoxicated soldier in France, there were speakers at a public gathering at Ottawa last week who re-iterated unpleasant, untruthful charges against the character of our men overseas.

A telling rebuke to the people who are spreading such ridiculous slanders is given by the noted American author, Irvin Cobb, who has been at the front with the soldiers of different nations off and on since the beginning of the war. He has intermingled with the men of all the allied armies and is therefore well qualified to testify as to conditions. Here is his finding on the point at issue—he is speaking of the men from this continent; Canadians as well as United States troops:

"As for their morals, I am firmly committed to the belief, as a result of what I have seen and heard, that man for man our soldiers have a higher moral standard than the men of any army or any other nation engaged in this war; and when in this connection I speak of our soldiers I mean the soldiers of Canada as well as the soldiers of the United States. Any man who tells you the contrary is a liar, and the truth is not in him. This is not an offhand alibi; statistics compiled by our own surgeons form the truth of it; and any man who stands up anywhere on our continent and says that the soldiers who have come from our side of the Atlantic to help lick Germany are contracting habits of drunkenness or that they are being ruined by the spreading of sexual diseases among them utters a deliberate and a cruel slander against North American manhood which should entitle him to a suit of tar-and-feather underwear and a free ride on a rail out of any community.

"There is absolutely nothing the matter with our boys except that they are average human beings, and it is going to take a long time to cure them of that. And please remember this—that, discipline being what it is and military restraint being what it is, it is very much harder for a man in the army or the navy to get drunk or to misconduct himself than it would be for him to indulge in such excesses were he out in civil life, as a free agent."

A TIP FOR PETERBOROUGH.

An Ottawa man, Mr. W. J. McKerracher, just back from a visit to New York, has started an unique plan by which soldiers are to be given an opportunity of enjoying a motor drive. Mr. McKerracher has had a number of placards printed and is distributing them to Ottawa car owners. They read as follows:

RETURNED SOLDIERS and men going overseas.
WELCOME
In this car as far as I am going.

"I saw hundreds of cars labelled this way in New York last week," says the Ottawa man, "and the soldiers were taking advantage of them. When a soldier sees such a card he hails it and is taken aboard. It seems to me that the motorists of Ottawa could be of even greater service to the soldiers, for we have so many returned men here, some not yet recovered from wounds or sickness."

There is room for such a scheme in Peterborough. Here with hundreds of cars running around the streets, sometimes only containing the driver there seems to be very little inclination to accommodate the man who is just back from overseas. The other day two returned men were noticed hobbling down Charlotte street with the aid of walking sticks, and at least fifteen cars passed them within a block without any invitation to accept a ride.

The card system proposed by Mr. McKerracher for use in Ottawa might well be adopted here. It would be a good thing for the Automobile Association to take up and, if possible, introduce, for the benefit of the wounded Tommies.

A CANNED SERMON.

From his pulpit in St. Paul's Church, Guelph, the pastor of that church, Rev. K. H. Palmer, made a statement yesterday which calls for attention. He declared that the sermon which he preached to the Orangemen at Hespeler on the preceding Sunday was not his own, but that it was handed to him by the military authorities.

This we regard as one of the strangest, most startling statements that has been made in Canada for many a day. A prepared sermon handed to a preacher by the military authorities! If it was handed to him, it must have been for the purpose of having Rev. Mr. Palmer preach it. Whether or no he was specifically ordered by the military authorities to preach it Mr. Palmer did not say, but evidently he understood that that was why the sermon was handed to him, for he did preach it.

A report of that sermon has not, to our knowledge, been published. It is desirable that it should be in order that the public may learn the sort of sermon which is in favour by the "military authorities" and the degree of success which those authorities attain as religious instructors.

Has the Hon. S. C. Mewburn, we wonder, taken it upon himself, to write sermons to be delivered by ordained clergymen? The minister of militia is a pretty good lawyer, but his friends have not hitherto credited him with any natural gift in the way of pulpit rhetoric, or with any desire to supplement his military and ministerial duties with the task of preparing sermons. But the minister has a good many chaplains under him, and maybe he has delegated the task to one or more of them. But why?—Hamilton Herald.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Germany says Russia is principally to blame for starting the war. Well, Russia is hardly in a position to resent the charge.

If there are 11,000 men in Quebec waiting to be called to the colours, will General Mewburn please get busy and see that arrangements are made for handling these new recruits.

Judging by the number of prescriptions handed out by one Toronto doctor, whisky must have more beneficial results than temperance advocates would lead one to believe.

45 ships are to be launched in Canada this year. And not long ago people were saying that Canadians could not build ships.

Major W. A. Bishop, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., Canada's famous aviator, who has just been appointed to an important position on the British air board, went back to France and showed his earlier success was not an accident by increasing his total of enemy machines to 72. In a little over a week he bagged eight German planes.

MATTHEWS-BLACKWELL WIN A SNAPPY GAME FROM THE DE LAVAL

Big Crowd See M. B's Triumphant by 5 to 3 in Twilight League Fixture at Riverside Park—League Leaders Riversides and Thistles Will Clash To-morrow Night

In the snappiest Twilight League game of the season, the Matthews-Blackwell team defeated De Laval by 5 to 3 at Riverside Park last night. The game was close and hard fought all the way, and featured by clever fielding, the outfielders on both sides nailing everything that came their way, while both infields contributed some fast work that aroused the spectators. The two left-fielders, Shaughnessy for Matthews and Legon for De Laval, especially shone, both pulling off beautiful running catches.

Close, the lanky box artist for the winners, pitched a splendid game, allowing De Laval only seven singles and passing but one man. The big fellow was cool and had good speed and control. He was held up in faultless fashion by his battery mate, Lefave. Sharpe also was in good form for De Laval.

Matthews scored a run in the first innings when, after Shaughnessy had singled and stole second and Montgomery had hit, Pilling came through with a smash that sent Shaughnessy over.

Pilling's batting was responsible for the next counter as well. Shaughnessy opened the third by drawing a pass and stealing second. Montgomery fanned, but Pilling drove one on a line to left and Shaughnessy came home.

De Laval got one back in their half. Neary was hit to start with, but after stealing, was doubled up on Dugan's fly to Cunningham. Lipsett grounded to Cunningham and went to second on the shortstop's bad throw. Taylor's single sent Lipsett home. Fitzgerald beat out a bunt, but Frost grounded to Lowe.

Matthews made it 3 to 1 in the fourth. Coursey was safe on Fitzgerald's error, but was forced at second on Cunningham's bunt to the pitcher. Cunningham stole second and came home on Lefave's double to left. Close was safe when Fitzgerald dropped Sharpe's throw but Legon made a fine catch of Shaughnessy's smash to left, and Montgomery grounded to Dugan.

In the sixth the winners added another. Cunningham walked and stole second and third. Lefave flied to left, but Close's infield hit scored the runner. Shaughnessy walked, but Sharpe got out of the hole by fanning Montgomery and Pilling.

De Laval got their last runs in their half and came near tying up the game. Fitzgerald singled and stole second. Frost fanned and Sharpe died on a fly to Cunningham, but English singled through short to score Fitzgerald. English stole second and scored on Legon's tap to third. The batter beat the ball to first, and when Lowe dropped the throw, English scored on the play. Neary ended the rally with a grounder to Lowe.

Matthews made it safe by scoring in the eighth. Lefave was safe on Lipsett's error, but was forced at second when Close hit to left. Lefave hesitated, thinking the drive was going to be caught, and Legon's quick throw nailed him at second. Close was out stealing, Taylor to Dugan. Shaughnessy walked, stole second, went to third on a passed ball and scored on Montgomery's fast one over second, which Lipsett knocked down but could not handle in time. Montgomery was nipped at second when he tried to steal.

Council Escaped Tedium Of Reading Building By-law

The new building bylaw is like a poor relation, it has scarcely a friend in the council except Ald. Edgar, who fathered it. Last night Mayor Duncan amused himself by threatening to read the 'steen hundred pages of the thick volume.

"I'll read for the first hour," said the Mayor; "Ald. Edgar can take it for another hour, and after we have all had an hour at it we can call upon Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Parsons."

The contracting members, who had helped frame the bylaw, and then deserted and practically disowned it when it was presented to the council, stated that they were familiar with its clauses.

Ald. M. McIntyre moved that copies be given to the members who were unacquainted with it, and that they read it at their leisure.

"We would have been through several pages," Ald. Edgar expostulated, "if we had gone ahead and rea it instead of wasting time like this."

Ald. Worth liked the motion, and seconded it. He admitted that he was not familiar with the details of construction work, steel strains and other professional questions, and he was certain that there was much of it that would leave him little the wiser.

Ald. Worth was at a loss to understand the action of the aldermen who had been on the committee, practical men who had spent the winter on the bylaw, and then jumped on it when it came before the council. However he agreed to give it a "once over." Ald. Weir somewhat reluctantly accepted a copy of the lengthy bylaw, and Ald. Saunders, who had refused to approve the bylaw, because he did not know its contents, took his copy with the statement that he would read it at his leisure.

All of which indicates an indefinite shelving of the formidable work. There was some suggestion that it be applied to the fire limits but this was blocked.

Ald. Worth incidentally remarked that Peterboro was a city of substantial homes and residences. There were comparatively few frame buildings. Most of them were of brick or stone, and there was apparently every indication that the contractors and builders were putting up permanent homes.

WAR GARDEN BULLETIN

Practical Daily Guide For Vacant Lot and Backyard Gardeners Enlisted in Greater Production Campaign.

GET EXTRA DIVIDENDS.

June is the month to make each square foot of ground in the garden yield extra dividends by intensive utilization of space between the rows and plants. For instance, tomatoes set out late in May do not begin to spread much before July. Even then their spreading tendency should be checked by providing supports of some sort. Lettuce, radishes and other crops that mature quickly may be grown between tomatoes, peppers, and eggplants.

Extra sowing of cucumbers should be made at this time to help you out with your pickle supply. The plants and fruits develop very quickly at this time. By pinching out the centre of shoots, cucumber vines can be restricted to surprisingly limited space without seriously limiting the number of "Cukes" you are going to have.

ENGINEER ADMITS THAT HE WAS ASLEEP

HAMMOND, Ind., June 24.—Attorney McFadden, representing the Michigan Central, issued a statement to-day explaining that Engineer Alonzo Sargent, of the empty troop train which crashed into a circus train near Gary Saturday, was asleep, owing to illness, and did not see the signals of danger.

Will Reconsidesr Order To Remove Gasoline Pumps

At the regular meeting of the council next Tuesday, the order requiring the removal of gasoline pumps from the streets six months after June 3rd, will be reconsidered. This was decided at the meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council, when a resolution moved by Ald. Worth and seconded by Ald. Jones, that the gas tanks be allowed to remain on the streets until after the war, was defeated.

Ald. Weir—The war may be over in six months.

Mr. C. R. Banks—If it is I'll take up my tank and give it away.

Ex-mayor Duffus presented the petition of the garage men who waited on the committee. If gasoline pumps had to be placed within the garages this would interfere with the sidewalk traffic and cause congestion because the cars would have to drive over the walks and back again. The insurance rates on the garages would be automatically raised 25 per cent, and also the adjoining building.

"I see the necessity of restricting the number of pumps, but it is only fair that we be given a reasonable time to arrange for their removal," Mr. Duffus said. "This applies to the owners of the garages as well as to the occupants."

Ald. Edgar—"What do you think is a reasonable time?"

Mr. Duffus—"A couple of years at least."

Ald. Worth—"There are enough taxes and war restrictions without this Council adding more. This could wait until after the war."

Ald. Edgar—"It might be a good thing to prevent the sale of gasoline on Sunday."

Dr. Pulkinghorn—"We will sell it during the week. That won't be a hardship."

Ald. Jones—"With the restaurants closed and no gasoline available, we would have no one here on Sundays."

Mayor Duncan—"We desire to provide accommodation for tourists."

Mr. Andrew Brown said that only two objected to the location of his pump on Water street. They were Mr. Savigny and Mr. White.

"I'm in favour of the suggestion to shut the pumps out from a certain area, but give us time to make arrangements. It cost us $500 to instal a pump."

WILL GRAVEL ENTRANCE.

A request from the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition that the city gravel and put in a tile drain at the new approach and entrance to the Fair grounds, was granted, on a motion by Ald. Jones, seconded by Ald. Weir.

City Engineer Parsons estimated the cost at $35 or $40; and Ald. Weir stated that the citizens had spent considerable money on the new gates and the least encouragement the city could render was to gravel the approach.

Inspector's Report Concerning The Peterboro' Protestant Home

Food is Good and Inmates Comfortably Clothed and Looked After—Fire Protection.

CONDITIONS SATISFACTORY

An official visit of inspection was made at the Protestant Home, Peterborough, on June 6th, 1918, when there were 32 inmates in residence, 20 males and 12 females.

The general condition of the building as regards cleanliness, the beds, bedding, halls, dormitories, yards, toilets ventilation, drainage and water supply are all satisfactory. The drainage and water supply are those of the City of Peterborough.

The health of the inmates is good, none being sick at the time of inspection.

The food is good and wholesome and well cooked and served. The supplies are purchased wholesale by the House committee.

The inmates are comfortably clothed and looked clean, happy and contented.

The sexes are properly separated.

Very few of the inmates are able to work, but those who are able, are given light work about the house and garden. In the institution are three totally blind, two deaf and four crippled.

The protection against fire and the facilities for escape in case of fire appear to be satisfactory.

The superintendent is Miss Lancaster.

The Board meets twice a month to attend to business matters. The secretary of the Board is Miss Flora H. Davidson.

The books are neatly kept and up to-date.

The result of the inspection was very satisfactory. The management of the institution being excellent.

ALEX. MacKAY,
Inspector

Otonabee Chapter Garden Party

The weather smiled kindly upon the garden party given yesterday by the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E. at Verlum Hall, the beautiful home of Miss B. Lundy, East City, and with the countless attractions provided by the ladies in charge of the fete, the three hundred and fifty people who attended had a perfect day. Splendid terraces rolling to the lake, flower bordered paths and magnificent lawns formed a most magnificent background for the pretty tables, tents and costumes of the ladies who assisted.

The Committees.

Mrs. Coulthard, regent of the Chapter, was very ably supported by the committees in charge of the different attractions. At the refreshment booth, of which Mrs. R. R. Hall was convener, Mrs. Whitehouse, Mrs. J. H. McClellan, Mrs. A. H. Stratton and Mrs. Fraser were in charge. Mrs. Aylmer and Miss English took charge of the ice cream. The fortune telling booth was a busy spot and the gypsies Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Chris. Graham, Mrs. Goodwill and Miss Gladman, were kept busy fortelling the future for hundreds in a tent very kindly loaned by Grafton & Co. Mrs. Alex. Spence very ably ran the candy table. The "pocket committee" were Mrs. Dunsford, Miss Denison, Mrs. Meredith, Mrs. Harstone and Mrs. Carmichael. In this department an absolutely new scheme was carried out to substitute for the time-worn fish pond. Six little girls dressed in red white and blue strolled about the grounds with pockets bulging with presents, which were drawn out for a small sum. The girls were Mary and Marian Harstone, Grace Dunsford Agnes Carmichael, Becky Arthurs and Helen Thompson. At the raffle booth of which Mrs. John Birnie was in charge, Helent Grant, Margaret Clark, Kathleen Dunsford and Seabourn Hamilton were in charge. Mr. A. Spence won the scarf presened by Mrs. Miles Hamilton, Mr. Tom. Carley the Regent's prize and Mrs. Fessenden the eggs presented by Mrs Dunsford.

In the Evening.

In the evening a really splendid concert, arranged cleverly by Miss Hurley and Mrs. Allen, was given by local talent in the drawing room of the house, while the 57th Band kept all outdoors lively with an excellent programme.

Miss Lundy, while not taking an active part in the occasion on account of a recent bereavement, very graciously welcomed all the visitors to her home, which she so kindly placed at the disposal of the chapter.

Presentation To Captain Neilson

Patriotic Addresses WereDelivered at Meeting in Westwood

A very interesting gathering was held at Westwood Town Hall on Monday evening, under the auspices of the Asphodel Patriotic Society, to do honour to Capt. Neilson, a Westwood boy home on furlough from active service.

Capt. Neilson went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and reverted to go to France, where he has been on active service, engaging in many battles as an officer of the 21st Battalion.

A beautiful gold watch, suitably engraved, together with an address, was presented to Capt. Neilson, who made a most interesting speech, thanking his friends for the honour shown him.

A splendid musical programme was rendered. The Norwood Brass Band was present, under Bandmaster Brault, and their splendid music added much to the enjoyment of the evening.

Lieut.-Col. Birdsall presided, and patriotic addresses were delivered by Lt.-Col. Johnston, late officer commanding the 93rd Battalion, Captain Thompson, Lt.-Col. Miller and Mr. F. D. Kerr, of Peterborough.

The residents of Asphodel and the adjoining villages of Norwood and Hastings were present in large numbers, among those present being Reeve Squire of Norwood.

The Lindsay Woodmen Were Entertained By Peterboro' Lodge

Interesting Speeches by Mrs. Lieut Col. Crawford, Mr. Cinnamon, Mr. G. N. Gordon and Others.

CANDIDATES INITIATED

Ten car loads of men and women members of the Lindsay Woodmen of the World visited the local lodge last night.

The meeting was opened by Council Commander Lebar, after which Sovereign Mrs. Lt.-Col. Crawford was called upon to take command of the meeting and proceed with the ladies' degree team from Lindsay to put through the initiation work for the eight new members. Sovereign Graham moved, seconded by Sovereign G. N. Gordon, a vote of thanks to the Lindsay members for their thorough handling of the initiation.

Sovereign Lebar, on resuming his duties, declared the business session closed, and the meeting opened to visitors, and a good programme was presented by local and Lindsay talent.

Speech by P. H. C. C. Cinnamon.

The Chairman then called upon P. H. C. C. D. Cinnamon, of Lindsay, to address the meeting.

The applause which greeted Sov. Cinnamon on rising to speak went to show that he is a warm favourite with Peterborough Woodmen. Mr. Cinnamon thanked the members for the kind invitation extended to Lindsay Camp to pay Sherwood Forest a return visit, and hoped that these fraternal visits would continue between Peterborough and Lindsay Camps, as it strengthened both camps, fraternally and numerically. He enlarged on the work of the Order from its infancy, and was prouder to-day than he ever was to know that the Woodmen of the World was in a healthy financial position, having a great surplus over and above the Dominion Government requirements. He urged the officers and members of both Camps represented here to-night to make preparations from now and during the fall campaign to double their membership at the end of 1918. The two camps have worked splendidly, and have met with remarkable success, the future looks bright for continued success, and he looks to Peterborough Camp to be the largest camp in the Order at the end of 1918.

The hour being late, Sov. Cinnamon closed his brief but stirring address by thanking the officers and members of Sherwood Forest Camp for the welcome which they had given Lindsay members.

Sovereign G. N. Gordon.

The Chairman then called upon Sov. G. N. Gordon.

Mr. Gordon, in his opening remarks, said it always was a pleasure to him to meet with our neighbours from Lindsay, and assured them they were always welcome to Sherwood Forest Camp at Peterborough. He gave a brief history of Peterborough Camp during the last twelve years, showing the good work the Camp had accomplished during that time. During these war years the work of securing new members is somewhat retarded. Nevertheless, Peterborough Camp had shown good progress, and he urged the members to give their full support to the officers, and he assured them that he would work in conjunction with these officers in any capacity to make Sherwood Forest Camp, Peterborough, the strongest camp in the Canadian jurisdiction. As he had previously remarked, he was thoroughly impressed by the lady officers and the enthusiasm they put into their work. It was a credit to each one of them. He had seen this work exemplified in towns and cities all over Ontario, and in his opinion the ladies to-night took the premier position in this work. He spoke in eloquent terms of the future of Peterborough by the influx of people who will arrive by the location of the new plants, such as Renfrew Metal Products Company, and on this account he thought the organization field would be enlarged, and that the prospects were bright for Peterborough Camp to repeat the performance they accomplished in 1917 by winning the banner flag.

Short speeches were made on behalf of Lindsay Camp by the Clerk, Dr. Annis, C.C. M. J. Dedman, Dr. Rich. Capt. Warren and Ford Moynes.

Peterborough replied with Sov. A. Graham, Ald. R. N. Jones, and Ald. Wm. H. Taylor all wishing Lindsay Camp every success, and that these fraternal visits will be often repeated.

Closed after midnight with the National Anthem.

FIRST VESSEL IN ORILLIA.

At a meeting of the Council of the Board of Trade it was decided to offer a silk flag to the first vessel, propelled by either a steam or gasoline engine of more than ten horse power that reaches Orillia from Lake Ontario by the Trent Waterway. This is following the precedent set when the Kirkfield section was opened, when a flag was presented to the first vessel to arrive from the Kawartha Lakes.—Orillia Packet.

BRITISH LABOUR PARTY MEETING

Attempt Will Be Made to Break the Existing Political Truce.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON June 26. —The British Labour party was to hold an important meeting to-day, at which a decision was to be reached on the proposal to break the existing political truce. If this is done it will mean the resignation of Labour members of the Cabinet and the formation of a Labour Opposition in the House of Commons.

Dr. J. P. Wilson Will Preach Farewell Sermon This Evening

Arrangements are completed for the service to-night, when Dr. J. P. Wilson will preach a sermon to his friends of all denominations before retiring from the regular ministry.

A large united choir under the direction of Mr. John Allan, will lead in the service of praise. The ministers of all the Peterboro churches will be present. The Wednesday evening service in every church, but St. Paul's, is cancelled. The ushers will be supplied by the entertaining church.

It is suggested that all be present promptly at eight o'clock. Doubtless the large auditorium of St. Paul's church will be filled.

The Ministerial Association has been inspired in giving Peterboro people this opportunity of hearing Dr. Wilson.

Sir,—Why has the City Council not advertised the T. V. Canal this summer as a pleasure route for the benefit of the many tourist resorts? All other points of Canada are alive to their chance this year, but our people seem to be asleep, having at last got what they so long cried for.

TRENT VALLEY.

Peterborough, June 25, /18.

Sporting Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In reading the lists of prizes for the 1st of July, I would like to state that the tug-of-war prize seems to be a very small affair, for such an event as a tug-of-war is a test of strength which is a big feature in sports. I would suggest giving a cup or a shield, which could be competed for every year, one team winning it in three consecutive years would keep it, as a box of 50 cigars has downed the interest of three teams already, as a box of cigars has to be divided up between 10 men giving 5 cigars to each. Hoping the men of the Manfacturing Association will take an interest and offer some better prize, as it is an advertisement as well as a feature of sport. Thanking you for your valuable space.

One Interested.

Arrangements are being made to put up a cup or shield to be competed for annually.—Sporting Editor.

STEINBURG CHILD HAS COMPLETELY RECOVERED

A small evil-smelling bomb, a means popularly employed by small boys for practical joking, caused a wild rumour to circulate about the city on Saturday that Rosie Steinburg, the little 17-months old daughter of Joseph Steinburg, 466 George street, was the victim of an attempted murder at Mr. Steinburg's house on Friday.

Called upon to-day, Mrs. Steinburg produced the little girl, the picture of health, from the back yard, where she is carefully guarded from any such second "attempt on her life."

Very much excited Mrs. Steinburg recited the story of how the article must have been introduced, as the little girl was on the top of the step, and could not have gone down. Chief Thompson laughed at the idea of foul play and explained that the smell bomb (now in his possession) is quite harmless outside of being a nuisance. A story of an attempt to burn the barn at the rear of Steinburg's house is discounted by the police.

HULL WOMAN HAD FAINTING SPELLS

Mrs. Thibault Overcame Troubles By Taking Tanlac—Husband Praises It

The value of Tanlac in the treatment of stomach trouble with its many attendant ills, is further evidenced in the case of Mrs. Valeda Thibault, who resides at 37 Papineau Avenue, Hull; Mrs. Thibault is the wife of J. A. Thibault, a life long resident of Hull and what they have to say concerning Tanlac will be of much interest to the people of their community.

"I had been suffering" said Mrs. Thibault, from stomach trouble, nervousness and a general rundown condition for over a year, and I just don't know what I would have done without Tanlac, as I had reached the point where I don't believe I could have held out much longer. I always suffered terribly with indigestion after meals and what I ate seemed to do me no good. Everything I would eat soured on my stomach causing gas, bloating and much pain, and such tight, depressed feelings in my chest that I could hardly breathe. My nervous condition kept me from getting any sound sleep. I had terrible nightmares and would often wake in a fright, then in the mornings I would get up feeling half dead and just barely able to drag myself around I was so weak I couldn't do my housework, would have fainting spells and sometimes just fall to the floor completely exhausted. I couldn't even sweep the floor and while I just tried everything I kept getting worse.

"One day an aunt of mine told me how Tanlac had helped her and advised me to try it, and the results are I am feeling much stronger and better in every way. I have taken three bottles and can do all my work without the least trouble. Gas has stopped forming on my stomach and no matter what I eat I'm never bothered with indigestion. My health is better already than it has been in a long time and I'm just improving every day, I rest well at night and my nervousness with all that tired feeling is gone, and I am certainly very thankful to Tanlac.

Mr. Thibault, who witnessed his wife's statement, said. "Yes, it's really remarkable how my wife has improved in health since she began using Tanlac and I heartily endorse every word she has said in recommending it. She had been in such wretched health for more than a year that I had become uneasy and bought all kinds of medicines. But Tanlac is the only thing that has ever done her any good and I will be glad to personally tell anybody just what it has done for her."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd., in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

The League Leaders want the crowd to-morrow night at Riverside. Every one root for the best team.

Gets a Degree.

The "Newburyport," Massachusetts Daily News, of June 17th, contained the following which will be of interest to local people as Dr. Nugent is a son of Mr. Henry Nugent, of Omemee:

During the morning worship at the Central Church yesterday, the clerk, John T. Hunt, made the announcement to the large congregation present that at the commencement exercises in connection with Wheaton College last week, the trustees by unanimous vote, authorized the president to confer on the pastor, Rev. Walter Henry Nugent, Ph.D., the degre of Doctor of Divinity.

Dr. Nugent was born in Ontario and received his early education in the Omemee High School and Albert College, from which he graduated. He also studied a short time in Victoria College. In June, 1898, he entered the ministry of the Methodist Church of Canada and preached for three years in the Manitoba and Northwest Conference. He came to the United States in 1901 and after a year and a half in Iowa he was called to Chicago where he seized the opportunity for further study. He not only completed his theological studies, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Divinity from the Chicago Theological Seminary, but he also received the Bachelor's degree in Law and the Doctor's degree in Philosophy.

Dr. Nugent came to this city from Minneapolis, where he was serving a large church, to become pastor of the union of three local churches, known as Central Church, and is now serving his ninth year here. He is a keen and logical thinker, a speaker of special ability, and a leader in social questions of the day.

Dr. Nugent's many friends will be pleased with the honour that has been accorded him by Wheaton College.

Boarding Houses Where 15 Or More Meals Are Served Daily Must Obtain Food Board License

Boarding houses affected by the new regulations of the Canada Food Board are those in which fifteen or more meals are served daily to persons other than members of the proprietor's family. Hence if there are five boarders, each taking three meals a day, such houses must obtain the Food Board's license, costing two dollars.

The regulation is as follows: "On and after July 1st, public eating houses, where meals or refreshments to the number of fifteen or more a day are served to persons other than members of the proprietor's family," must obtain the necessary license or be liable to the penalty set forth in the order.

A public eating house is any hotel, restaurant, cafeteria, club, club-room, private family keeping boarders, boarding houses, schools, dining cars, steamships or any place where meals or refreshments are regularly served or sold to other than members of the family or household.

Ice Cream Licenses.

Important Decision In Liquor Case

A Point That Families Living Over Shops Should Consider

Without going into the evidence of a liquor case in which judgment was given in the police court today in which the defendant was fined $200 and $9.35 costs, the point on which the conviction was made might well be given publicity for the information of others who might find themselves similarly placed.

The point in question is this:—Where a family or person lives over their place of business, the Act definitely prohibits the party from having intoxicating liquor for personal or individual purposes.

If any one is sick living over their store and liquor is prescribed by the physician attending as being of help to the patient, it cannot be brought into the house according to law, and the person so doing is liable to a fine of $200 and costs.

The license inspector, Mr. Stewart, states that in such a case in order that the liquor could be administered medicinally within the law, the patient would requireto be taken from the residence that is under the same roof as the store or shop.

Quite a few people may be innocently violating this law and those who might be affected should look carefully into the matter.

CITY PLANS TO BUILD SHED FOR ITS COAL.

Has Reserve Supply of 700 Tons Now And More is Expected.

With 700 tons of coal in storage as a reserve for next winter, the Council is casting about for additional accommodation for expected shipments. Last night it was decided to ask the Utilities Commission for permission to build a coal shed on their property at the corner of Hunter and Bethune Streets, along the railway siding. It was agreed that this was preferable to renting quarters, thereby surrendering permanent possession. A coal shed can be built for several hundred dollars, and for one building now rented $35 a month is paid to the owner. Hence, it was decided that the city might as well build, and the shed could later be transferred to the Utilities Commission.

Entire West Bank of the River is Now Free From Austrians —Americans Wiped Out Twelve Hundred Germans —Famine Conditions in Petrograd.

TO REPATRIATE AUSTRIANS.

Russia Agrees to Head-for-Head Exchange of Able-Bodied Captives.

MOSCOW, June 27. — An understanding has been reached between Russia and Austria that pending final agreement regarding the repatriation of war prisoners, able-bodied prisoners may be exchanged immediately, head for head, in numbers as great as the carrying capacity of railroads and other means of transporttion permit. It is also stipulated that civil prisoners of military age shall be released. Negotiations between Russia and Germany regarding the same question have been interrupted because Germany insisted upon an exchange, head for head, which arrangement would be of great advantage to her, as she has the larger number of prisoners who would remain and work in Germany. The Russians wanted all prisoners repatriated, regardless of the inequality of numbers. The matter has been submitted to Berlin for adjustment.

Russia's consent to the exchange with Austria on the head for head basis may be explained by the fact Russia has a great number of Austrians, but only 120,000 Germans, while Germany hold several million Russians as prisoners.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally if You Eat Meat Regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

A large number of grassy, common, half-fed steers and cows are being shipped in, and for these there is a very weak market. Another 50c was knocked off these cattle yesterday, and the prospects are not good.

The Tanks Were Developed From A Farm Tractor

Inventor of New War Machine Tells For First Time Story of His Discovery—Gen. Swinton Asserts Even Workmen Constructing Them Were Kept In Ignorance.

WERE BUILT IN GREAT SECRECY

The story of the invention and manufacture of the first of the armoured tanks was told for the first time in its entirety by Major-General E. D. Swinton, of the British Army, at a performance given in aid of the United States Tank Corps at the Astor Theatre. Although the tank was a British invention, Major-General Swinton gives America indirect credit for it, for if it had not been for the manufacture of agricultural tractors in this country the tank would never have been thought of. The adaptation of the tractor idea to military purposes was accomplished by Major-General Swinton, who is known as the father of the tanks, and others.

"There had long been a demand for an adequate method of protecting infantry on an advance," said the General. "The fundamental purpose for which the tank is intended has long been recognized. The ancient Romans had the equivalent of the tank in what were called tortoise, and in the middle ages the belfry was used. In this war in particular some antidote for the machine gun was required, for the Germans had learned a lesson from the Russo-Japanese War, and were plentifully supplied with machine guns. The Germans did not mind how many machine guns were captured; each one was used to get the last possible man.

"America must be credited with both the machine gun and its antidote, for in Antwerp in 1914 a friend of mine saw for the first time an American agricultural caterpillar tractor. He wrote to me, inquiring if there were not some military use to which the idea could be put, and the invention of the tank resulted.

Secrecy Maintained.

"Of course, great secrecy had to be maintained. The first bit of camouflage used in connection with the manufacture of the machines was the name tank. They were called tanks so that not even the workingmen who were making them would know what they were manufacturing, and the rumour was circulated among the men that they were to be used in connection with the watering of our men in Egypt.

"Later, when it became time to punch holes in their sides for the guns, another story had to be invented. It was then rumoured that they were snow ploughs to be used in Russia, and to carry out this deception each tank was stenciled with a Petrograd address, and when the

When the older brother took the whooping cough we used this medicine promptly and prevented serious trouble, as the cough passed off in two or three days."

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

A WIDENING RIFT

CHAPTER CIII.

When I reached my room I locked the door and threw myself upon the bed. But I didn't cry. I lay dry-eyed but with clenched hands and repeated over and over that I hated Julia Collins, I hated her!

The idea that she should speak my husband's name in that way before those people at the station made me furious. One would think she was his fiancee —at least did they not know he was married. It was outrageous! I would never speak to her again.

My telephone jingled.

"We have news, your husband is unhurt and is on his way here in a special sent out by the railroad."

"Thank you," I again flung myself across the bed. Someway in my anger I had forgotten my anxiety. That George was safe did not mean quite as much to me as it would have meant had I not heard what Julia Collins said—that is it did not just then. Afterward when I understood the gravity of the accident; the number of people injured, I was prayerfully thankful for my husband's escape.

A Call For Help.

Finally I rose, bathed my face and eyes. The clerk had said that George was on the way in a special. He might arrive at any time. I rang for Celeste, and asked her to tell Mrs. Sexton I would like to see her. She came to me immediately.

"What is it?" she asked, as she looked anxiously at me.

"George was on that train—" then realizing she knew nothing of the accident, I explained. "George's train had met with an accident. He is unhurt and on his way in a special. Many were injured so I have heard." Then I told her of my visit to the station, of what I had overheard, and how I felt. "I hate that woman!" I declared. "What right had she to go and tell those people that she was there because of George, my husband. It was insulting."

"You say she didn't see you."

"No—I rushed back immediately I heard what she said."

"Never let either her or George know you did hear. If you are not cognizant of an occurrence you cannot be supposed to resent it."

"Then you acknowledge I should resent it."

"No—not quite that. She told the truth, they are old friends, very old friends. Naturally she might feel anxious. But if I were in your place I should ignore the incident. Not for her sake; but for your own. To talk of it will perhaps make it seem of more importance than it really was —to your husband. He might feel rather flattered than otherwise to know she was so interested in his fate. Men are like that, my dear. All men are apt to be easily flattered by a beautiful woman's interest in them. Don't make it the more patent by speaking of it."

"You are so wise. Shall I ever learn?" I said, feeling she had spoken the truth.

"You are learning—have learned a great deal. Fight women with their own weapons when you can do so and keep your self-respect. If a woman engages your husband's interest by flattery, why go her one better by using the same means. Meet her, any woman, on her own ground. Defeat her by your clever use of her own weapons."

Mrs. Collins Brings George to the Hotel.

Mrs. Sexton left me after a little more talk, confidential in that she told me things concerning herself; her own married life. I was happier when she had gone, more determined to make myself the kind of a woman George had thought I would be when he married me.

I bathed my face, and put on a most becoming dress. I had hardly done so when I heard voices in the hall, and George and Julia Collins came in. For a moment I couldn't speak. Oh, why hadn't Mrs. Sexton remained with me? Then I saw that George had his arm in a sling.

"You said you weren't injured!" I exclaimed, going to him, "How do you do Mrs. Collins!" I added as George kissed me more tenderly than usual. After that kiss I did not care what she had done. I felt that my husband was glad to see me; glad he had not been killed because of me. I don't know what gave me that feeling. I had it.

It's nothing!" he said, "just a sprain. When I think of those poor fellows who were burned to death I almost feel ashamed to wear the sling. You see, Helen, it was the smoking car that took fire. The injured were all men. Had there been women or children it would have been even worse," he shuddered.

All this time Julia Collins had stood quietly listening. Now she remarked:

"I heard of the accident and went down to the station. When I heard it was the train on which George was expected I waited for the special. I felt sure he would be glad to have some one to bring him home."

"It was kind of you. Thank you!" I returned, "I also went to the station, but I could not endure the wait with people looking on. Naturally you would not be as concerned as I was, nor feel the same at being in a crowd." I knew by her expression that I had scored.

To-morrow—Mrs. Collins Is Angered.

TROUBLED WITH CONSTIPATION
From 16 to 20

If the bowels are properly looked after there will be no constipation, jaundice, sick or bilious headaches, heartburn, coated tongue, sour stomach, floating specks before the eyes, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will keep your bowels so regulated that in no time the constipation will disappear entirely.

Miss Emma E. Melanson, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I am now 20 years of age, and since I was 16 I have been greatly troubled with constipation, so much so that at times I would be in bed 3 or 4 days a month. I tried all the old-fashioned remedies, castor oil, cascara, etc., with only temporary relief, until my sister-in-law gave me some of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. From the first they seemed beneficial, and I gave them a fair trial. This was two years ago, and with an occasional dose I have kept entirely free from constipation for the period mentioned."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

COLD ICE CREAM.

The More Fat in the Cream the Longer the Cold Taste Lasts.

An odd application of a very abstract principle of physics is to control at will the cold taste of ice cream. If an ice cream manufacturer wishes to have his ice cream taste cold a long time he can do so by making simple changes in the cream mixture he freezes, the actual temperature of the frozen cream having little to do with it. The scheme has been worked out by chemists of the Iowa State college.

The scientific principle is that of specific heats. The specific heat of an article is the intensity of heat needed to raise its temperature a given number of degrees or, in effect, the rapidity with which the article saps up heat. Water is taken as the standard and scientists know the specific heat of most substances compared with water. These chemists carefully worked out the specific heat of milk, cream and various other dairy products, discovering that pure cream has a low specific heat and that fatty substances do not take up heat so quickly and effectively as does water.

This explains why sherbets and other ices taste so cold when they first reach the mouth, but do not give the cold taste long. They have a high specific heat and quickly take up heat from the mouth, then melt.

With ice cream the more fat there is in the formula the lower the specific heat. Accordingly a very fat cream will not taste disagreeably cold at first, but a spoonful of ice cream in the mouth will maintain its cold taste longer. Thus the cold taste can be controlled by the amount of fat used.—Saturday Evening Post.

Ten Dollars a Leak.

"And when my day's work is through," said the fat plumber, "there is nothing I enjoy so much as drop, plop off to sleep and dreaming."

"And what are your favorite dreams?" asked the bosom friend.

"Why, pipe dreams."—Philadelphia Record.

COLOSSAL SIRIUS.

This Monster Star Is About Forty Times Bigger Than Our Sun.

The more that is learned about the giant suns of space the more wonderful they appear. The biggest to our eyes of these great supersuns is the dog star, Sirius. It equals probably thirty or forty suns like the one that makes our daylight.

The speed of light gives a ready means of comparing the distances of the sun and of Sirius, and upon the difference between those distances depends the fact that, although Sirius is in reality so much greater than the sun, it looks relatively insignificant.

Light takes about eight and a half minutes to come to us from the sun. But it takes about eight and a half years to come from Sirius!

As a minute is to a year, so is the distance of the sun to that of Sirius.

In other words, the great dog star is about 526,000 times as far away as is the sun.

But the brightness of any shining object diminishes in proportion to the square of the increase of its distance. Accordingly if Sirius were actually just as bright as the sun it ought to appear 526,000x526,000, or 276,676,000,000 times fainter than the sun to our eyes. But measurement of its light shows that it appears only about 7,000,000,000 times fainter than the sun, from which immediately follows the conclusion that its actual brightness must exceed the sun's about forty times.—Garrett P. Serviss in Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Many Jacks.

Jack is not only a boy's name. It is applied to a flower—"Jack in the pulpit." "Jack Frost" means the cold, biting winds, and a "jack" is a machine to lift heavy weights. Then there are a "bootjack" for removing boots from the feet; a "smoke jack" to turn a spit; a "jackanapes," applied to a saucy person; "Jack Tar," a common sailor, and a "jacket," a small coat. Jackstay is a rail used on a boat to which to fasten sails. Jackstone is a pebble piece used in the game of that name, jackstraw is a scarecrow, and jackwood is wood of the jack used in cabinet work.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Master at Arms.

A master at arms is a petty officer in the navy who forms one of the police of a ship. In the United States navy there are four grades of masters at arms—chief master at arms and master at arms of the first, second and third class. Large vessels have one chief and several of the lower ratings. In small ships a first or second class master at arms is the chief of the ship's police.—Boston Globe.

JAPAN'S DARING WHALERS.

They Risk Drowning to Escape the Infuriated Animal's Tail.

Many of the Japanese whalemen are most expert and daring men. After a whale has been cornered, harpooned and is slowly giving out from exhaustion the nimble expert of the whaling crew must prove his mettle.

The skilled Jap, after jumping upon the animal's back and cutting two gashes in the head, one on each side, through which a rope must be run and tied, cannot always perform his work in one trial. Often the animal makes a deep dive. But the little Jap must hold fast to his quarry and dive also, trusting to his fates that his own air supply in his lungs will last as long as the whale's.

The Jap is safer from being drowned than from being crushed by the infuriated animal's tail. If the little Jap let go it usually means death, so he hangs on to the diving quarry. Frequently these whalemen lose their lives from drowning, but the members of their crew look upon this misfortune with something of a fatalistic regard.

But the main business in hand is the capture of the whale. As the fight progresses and the maddened, frightened animal grows weaker and finally is dying the boat crews row closer to the body and pray for the ease of the departing spirit. Members of the crew will call out the words "Joraku, Joraku, Joraku!" and on the third day after the animal has been hauled ashore a service is held and prayers offered for the animal's future contentment in spirit.

As soon as the animal has been towed to the shore line he is cut up, the Japs making huge excavations and penetrating inside the animal's body as though entering a mine shaft or gallery and eventually making their exit, all covered with blood. It is a grewsome sight, but is looked upon purely as a matter of course among the Jap whalemen.—Exchange.

Germany's Uhlans.

The uhlan hussar was borrowed from the Polish military system. Uhlan means simply lancer. Hussar is a word that comes from the language of the Hungarians, meaning twenty. It commemorates the time when every group of twenty men in the kingdom was required to furnish one cavalryman. So it means the representative of twenty men. The word dates from the time of Mathias Corvinus, when in national Hungarian levies every twenty men had to furnish one fully equipped horseman, who, in accordance with the fact, was called "hussar."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Sun Burned Skin

You want a healthy summer tan. But sometimes you get it too quickly and then there is a few days of suffering.

The application of Dr. Chase's Ointment takes out the stinging and burning and leaves the skin delightfully soft and smooth.

Because it is equally effective in relieving stings of insects and ivy poisoning as well as chafing and skin irritations it is invaluable in the summer camp.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Triple Proposal

By ETHEL VANDEVEER

Jimmie Twining awoke at half-past three in the afternoon of New Year's day, yawned, turned over, slept a few minutes more, then woke up for good. He had gone to bed at two o'clock in the morning, after seeing the old year out and the new year in. Jimmie had a special weakness for making love.

The butler opened the door cautiously and seeing that Jimmie was awake, entered the room and advanced to the bed with a note in his hand. Jimmie opened it and read:

"Dearest Jimmie:

"I cannot wait a moment longer without saying to you that last night, or this morning, you made me the happiest girl in the world. I am dying to see you again; not in the whirl of last night, but in our cozy library at home, and tell you in a more formal way that I return your love and shall gladly be your wife.

"Your own loving,

"Clara."

Jimmie was disturbed. He remembered sitting in a window seat with Clara Robbins, talking "maudlin'" to her, as he expressed it, when others entered the room and interrupted the tete-a-tete. But he had no remembrance of a proposal. While he was vainly trying to recall what he had said to her the butler came in with another note.

"I thought there was no mail delivery today, Ben," said Jimmie.

"There isn't, sah," replied Ben. "These notes was brought to the house by messengers."

Jimmie opened the second note and read:

"Dear Mr. Twining:

"I send this little note to say that I feel highly honored at your flattering words last evening, and regret that in such gay company I was prevented from making a suitable reply. I will say now, however, that if a week hence you are of the same mind, I will give you a favorable reply.

"Sincerely yours,

"Kathryn Ruggles."

"Well," said Jimmie lugubriously, "if there are no more of them I at least have an opportunity to settle with one before the week of probation ends. I'll get up, refresh myself with a bath, then proceed to think out a plan by which to extricate myself from this muddle."

Jimmie did a lot of thinking over the matter, but no plan occurred to him that would cancel his proposals without discredit to himself. He took no action till the next morning, when he resolved to go see Miss Clara Robbins, and trust to luck for an outcome. After breakfast he telephoned Clara Robbins, asking her when it would be convenient for her that he should call upon her. She named eight o'clock the same evening.

During the afternoon he received a note by mail from Miss Amy Brown, indicating that he had made a third proposal of marriage on the same occasion as the others.

If a man owes a hundred dollars he can't pay, it worries him. If he owes a hundred thousand with no funds to meet his debt, he accepts the situation as inevitable. It was so with Twining. So long as he supposed he had engaged himself to one girl he was very much troubled, when he discovered that he had engaged himself to three he considered himself a matrimonial bankrupt and his peace of mind was in a measure restored to him.

He set out after dinner to tackle Clara Robbins with a rose in his button hole, and a cigarette between his lips. What he would say to her he did not know. He must be guided by circumstances, and he was conscious of possessing an adroitness suitable to the occasion.

But circumstances were unfavorable to a happy issue. He found Miss Robbins alone in the drawing room and in the beginning refrained from mentioning the subject between them. Just as he was about to do so there was a ring at the door-bell, and who should be ushered in but Miss Brown, who, by the way, was a chum of Miss Robbins. Miss Brown looked very conscious at seeing Mr. Twining, and there was constraint over all.

Though Jimmie was somewhat taken aback by Miss Brown's coming he was relieved for the moment; since the subject matter of his call could not be discussed with a third person present. General conversation ensued for a short time, when another guest arrived in the person of Kathryn Ruggles.

Miss Ruggles was the spark that caused an explosion. She regarded him contemptuously:

"Mr. Twining," she said. "I have concluded to end a certain matter between us now and here. It is not necessary to wait a week. Your proposal is declined."

"What proposal?" asked Miss Brown.

"What proposal?" asked Miss Robbins.

Well, it was all out that Jimmie had proposed to the three of them. They attacked him in force, and Jimmie tried to escape. But Miss Robbins locked the door on him and he found himself called upon to decide between them. He took a coin from his pocket to toss for a decision; whereupon the girls burst into a laugh, and the farce was over.

The Best Habit In The World

is the habit of health. The way to get it is to train your bowels, through the liver, to act naturally, at a fixed time, every day.

Take one pill regularly (more only if necessary) until you succeed. Then you can stop taking them, without trouble or annoyance.

This has been the good-health-rule for 50 years.

HINDU EGG DANCE.

Curious and Difficult Feat Performed by Girl Jugglers.

Of the many wonderful feats performed by Hindu jugglers one of the most remarkable is the egg dance. Usually it is executed by a girl fantastically dressed. She makes use of a willow wheel, around which at equal distances are threads, and at the end of each thread there is a noose held open by a bead.

This wheel the girl places on her head, while she carries a basket of eggs on her arm. When the music strikes up she begins to dance, and the wheel begins to spin around. She then takes an egg from the basket, places it in one of the thread nooses and throws it from her with sufficient force to draw the knot tight. The spinning of the wheel keeps the thread stretched with the egg at the end of it.

She then takes another egg from the basket, places it in another noose and repeats this until there is an egg in every noose. Her fantastic costume, her perfect motion and all the eggs swinging on stretched threads at once present a curious sight.

It requires much art to execute the dance, for one false step would cause the eggs to be dashed together and the dancer to be disgraced.

After dancing for some time with all the eggs swinging round her head she takes them out of the noose one by one, all the time keeping the wheel balanced and in motion, and again places them in the basket on her arm.

After the performance the spectators are allowed to examine the eggs to see that they are real.—London Ideas.

He Loved Nature.

Ruskin's injunction to his servants, "Call me from my study whenever there is a beautiful sunset or any unusual appearance in the sky or landscape."

Artesian Wells.

Until the settlers in the rolling downs in western Queensland found out that they could get water by means of artesian wells they were seriously thinking of giving up their farms and ranches on account of many successive years of drought. Now there are several hundred such wells in Queensland, from which the settlers get an unfailing supply of water. The deepest well, which is at Bimerah, has a depth of 5,045 feet. The shallowest well, at Manfred Downs, has a depth of ten feet. The well at Charleville is 1,371 feet deep and produces 3,000,000 gallons a day, the largest flow in the state. The daily flow from all the artesian wells of Queensland is estimated at over half a billion gallons.

There With the Answer.

In a public school one afternoon the teacher was instructing a class in physiology, and finally, in order to test the memory of the youngsters, she closed the book and began to ask questions.

"Willie," said she, addressing a bright faced boy near the head of the class, "can you give me a familiar example of the human body as it adapts itself to changed conditions?"

"Sure!" was the confident rejoinder. "My uncle Jake gained fifty pounds in less than one year, and his skin never cracked."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

The Buffalo's Hump.

The hump of the buffalo is not a mass of fat, as some people suppose, but is formed by neural spines in length fully double those of domestic cattle, and by the huge muscles which lie alongside and fill up the angle between these neural spines and the ribs.

Hair Dressing.

LEMON JUICE TAKES OFF TAN

Girls! Make bleaching lotion if skin is sunburned, tanned or freckled

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle, sunburn and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very, small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons, and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of Orchard White for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles, sunburn, windburn and tan disappear, and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

The Farmer Must Be Trained.

Today the advanced tiller of the soil must come up to his calling as fully equipped for service as the lawyer, the editor, the doctor, the captain of industry, for the curious fact has developed that the calling in which the unlettered and untrained man was once supposed to have as good a chance as the educated one is now the calling in which wide and varied knowledge is as imperative as is almost any other known among men.—W. S. Harwood.

MAKE YOUR STORAGE PREPARATIONS.

Plan for your winter storage of vegetables now: Remember that you did not plant your war garden merely for the amount of fresh vegetables you were going to have this summer but for the continuous supply you hoped to have all the year round.

The vegetables you use next winter are going to be of the utmost importance in the conservation of meat and wheat. You will need all that you can dry or can or store. A woman's patriotism may be measured in these days by the state of her cellar, her pantries and her ice-box.

By the time the war gardens have ceased yielding up the good things of the earth every housekeeper should have well-stocked pantry shelves and a good supply of fresh winter vegetables stored in her cellar.

In the past there has been too much preventable wastage though lack of proper storage facilities. See that this does not happen again. Better spend a little money now in making proper preparations which will be of permanent value than allow any food to go to waste.

We must supplement our commercial stores of food more and more with home canned, dried and stored products and it is to her women that Canada looks for this patriotic service.

ECZEMA ON BABY'S EAR

Mrs. F. Clarke, Belmont, Man., writes: "My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad and nothing seemed to do her very much good. Hearing of the remarkable cure Dr. Chase's Ointment was making, we sent for some, and after the third application the sore began to heal. I am glad to say that it is quite well now and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's Ointment. We cannot recommend it's preparation too highly."

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigour and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by McDermid & Jury and by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION:—Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

SPEECH AND THE CHIN.

Maybe at One Time the Tongue Proved Mightier Than the Teeth.

In man the chin seems to project more and more as he progresses toward his modern civilized condition. This must imply that immediately the huge lower canines degenerated the part took on some other function of vital importance to the race and that the need has increased with his intellectual and social advancement.

My theory, then, is that the chin is essentially a part of the mechanism of articulate speech.

It is tempting to theorize a little further and to suggest that the human chin perhaps bears testimony to a prehistoric change from carnal weapons to others which, if not exactly spiritual, were such as appealed to the part of us where spiritual forces work, for apparently long ago before the pen proved mightier than the sword the tongue proved mightier than the teeth.

If one could only prove this one might show that even before the glacial epoch parliamentary institutions (using the terms in its widest sense) began to take the place of lethal weapons in settling disagreements and that the substitution of arbitration for war is not merely a doctrine of latter day moralists, but is a part of the ordered march of cosmic progress as inevitable as the other evolutionary changes which have brought us up from among the brutes. — Dr. Louis Robinson in North American Review.

tanks were finally shipped it was generally believed that they were going to Petrograd.

"In the final days of the construction of the tanks 700 sentries, in three cordons, were thrown around the field in which stood the tanks. Matters were so arranged that the sentries of the outside cordon were not even aware what was going on inside. It was shortly before the first of the tanks were shipped to France, in September, 1915, that a Zeppelin hovered over the tanks one night. The Zepp, however, came accidentally, and as they did not throw a searchlight to the earth the secret was never discovered. Its crew, accordingly, departed without knowing how close they have come to making a great discovery."

MANIFESTO ISSUED

Canadian Press:

PARIS, June 2.— A despatch from Kiev, under date of Wednesday, June 26th, declares that the report of the assassination by Bolsheviki of the former Emperor Nicholas of Russia has been confirmed. It is declared he was killed by Bolesheviki troops during their retreat on Yekatorinburg.

The Ukraine Bureau at Lausanne says that the Bolsheviki condemned Nicholas Romanoff, former Russian Emperor, to death after a short trial and then shot him. Details of the reported execution are lacking.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, June 2.— American action as to Russia will occur soon. The first step will probably be the dispatch of a commission to Russia to check up on the Russian needs and desires, with power to act hereon.

Woman Abused By Four Youths

Utterly Devoid of Respect—Were Fined Two Dollars Each In Court

Four boys, from 14 to 16 years old, were each fined two dollars in police court this morning for annoying and abusing an Ashburnham woman whose husband is at Kingston and sons overseas.

Near the corner of Euclid and Concession street she was grazing a horse along the street on Wednesday of last week. These boys threw stones, called the woman names threw dust in her face and otherwise exhibited a shocking lack of respect. They were severely reprimanded by the Magistrate, and will find more serious punishment waiting them if they return for any charge like this one.

GERMANY CANNOT PAY ANY MORE PENSIONS FOR CONSIDERABLE TIME

Notification Comes With "Last" Remittance to Jailbird.

KINGSTON, June 27.—A day of so ago S. J. Rodger of this city, acting for the Netherlands, a convict in the Portsmouth penitentiary, the equivalent of about $300, being his pension from the German army, of which he had been a member for German authorities that this would probably be the last installment which Kessler would receive for some time, owing to the fact that money was fast becoming short in Germany.

Kessler was among the Germans interned in Fort Henry early in the war, and gave considerable trouble to the guards, finally assaulting one of them so severely that he was landed behind the bars at Portsmouth for his offence. He has still some time to serve there.

RUSSIA WILL BE RESTORED

Kerensky Feels Confident That Russia Will Join the Allies

AMERICA'S AID

(United Press.)
(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, June 27.—Alexander Kerensky, the Russian man of destiny, told friends to-day that there are definite indications that order will be speedily re-established in Russia with the aid of the Allies and America, resulting in the creation of an east front against Germany. He said he is positive Russia is ready to join the Allies as soon as the yoke of Bolshevikism is thrown off. There were disorderly scenes at the labour conference to-day when Kerensky and other foreign delegates were introduced. British representatives protested and questioned Kerensky's credentials. Eventually the chairman was allowed to welcome them.

REFUGEES FROM PARIS FIND COLD WELCOME.

Country Towns Offer Scant Accommodation and Food is Higher Than in Capital.

PARIS, June 27.—The misguided people who for one reason or another fled from Paris under the pressure of recent events quickly found reason to regret the bad example they set to the vast majority of inhabitants.

Prices had been fixed by the Food Controller for milk, meat, bread and other supplies, and they found it impossible to procure the necessaries of life except at a much higher cost than in the capital, while terms for hotel accommodation in many districts now beat all records. Where formerly a room cost $1 a night, four times as much is now demanded.

Similar conditions obtain in nearly all provincial towns owing to the enormous influx of the working and professional classes engaged in munition and kindred industries connected with the war. The increase of the population in some of these towns is phenomenal. The population of Bordeaux has risen since the war began from 200,000 to over 325,000, and its suburbs from 88,000 to 120,000. Marseilles, which had a population of 600,000 in 1914, now numbers over 1,000,000.

Other towns which show similar increases are Lyons, 530,000 to 470,000; Toulouse and St. Etienne, each 150,000 to 210,000; Nice, 142,000 to 180,000; Havre, 136,000 to 199,000; Angouleme, 35,000 to 55,000; Morland, 72,000 to 110,000; Lemans, 69,000 to 98,000; Tours, 67,000 to 100,000.

Most of these increases are due to the influx of Colonial, British and American non-military elements imported for war work plus large numbers of refugees driven out from the invaded districts in the north. All these naturally are regarded as excusable immigrants, but the same view is not always taken in regard to well-to-do fugitives whose nervousness has caused them to take refuge well to the south and west of Paris. Many of these had to come back to Paris through sheer inability to find suitable accommodation.

APPOINTMENT FOR MR. W. F. O'CONNOR

Formerly Head of the Cost of Living Branch Slated For Position.

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 27.—It is rumoured that W. F. O'Connor, K.C., formerly head of the Cost of Living Branch of the Labour Department, will be appointed clerk of the Crown in Chancery, and that James J. Foley, present holder of the position, will be superannuated.

Mr. O'Connor was general returning officer at the last election and as such was compelled to master an enormous quantity of technical electoral law. He is at present connected with the Justice Department in the preparation of orders-in-Council and the interpretation of legislation.

KING GEORGE "WORKING OUT" FOR BALL GAME

NEW YORK, June 28.—An Associated Press despatch from London to-day says:

"King George is learning to throw a baseball for his appearance at the game between American teams on July Fourth, when he will pitch out the first ball.

"At the request of the King, Arlie Latham, a former big league player, who will umpire the Fourth of July game, sent the King a regulation baseball a few days ago. The next day Latham called at the palace and gave his Majesty a brief lesson as to how the baseball should be handled. The proper form in pitching was rather hard for the King to get, as he is used to a different type of throw, as in cricket, but the Royal student finally began to get something approaching the right swing."

FARMERS HELD A SUCCESSFUL PICNIC AT WALLACE'S POINT

The Event Was Arranged by the Farmers' Clubs of South Monaghan and Cavan

THE SPEAKERS

The farmers' picnic held yesterday afternoon at Wallace's Point in Otonabee proved an outstanding success. It was arranged by the South Monaghan and Cavan Club of Centreville. Representatives were present also from the Fairmount, Stewart's Hall and Falls Line Clubs.

The speeches proved one of the outstanding features of the afternoon. The speakers were Mr. Thornton, ex.-M.P., of East Durham, Jas. Simpson, ex.-Controller of the city of Toronto and well-known labour leader of Toronto, who leaves in a few days to take part in a temperance campaign in New Zealand. Rev. Mr. McConachie and Mr. R. W. E. Burnaby, President of the United Farmers' Co-operative Company, Limited. The speeches lasted until 6.30 and were followed with great interest. The speakers endeavored to show that the reports appearing in the daily papers of the recent farmers' meetings in Ottawa and Toronto did not give a true representation of what was done and said at the meetings. Statements made by extremists at the conventions and which were not given serious consideration by the meetings played up in the Toronto papers as though they were the sentiment of the whole meeting. This had created a false impression in the country which was calculated to mislead the city people more than the country people.

Lunch was served on the splendid grounds at Wallace's Point after while an interresting baseball match was held. The committee in charge deserves great credit for the success of the occasion. It was composed of President H. S. Donaldson, J. C. McRoberts, E. E. Anderson and C. Wicks.

HAS PICTURE OF U. S. CAMP CUSTER

Mr. W. H. Meldrum has received from his daughter, Mrs. H. Greene, a composite picture of Camp Custer, the big United States military camp near Kalamazoo, Mich. Mr. Green is now Chief of the State Life Insurance Company, for Michigan, with headquarters at Kalamazoo.

Two of Mrs. Greene's cousins are with the 85th battalion at Camp Custer and expect to go overseas at any time now. The camp has accommodation for 30,000 men, and is literally a city in itself, with fire department, hospital and ambulance section, central heating plant, sewerage system, and all the facilities found in a modern city. Men who have completed their training, leave the camp often during the night, and usually unannounced, but their places are immediately filled by new drafts. And this is only one of the big camps Uncle Sam has scattered over his country for the big job of training his sons "to lick the Kaiser."

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, June 27.— The Associated Press war summary says today: Along the western battle line, as well as on the mountain and Piave sectors of the Italian front, the Allied armies await further enemy efforts. Infantry activity is confined to local actions at various points.

It is believed that the German command is about ready to launch another stroke against the Allied lines. The artillery activity remains abnormal on important sectors, and aerial fighting has increased. Thirty-six German machines were brought down or forced to land in a damaged condition on Tuesday by Franco-British airmen, while Berlin claims the destruction of 12 Allied airplanes on the same day. The German airplanes raided Paris Wednesday night. There is much sickness prevalent among the German troops, but this is not believed to be having any effect on the plans of the enemy offensive.

MOST OF THE FIGHTING IS NOW CONFINED TO MOUNTAIN SECTORS ON ITALIAN FRONT

Italians Have Improved Their Positions--A Further Advance of the Italians Would Expose Their Flanks to the Bulk of the Enemy's Reserves---Local Action Reported

OFFENSIVE IS SLOWING UP

Canadian Press:

ROME, June 27.—An Austrian advanced post in the mountain region was surprised by Italian troops yesterday and wiped out, the War Office announced to-day. Along the front as a whole, activity yesterday was nowhere marked in intensity.

ITALIAN ARMIES IN THE FIELD, June 27.—Most of the fighting is now confined to the mountain sector, on both sides of the Brentz river. The Italians are improving their positions there, for as long as the Austrians hold their present line in that sector, an Italian advance across the Piave would leave their flanks and rear communications exposed to the bulk of the enemy's reserves in the upper Brentz and the upper Piave valley.

It is reported that Emperor Karl presided at the final council of war and decided on the Austrian withdrawal across the Piave.

Kerensky Was Not Invited

His Unexpected Appearance in England Raises Many Important Questions Concerning Russia

(By Ed. L. Keen—United Press Service.)

LONDON, June 27.—The Drastic and unexpected appearance of Alexander Kerensky at the Labour party conference yesterday raised many questions concerning his future actions and his connection with the Allied policy toward Russia, which may be explained in his speech before the conference today.

The Mail says the Government did not invite Kerensky to England, but that he asked the right of entry as a private citizen.

Allied Intervention.

"However" continued the the Mail, "it is wondered whether Kerensky brought an invitation for Allied intervention from the Russian Socialists. It is reliably reported that Kerensky favours intervention by all the Allies—even though one country furnishes most of the troops—with the idea of Fighting Germany" while not interfering with Russia's international affairs. Kerensky is said to believe that Allied intervention will unite the present waring factors opposed to the Bolsheviki, and is reported to have intimated that Russian military assistance is possible, if it is used in a defensive way.

Great Savings At M. Fine's Moving Sale

Friday and Saturday will be the two last days that Mr. Fine will do business in his old store, opposite Barries. On Monday he takes possession of his large newly fitted establishment, in the premises formerly occupied by E. B. Clegg & Co. During these last two days Mr. Fine announces remarkable values all over the store—a general "slump" in the prices on all ready-to-wear garments and general dry goods. This is an opportunity—for thrifty people to secure their household needs at half price and less in many cases. See the large advertisement on another page. When prices are high and steadily advancing these bargains should crowd the store to-morrow and Saturday. Mr. Fine prefers to sell everything at a sacrifice price than move the goods.

SPEECH ADMITS ENEMY FAILURE

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 27.—W. M. Hughes, Premier of Australia, speaking before the Chamber of Commerce today, declared that Von Kuehlmann's speech is a clear admission that the vaunted German offensive is barren of gains, and that America's yar effort has surprised and dismayed Germany.

Regulations Are Not Observed

Food Board Issues Warning to Churches and Other Organizations Regarding Picnics

Canadian Press:

OTTAWA, June 27. — The Canada Food Board has called attention to the fact that the new regulations applied to sandwiches, etc., and excursions are not being observed as strictly as they should. In an announcement by the Board to-day churches and other organizations are reminded of these regulations. Copies of exact orders in this regard have been placed in the hands of the police of every community and regulations must be studied by those in charge of such events and observed absolutely.

The Food Board also calls attention to the fact that many boarding houses and other establishments required to be licensed by July 1st have not yet sent in their applications.

Dr. McNulty's Sister Dead In St. Catharines

ST. CATHARINES, June 24. — Death has removed one of St. Catharines' widely-known and popular young mothers, in the person of Genevieve Barbara, wife of Major George B. Begy, who was wounded in the early part of the war in the battle of Ypres. A young son, born a few days ago to Mr. and Mrs. Begy, was named after Colonel Birchall of the 4th Battalian, who was killed at the Ypres engagement, and who had been an intimate friend of Major Begy. Mrs. Begy was a graduate of St. Joseph's Convent, Toronto. She was active in local Red Cross and other patriotic efforts.

Mrs. Begy was a sister of Dr. F. P. McNulty of this city, and had quite a number of friends in Peterborough. Major Begy was one of the speakers at a patriotic meeting held in the Armouries here while the 93rd Battalion was recruiting.

A display of shirts that will stand innumerable visits to the laundry and retain their pristine freshness and coloring. There are quieter shirts too for the more conservative taste — "Come to me."

Peterboro' Deputy Registrar Secures Information Concerning Registrants

The Penalties and Inconveniences Are For Those Who Have Evaded the Law.

CLAUSE 37

One of the Deputy Registrars, who was called upon for a good many answers to questions during registration week, got into correspondence with the Board over the matter of a workman who is engaged in work in which he is very likely to lose or wear out his certificate in a short time, and received the following letter which explains itself. One of the points brought out is that when a workman has changed from his working clothes to his down town clothes it is absolutely necessary to have his certificate with him. The letter follows, also a copy of clause 37, referred to:

THE LETTER.

Office of the Canada Registration Board.
Ottawa, Canada,
24th June, 1918.

Dear Sir,—Your letter of the 22nd inst., to hand.

I would draw your attention to Section 37 of the Registration Regulations, which states: "Every person who shall have registered shall at all times thereafter carry upon his person his registration certificate.... and if any person so required shall without reasonable excuse, etc."

It would seem to me that the circumstances related by you would be a reasonable excuse and would justify the workman not carrying his registration certificate to and from his work. He will not be required each day by his employer to produce his certificate. The employer having once satisfied himself that the workman has registered will not require its further production. He will not be required to produce it on any tramcar, and the only time during the day at which he might be required to show it would be if he bought a lunch at a public eating house. This would not affect a very great many, as workmen generally carry their lunch or else go home at noon time. It is not intended that registration shall be irksome or interfere in the slightest way with those who have done as required. The penalties and inconveniences are for those who have evaded the law.

CLAUSE 37.

Every person who shall have registered shall at all times thereafter carry upon his person his registration certificate, and shall produce it for inspection upon reasonable demand to any peace officer, police officer or constable;who may in particular without limiting the generality of this section, require any person present or attending at any public assembly, place of public resort or entertainment, ticket or telegraph office, or post office, or being in or upon any car, train or steamboat, to produce his registration certificate upon that occasion; and if any person so required shall, without reasonable excuse, refuse, neglect or fail to produce his registration certificate, he shall incur a penalty of twenty dollars, and may, if a male person, be taken immediately before a justice of the peace to be dealt with according to law.

SUPERVISION OF HEALTH.

The suggestion of the Council of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario that there should be state supervision of health in Canada seems to be timely in view of the fact as pointed out by the resolution that the medical examination of the manhood of Canada for military service, revealed a very serious percentage of unfit. It is stated that this percentage varied from 40 to 70 per cent. The figures were surprising, in view of the fact that the men examined were between the ages of twenty and thirty-five. The examinations revealed a condition of affairs that calls for some form of supervision, and the Dominion and Provincial Governments, to whom the resolution of the doctors is to be sent, should not be content to dispose of it by merely placing it in a pigeon-hole.

THE HURON LIBERALS.

The proceedings of the conventions of Huron Liberals, who revolt against Mr. Proudfoot, and resolve that Laurier was right, indicate apparently a disposition of the Liberals of Ontario to return to their party allegiance, points out the Weekly Sun. The causes are not obvious. Not the least of them is the neglect of the government to explain and justify its measures to the people. No one denies the necessity of arbitrary measures in time of war, but even a Unionist Government of the best intentions is still a Government dependent on the popular favour, which it is the duty of statesmanship, especially at this time, to hold by the ordinary methods of consultation. A remarkable spectacle is that of Mr. Borden, attended by five of his Ministers, boasting of his measures to the public of London, while he neglects completely the duty of justifying them to the public at home.

TOURIST ACCOMMODATION.

"With the restaurants closed, and no gasoline available, we would have no one here on Sundays."—Ald Jones.

"We desire to provide accommodation for tourists."—Mayor Duncan.

Are these remarks made at the meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council the other night to be considered as evidence of a change of heart on the part of the City Fathers in regard to the restaurant restrictions? Mayor Duncan's reference to accommodation for tourists is important because under the existing order of things Peterboro offers about as little accommodation on Sunday as a cross-roads village. A party of tourists arriving here a few minutes after the regular meal hour at the hotels would find the restaurants rigidly closed and no refreshments available. This is not a condition of affairs that will advertise Peterboro as a wideawake, progressive city, and the council would do well at their regular meeting next Tuesday night to reconsider the question and revise the bylaw. There never has been any demand for the restrictions placed on the restaurants, and their removal would be generally applauded.

VICTORY BREAD.

As a result of the new regulations passed by the Canada Food Board, the Canadian people are going to have an opportunity of tasting real war bread. Officially it is to be known as Victory Bread, and after the fifteenth of next month a label bearing that title, and also the name and address of the baker must be placed on every loaf of bread sold in Canada.

The regulation just put in force makes it necessary to use one pound of substitute to every ten pounds of white, a standard wheat flour from July 1st to July 15th, and after the latter date the proportion of substitutes to be used will be increased to one pound for every four pounds of wheat flour used. Substitutes are defined by the order as "pure and wholesome corn, oats, barley, rice, rye, buckwheat, tapioca or potato flour, bran, shorts, oatmeal, rolled oats, corn meal, corn starch, homing, corn grits, rye meal, rice, tapioca or any mixture of the same and potatoes, four pounds of the latter being considered equal to one pound of the other substitutes.

The drastic order of the Food Board will emphasize the need of conserving the stock of Canadian wheat so that as much as possible may be sent overseas, especially during the next few months, when the food situation in the allied countries will be at its worst. If the people of Canada will not refrain as much as possible from eating white bread, and it is feared that outside of restaurants and hotels, where the supply is limited by regulations, the saving has not been nearly as large as it should have been, the new order will make an amount of saving necessary by cutting down the amount of flour used in the bread.

The chief difficulty in regard to the new regulation seems to be to secure the substitute flour—in fact it is stated that there is a shortage in Canada and the result may be another boost in the cost of living unless government price fixing is adopted. The price of wheat flour is fixed, but so far there is no restriction in regard to the substitutes; and with the necessary greater demand, some step will have to be taken to protect the public. Not only are the bakers affected by the order, but the housewife as well will find a difference, because it is provided that after July 15th people must buy one pound of substitute flour to every two pounds of wheat flour.

The housewife may have to learn new methods of baking as a result of the change, but it is pointed out that the mixing of one-tenth substitute for wheat flour into a mass of dough should not prove difficult and the practice obtained in the first two weeks of July will enable women to meet the one-fifth requirement after July 15th.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The German people are said to be becoming more and more frightened at the allied airplanes. Well, they can blame their own aviators for the rain of death from the skies.

Just to let the Huns know that they are still in France, Canadian troops strolled over to the German trenches and brought back 22 prisoners, six machine guns and a trench mortar.

Yesterday was the anniversary of the landing of the first American division in France, and the number of Sammies has increased in a year from one division to 900,000. And more are landing every week.

Canadians are sometimes inclined to lose sight of what the Greeks are doing. It is announced that Greece will shortly have over 200,000 men in arms.

An Imperial authority responsible for the conduct of all soldiers in London, says the Canadians "are the finest behaved soldiers that we have to deal with."

The Toronto Globe remarks that judging from the number of airplanes being turned out in the United States, the Rhineland will be no tourists' resort next summer.

Canadians will be glad to hear of Major Bishop's appointment in England. Even the Huns will share in the rejoicing at the departure of the famous aviator.

Babe Ruth's ninth home run is overshadowed by the home run the Austrians are making.

His many friends in Peterboro will be interested in the announcement that Col. Beattie of Cobourg is returning from overseas to become Assistant Director of Chaplains.

The confession of Foreign Secretary Von Kuehlmann in the German Reichstag, that Germany cannot be certain of winning the war by force of arms, is said to have caused an atmosphere of gloom in Berlin, and to have weakened the exchange on Berlin and Vienna. British editors see no sign of the end in the speech of Dr. Kuehlmann.

WORTHY OF REWARD

A Hamilton duck fancier claims to have obtained two ducklings from one egg. Has the food controller no honorable award to fit production on this scale?

AS YOUNG AS THEY DRESS

(Vancouver Sun)

The W.C.T.U. wants the women of today to follow the examples of their grandmothers in the matter of dress. That will not tend altogether to improvement. Some of the grandmothers of today are as short on dress at both ends as the youngest of them.

THE PRICE OF PATRIOTISM

(Houston Post)

"How long" asks the inquisitive subscriber of Wharton, "must one wear his old clothes in order to help win the war?" It all depends upon where one lives and his environment. Personally, our rule is to wear them until the policeman tells us that we must either wear a linen duster, get our pants patched or stay at home.

ADMIRE HIS FRANKNESS

(Hamilton Herald)

It is very probable that Colonel Machin will have to be dismissed. Indeed, he says himself that what he has said will cause him to "lose his job". He has committed a breach of army regulations—an offence which cannot at such a time as this be overlooked.

But there are many who will admire him for his outspokenness and who will not hesitate to affirm that he is not the party who most deserves punishment.

GOOD SECURITY

(New York Sun)

It is impossible to imagine a safer loan than one to the Canadian people at the present time. Surely our bankers and our government itself can find some way to relieve the momentary stress upon our nearest ally and closest friend. It incolces no sacrifice, and is "good business." It is more than that: it is plain duty.

A CURIOUS FACT

(Rochester Post Express)

Curious, but you never hear of the German artillerists dropping bombs on breweries or distilleries.

AN UNREASONABLE RULE

(Hamilton Herald)

The rule requiring women to carry their registration receipts on their persons is unreasonable. There are no pockets in women's garments and it is not always convenient to carry one's shopping bag or purses around.

THE NEW GAME

(New York Tribune)

We must learn to place a new importance on small change, on nickles and pennies. Take care of the loose and wandering change! Buy and deny so that it grows. This is the new game America must learn. It can be of great value to each of us. Once learned it can be equally good fun.

SALE OF BEER TO BE PROHIBITED

Important Amendment Will be Submitted to the United States' Senate.

Canadian Press:

WASHINGTON, June 27.—The Senate Agricultural committee to-day agreed upon an amendment under which the manufacture and sale of whiskey and wine would be prohibited after June 30, 1919 and the manufacture and sale of beer three months after the final approval of the bill by the President. Chairman Gore said the bill, with the new amendment, would be reported to the Senate to-morrow and that an effort would be made to bring it up for consideration at once.

NINE-TENTHS OF RUSSIANS WANT ALLIES TO INTERVENE

Germans Are Getting Beyond Control and Russians Ask Why Allies Do Not Go To Their Assistance —People Are Demoralized and Helpless.

BREAD $2.50 A POUND

NEW YORK, June 26. — Herman Bernstein, editor of The American Hebrew, has returned from a trip to Russia, where he went last January to study conditions. He arrived here fully convinced that unless the Allies took immediate action by intervening to save Russia from the Germans they would lose the war. When asked about the conditions existing in Petrograd and Moscow, Mr. Bernstein said:

"Russia is broken down, wretched, demoralized and starving and waiting for some one stronger than herself to come and pick her up. Nine-tenths of the Russian people would welcome the advent of the Allies with open arms.

"The Bolsheviki and the other thieving tribes make up the other tenth of the population, and theirs would be the only opposition to the Allies, including Japan. They are nearly at the end of their rope. The Bolsheviki are composed chiefly of workmen and sailors, who are too ignorant or making too much money to object to the way Germany is getting control of their country. I tried to find Kerensky in Russia and in Norway, but could not get any tangible information regarding his movements. The Russian people blame him for not crushing the Bolsheviki when he had the opportunity.

Expect Allies to Come.

"It is nonsense to talk about the Russians not wanting the Allies to intervene. They would welcome them gladly. The people expect it and hope for it. A few divisions of allied troops arriving in Russia this Summer would bring the nation together again and make her an important factor in winning the war. The Bolsheviki were working with Germany before the revolution that overthrew the Czar.

"All the people were expecting Petrograd to be taken any day when I was there, and the Germans can have the city without difficulty whenever they feel disposed to seize it. There is no organized defense.

"Russia is looking for some kind of sane Government which would be accepted both by the educated and the working classes. There is an organization which has just been formed in Petrograd to bring this about, and has the support of all the people except the extremists. But without outside aid it is hard to do anything. Men are shot own in the streets of Moscow and Petrograd without trial by the agents of the Bolsheviki in order to strike terror into the hearts of the people and show that the Bolsheviki are still in power. A person who is arrested is liable to be killed before arriving at the police station. There are no courts of justice in Russia. People do not go out after 8 o'clock at night as they are liable to be robbed and killed by the bandits who infest the streets of the cities.

"The question asked everywhere I went in Russia was: 'Where are the Allies? Why don't they come here to help us?'

"If there is no intervention on the part of the Allies very shortly it will be too late," Mr. Bernstein continued, "as Russia will have been forced into the arms of Germany. In Moscow there was food, which was brought in from the country, but in Petrograd I could get nothing to eat except a little black bread, which cost $2.50 a pound. When I left America for Russia I had read numerous reports of conditions there, but now I return having satisfied myself that the intervention of the Allies is the only way in which Russia can be saved and the Germans defeated in the war."

Engineer Wants Intervention.

Vladmir Goriachkovsky, chief engineer of the new railway to Murmansk on Kola Bay, over which a few Russians have escape from the Bolsheviki, said he was convinced the Allies would lose the war unless they intervened in Russia speedily.

"In order to obtain her freedom and for her future existence as a nation Russia must fight Germany," he continued. "The Russians cannot fight alone, because any one who now tries to do so is likely to be killed by the Bolsheviki. The first thing to be done in Russia is to put the railroads in order so that communication with all parts of the country can be restored."

"The Murmansk railroad, which is 1,000 kilometres long," he added, "was in order and operating a month ago."

Mr. Goriachkavsky said he was very grateful for the material, rolling stock and locomotives sent from the United States to Kola, which enabled him to complete the construction of the railroad..

Another passenger on the liner was Baron Sergius Korff, former assistant to the Governor General of Finland, who has come here to join his wife, daughter of Rear Admiral van Reypen, U. S. N., retired. He said Russia needed a constitutional government on similar lines to that of the United States. The old regime was dead. Russia might have a Szar or a king, but no matter what form of government it was, the people would never submit to despotism again after they had got rid of the Bolsheviki. He remained in the service of the Governmnet until the Bolsheviki came into power.

Emil Henrichsen, who was a passenger with his wife on his way to Buenos Aires and is a British subject, said: "It is the opinion of people in Russia and in Sweden and Norway whom I have met that if the Allies do not intervene, Germany will win the war, as she will be able to obtain all the food products necessary to sustain the struggle." It would take 200,000 troops now to start the Russians back into the fighting line. Six months ago 50,000 could have accomplished the task easily, he said.

THE SALVATION ARMY ON THE BATTLEFIELD

Sister Madeline Has No Press Agent to Work For Her

She has no press agent, this Salvation Army lassie, and when the doughboys move up to the front line trench "over there' begrimed with dust and mud, they gaze in wonder at the poke-bonneted Martha awaiting them with her basket of doughnuts and bucket of coffee. "Sister Madeline," they call her, and they will tell you that this Martha of the battlefield has a heart that pulses 100 per cent. true to the call of service, let bullet and shell speed where they will—and more than one Sister Madeline has staggered through with crimsoned basket.

"I have just turned my pockets inside out, and the tambourine could hold much more, but it was all I had, and I am still in the debt of the Salvation Army. For what? you ask. For about all that I brought back of body and soul! For hot coffee and cookies when I was shivering like an aspen for buttons and patches on my tattered uniform; for steering me clear of the camp followers; the parasites that decimate the morale of the army; but more than all" and the veteran of some lively scramps with the Hun turned his softtening glance toward France and the American sector, "more than all, for the cheery word, for the solace of those gone west,' for the blessed face of a woman from the home-land in the midst of withering blight and desolation."

And so, Sister Madeline carries on! Unpressagented, her work almost unknown to those over here, but enshrined in the heart of each brave defender of the right "over there." And when the returns to his mansion or cottage, this crusader who fought to "keep the home fires burning," a paean of praise will be sung for Sister Madeline, the Martha of the battlefield.

POLICE WILL ENFORCE BY-LAWS

It is Against the Law For Private Citizens to Sprinkle the Streets With Water.

The police department is on the look-out for citizens who make a practice of breaking two of the by-laws, heedless of the warning issued every year and of the examples which have been made. Perhaps the more frequent one to be disregarded is that of washing windows. The by-law states: "The washing of windows with hose between the hours of 8 o'clock in the morning and 5 o'clock in the afternoon is prohibited, and sprinkling the streets with hose by private customers is forbidden unless permission is first obtained from the commissioners."

Hours For Garden Hose.

In regard to the sprinkling of lawns the by-law says: "No person or persons shall be allowed to sprinkle or use in any manner whatever, the water supplied for lawns, gardens, grass plots, boulevards or grounds of any description, except between the hours of 5 and 9 o'clock in the forenoon and 4 to 9 o'clock in the afternoon."

Failure to comply with the by-laws will be dealt with.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

BRIEF HINTS FOR CHOIR MEMBERS.

Sit erect. Lounging attitudes at rehearsals hinder the best results.

The public doesn't care whether the organist memorizes his music or not.

Have a copy of each anthem for each singer. The "sharing custom" is a bad one.

Little choirs should not attempt great anthems. Shouting and screaming in the church service are not the proper thing.

Every argument against "gowns" for choirs is over-balanced by two for them, exclusive of the erratic and gorgeous millinery.

Start practice sharp on time. It is not fair to those who come promptly to wait until a quarter past the hour for the stragglers.

The piano is a better instrument for rehearsals than the church organ because of its crisp, clean attack and the facility with which rhythm and accent can be obtained with it.

At the choir practice, do as much of the work unaccompanied as possible. If a choir can sing well without support, their work is finer and firmer when the organ accompaniment is added.

One authority gives it that for every twelve sopranos there should be nine or ten altos, six to eight tenors and eight to ten basses. From a quarter to a third of the bass section should be baritones to give power and brightness to notes of the upper range.

Said a choir leader: "In beginning the study of a new anthem I find it a good plan to go right through the whole piece at the first attempt to get the general outline and the spirit of it. At the first reading I pass by all mistakes such as false notes, wrong time, improper phrasing, etc. In some works it pays to run through the whole anthem this way two or three times that the piece may be grasped sufficiently to enable the singers to study the details with more intelligent relation to the whole.

THE GYPSIES' INFLUENCE.

It helps to appreciate some of the music of Liszt to know that as a boy this composer interested himself in gypsy music. Many happy days he spent going in and out among the bands of gypsies near the town in Hungary where he was born. During these days he stored away in his memory a great number of their melodies which eventually he used in his Hungarian Rhapsodies which are among Liszt's very best known works.

One one occasion a band of gypsies sent a boy to Liszt. The lad showed extraordinary talent for the violin. Liszt endeavoured to give him an education and make something of him but the boy turned out unmanageable and afterwards went back to his tribe who never ceased to be grateful to the great musician for his efforts on behalf of one of themselves. Among the books written by Liszt was a small work on Hungarian gypsy music.

THE COST OF LIVING AS IT AFFECTS MUSICIANS.

Aside from the fact that the general rise in the cost of living has affected musicians just as seriously as any other class of citizens it seems rather high-handed for an organization of theatre managers, dependent upon the amusement seeking public, to declare music a luxury and non-essential, just because their orchestras have taken it upon themselves to ask for a raise in salaries. Why not declare the products of scene painters, costumers, programme printers, electricians, etc., unessential because advances in salaries for services rendered has been asked for?

This question of music for those who stay at home is a serious and vital matter. Our civilian population must be provided with opportunities for relaxation and amusement and to this end nothing serves to better advantage than music in one form or another. Let us insist upon non-essentials if they are non-essentials, but let every one in a position to do so and in particular, music lovers and the public in general, register a distinct protest against the proposed and constant efforts of those who are endeavouring to have music and musical performances put into the luxury class.

Music should not be dispensed with or objected to on account of convenience, business reasons or because of thoughtless, war-time classifications. Music is a vital essential in the lives of hundreds of thousands of our citizens. To deny it would mean the taking away of one of our strongest and most desirable forces for the up-keep of our spirits, our powers of endurance, our patience, our belief in ultimate success and in depriving us of so many factors necessary for victory it would seem that in the end our enemies would be served and benefited to a much greater extent through such a purpose than we would.

FISH DINNER AND SUPPER WILL BE FEATURES OF T. A. S. PICNIC

Dominion Day Outing Offers Many Attractions—Good Boat Service —Athletic Events and Vaudeville Concert.

LARGE FAMILY CONTEST

A fish dinner and supper will be one of the featuers of the annual picnic of St. Peter's T.A.S. on Dominion Day to the Society's park below Robinson's Island. Two hundred pounds of fresh Lake Ontario fish have been ordered to arrive here on Monday morning. The meals will follow shanty style, with baked beans as an hors d'oeuvre and fried lake fish as the special item on the menu.

With the longer evenings under daylight savings, citizens who attend the races and athletic events at Exhibition Park will have an opportunity of visiting T. A. S. park for supper, and will find much to interest them in the evening. The meals will be prepared under the supervision of an accomplished chef who will have four assistants. The dining tent and tables will be erected by Saturday and everything will be ready for the first visitors on the holiday.

Two boats, the Rainbow and barge and the Manita, have been engaged, and will make trips from the Street Railway wharf every half hour. A ferry service will be run across the river for the benefit of those who come through Otonabee, and motorists on the west side will find an easy road from the city to the Park.

There will be no increase in the price of the boat fares, and every facility will be offered at the wharf, and members of the T.A.S. will have special duties on the boats looking after the children and guaranteeing every possible protection.

The athletic events will be numerous as usual. The T.A.S. several years ago discontinued the practice of soliciting the merchants for prizes, but if any persons desire to contribute prizes, their offerings will be gratefully received.

On the grounds there will be a tea room, fish pond, and a vaudeville concert given at certain hours during the afternoon and evening.

For Largest Families.

A friend of the T.A.S. has donated cash prizes for the largest families on the grounds. They are as follows: First prize $5, second $4 third $3, fourth $2 and fifth $1.

FROM A FORMER "HIRED MAN"

To the Editor of The Examiner:

As regards this talk about helping the farmer out I would like to say that I am an experienced farm hand, and can do anything in that line. During the last five years, however, I have worked in various foundries. I don't intend to go back to the farm, not if I can help it. Why? Because if you work for a farmer he sincerely thinks that he owns you from the time you get up until the time you go to bed. Pitching menure all day in a hot sun is harder than any work done in town; but a hired man is expected not only to put in about ten hours at a job like that, but also to put in two or three hours before and two or three hours afterwards "doing chores," which means milking six or twelve cows, feeding ten to fifty pigs, etc. Then when work is really over, even then the hired man cannot call his soul his own, not by a jugful, but, if the family goes to bed at a certain hour, he is expected to go too, just like some kid. I know a man who got sacked because he would keep a light burning to read a dime novel when he went to bed for an hour or so. I am now doing heavy work in a big shop, and I assure you it's a snap compared to farming, however, to show I'm no slacker. I am willing to work like Sam Hill for any farmer who will employ me by the ten hour day at current wages, and my brother says he'll do the same.

If the farmer is short of help, it's his own fault, because it's a fact that he's scared thousands of men away to other occupations.

CANADA HAS NO INTENTION OF ADOPTING AMERICAN ORDER

Sugar Consumption in United States Suffers Additional Restrictions

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 27.— The Canada Food Board has no immediate intention of adopting the new United States sugar rationing ordered by Food Commissioner Hoover which places the amount at a teaspoonful a meal for each individual during the next six months.

In Canada at the present time sugar consumption in hotels, restaurants and eating houses is limited to two teaspoonfuls per person per meal.

But there is no such rationing in homes unless the order forbidding the purchase of from stores greater quantities than normal consumption at any time.

Circumstances may later force the Canada Food Board to cut down the restaurant ration, but no such action is immediately in contemplation.

NEW EXCISE STAMPS EFFECTIVE JULY 1

Matches and Playing Cards Must Bear They After That Date.

The war excise tax of one cent on a box of matches and eight cents on a package of playing cards goes into effect on July 1, according to instructions received at the Inland Revenue Department. The tax on matches applies only to those manufactured or imported after April 30. This refers to playing cards also manufactured or imported after this date. All matches or playing cards in the hands of wholesalers, manufacturers' agents, retailers or other dealers not having the stamps after this date will be collected by the Department unless they bear these stamps.

The stamping of these matches and cards differs from the legal requirements respecting the stamping of patent medicines and perfumery. In the latter case the goods may be stamped at the time of sale to the consumer, whereas in the former all goods in stock must be stamped without regard to the date.

HASTINGS NEWS

HASTINGS, June 26.—Anniversary services in connection with the Presbyterian Church were held on Sunday last. The pulpit was taken by Rev. Russell McGillivray, of Warkworth, who preached at both services.

On Monday evening a lawn social was held, tea being served, from 6 to 8. After supper adjournment was made to the church, where a good programme of music and addresses was given. The Warkworth choir was in attendance and rendered some choice selections. Altogether the anniversary services were a grand success.

Rev. D. A. Thomson spent Sunday in Warkworth occupying the pulpit of the Presbyterian Church at both services.

The Ladies' Aid in connection with the Methodist Church held their monthly meeting on Thursday last at the home of Mrs. Alex. Smith.

The annual excursion under the auspices of the Society will be held to Peterborough on Wednesday of this week via steamer "Stoney Lake."

Mr. Atkinson, of Seymour, was in town during the week, presiding over the Entrance Examinations. Mr. Ostrander was in Roseneath doing similar duty there.

Mrs. Ostrander, who was recently operated on for appendicitis has so far recovered as to be able to be removed to her home.

GERMAN JEST ON U. S. ARMY.

Newspaper Quip Seeks to Show Its Small Size.

AMSTERDAM—, June 26.—Every effort is being made in Germany to delude the people about the size and importance of the American Army. It is entitled "Homeopathic Doses" and consists of the following bit of dialogue at a French port:

"General Pershing—Well, another fleet of American troop transports has just arrived.

"La Belle France—Superb! Shall I arrange for billets?

"General Pershing — Sure! Two rooms and three beds."

Bathing Apparel Of Charm and Distinction

Of course, there are the knit woollen suits, especially adapted for swimming and appreciated by athletic women. For you know, swimming is much more popular than bathing this year, and every lady swimmer knows the full joy and freedom when unhampered with frills and ruffles. These swimming suits are extremely modest and very smart.

Then we have suits that better deserve the name of "costumes" developed in silk and other good fabrics, great latitude is allowed for styles and colors.

If neither of these will suit Milady's taste, we have some of a happy medium. They are pretty enough to be admired on the sands, but practical enough in which to swim.

One-piece all-wool jersey suits are priced at..... $5.95
Cotton jersey, one-piece suits are priced at..... $1.75

Summer-Time Colors in Sweaters

Aren't they fascinating? these exquisitely colored sweaters that resemble the hand knitted ones so much. To be fashionable this year Milady must have at least one of the very popular "slip-overs" in her wardrobe. We have some lovely ones in the most bewitching shades, you can't help being enthusiastic about them, and their most timely virtue is that they are very moderately priced, $5.95 to $6.95. We have them in plain colors or with contrasting stripe trimmings. They are worn to fit the figure quite closely and look so smart and sport like.

Brushed wool collars and cuffs on a sweater coat are cozy and extremely good-looking, the coat must be made with deep pockets, a belt or sash to make it complete. We are showing some very stunning models after this style, in colors—rose, green, mauve, blue and yellow.

We have very charming silk sweaters in our stock in many different styles and colorings. They are smart, easy of line with a certain grace that makes them wholly irresistable. You must see them for yourself to appreciate their beauty and value.

Large Gathering Heard Farewell Sermon Of Rev. J. P. Wilson, D.D.

St. Paul's Church Was Filled to Capacity—"I Have Been a Plain Minister For Forty-Five Years" Said Dr. Wilson.

A FITTING TRIBUTE

Last evening the Rev. J. P. Wilson, D.D., pastor of Trinity Methodist church, delivered his valedictory message to a large congregation that gathered in St. Paul's Presbyterian church for the occasion. For nearly fifty years Dr. Wilson has been actively associated with the Christian ministry, and after next Sunday will retire from active service. His successor at Trinity Church will be the Rev. F. E. Malott, who has been stationed at Orillia. The service last evening was interdenominational in character. Choir members from the various churches of the city were present and the soloists included Mrs. George King, Mr. Douglas Carlisle and Mr. H. McEwen.

On the platform with Dr. Wilson were Rev. J. R. Webb, Rev. Dougald Brown, Rev. B. Greatrix, Rev. A. J. Thomas, Rev. R. Pogue, and Rev. W. H. White.

"A PLAIN MINISTER."

In his opening remarks, Dr. J. P. Wilson said that he was completely overwhelmed by the great gathering before him.

"I feel absolutely unworthy of this great assembly," said Dr. Wilson. "I have been a plain minister for forty-five years, and have been a wanderer on the face of the earth. It seems most fitting that this great honour (for it is the greatest honour I have received in my life) should be accorded to me in Peterboro. I have travelled from Brockville on the east to Winnipeg on the west, and my longest stay has been in the city of Peterboro. And this reception in a Presbyterian church, too, seems to me most appropriate. Outside of my own immediate family all my relations are of the Presbyterian persuasion. I presume that there is no class of men who is retired so much as a retired minister.

DR. WILSONS TEXT.

Dr. Wilson's text was taken from the fourth verse of the fifth chapter of the first Epistle of St. John.

"For whatsover is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

"Most men believe in a Supreme Being, because it is easier to believe in a Diety than not. If one does believe it involves a mystery. If a person does not it involves an absurdity, and anyone would believe a mystery before an absurdity. But belief is not faith. It has no moral element in it. Nor is faith the acceptance of a lot of apprehensions. When Brig. General Daudeman Cary gathered lumberjacks, cooks, staff officers, despatch riders, and in fact everybody in sight, armed them, and threw them in the breach, and kept at bay the Germans, that was faith. Faith becomes the vehicle whereby divine power reaches the human soul.

"I love to preach of a heaven to which Christ will take us when our work is done."

A LOYAL CITIZEN.

The Rev. Dougald Brown in voicing the sentiments of the large congregation to pay homage to his ministry said—

"This is an occasion in which we are all deeply interested. Dr. Wilson is a man of humble spirit, a splendid preacher, a loyal citizen, and a Christian gentleman. Should we not honour him He really belongs to no denomination—he belongs to the Church of God. He has fought the good fight. He has finished his pastoral activity. I believe that God will honour him. The word 'farewell' is a sad word, but his prayers, example, and influence will remain with us."

Allies Now Nearer Russian Agreement

GUIDED BY WILSON IDEAL.

Prediction That Intervention, If It Comes, Will Be For Disinterested Help.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—The Entente Allies are now earnestly seeking a solution of the Russian problem—one which will assist President Wilson in the execution of his pledge to "stand behind Russia"—and latest reports from Europe indicate that progress is being made.

Difficulties which presented themselves at the outset of the negotiations lay in the divergence of the aims of the separate Entente Governments, as well as between their ideals and the declarations of the American Chief Executive.

These differences are understood to have touched the future of Russia, supposing that success attended the combined efforts of the Allies to rehabilitate the nation as an independent State, absolutely free of German control. Then there was a lack of concrete plans that seemed reasonably certain to guarantee successful intervention which would give immediate results by destroying German influence in Russia without exciting the bitter resentment of the great mass of the Russian people.

The frank exchanges which have been going on in Europe are removing most of the misunderstandings and differences which have existed on these points. However, it cannot yet be said that any agreement has been reached. In fact, inquiry at the State Department was met to-day with the response that nothing had yet occurred to warrant any change in the policy which has been adopted by the United States.

This means that Americans not yet ready to take part in joint intervention in Siberia or elsewhere in Russia, the single exception being in the case of the Mourmansk territory on the Arctic Ocean, which is recognized by the United States Government as within the field of General Foch's commanding Generalship and consequently a place where American troops or marines may, in the General's discretion, be landed to reinforce the small British and French contingents now at Kola and vicinity.

It is understood that headway is being made towards a final agreement and that this is likely to be based upon the American ideas, which seek no profit from a renovated Russia other than military and moral assistance that would naturally follow.

ICE CREAM CONES

Twelve Thousand Barrels of Flour Used for Them.

It took justa 12,000 barrels of flour to make ice cream cones in Canada last year. This rather interesting information has been secured from the Canada food board by local dealers. The latter contend that as both ice cream and the cones are norishing food, no effort should be made towards curtailment.

As a token of their regret at his pending departure, the pupils and teachers this afternoon made some presentations to Mr. F. J. Voaden, principal for six years of the Queen Mary School.

After some splendid speeches by the teachers to the children, a signet ring from the teachers was presented to Mr. Voaden while similiar presentation was made to Mr. Stacy, who has left the staff recently. A handsome chair was the pupils' gift to Mr. Voaden, while the pupils of senior IV, junior IV and Mr. Elliot, the janitor, presented Mr. Stacy with a chair.

BICYCLE RACES FOR DOMINION DAY

A Five Mile Race Has Been Added With Three Good Prizes

A number of the best wheelmen in the Dominion will participate in the bicycle races at Peterboro, Ont., on Monday, Dominion Day. Peterboro's meet has been officially sanctioned by the Canadian Wheelmen's Association with the result that every bicycle club in Ontario has been advised regarding the local events. The programme includes a one mile novice, for bicyclists, who have never won a first prize from scratch, a one-mile open feature, and a two mile handicap. There is also a five mile motorcycle race on the card.

Several champion racing men have advised the officials of the Canadian Wheelmen's Association that they have arranged to make the trip from Toronto to Peterboro for the competitions. Some very good bicycle racing was seen at Peterboro one year ago and there is every prospect that the coming events will prove as thrilling as the previous contests. Some very fine prizes have been hung up for the races but there are a number of Peterboro racing aspirants who declare that the Toronto stars will not ride off with all the awards. The Toronto clubs which will have representatives in the various events, include the Broadway, Classic, Victoria, Macdonald and Beach Bicycle Clubs.

The referee of the big meet will be W. M. Gladish, the widely known authority on bicyling matters. It is his intention to give the local aspirants such a chance in the two mile handicap that the Toronto stars will have to ride their utmost to land inside the prize limit, if that. The events are such that the crowd should see very keen competition and thrilling finishes.

DONATED A PRIZE.

The Canada Cycle and Motor Co., Limited, have kindly donated a pair of Traction Tread Tires, and an Old Sol bicycle lmp, an the committee have added a five mile race, with the following prize list:

First—14 k. gold signet ring.
Second—air Traction Tread Tires.
Third—Old Sold Lamp.

BASEBALL

On Wednesday, June 26th, an exciting game was played at the Queen Mary School grounds between the Sherbrooke street Mysteries and a team from the South End. The score was 14-3 in favour of the Mysteries. The batteries were, for the winners, Davis and MacPherson; for the losers, Chard, Scriver, Williams, and Bercanow.

SPORTING COMMENT

Frank Baker continues to clout that old pill. When he hammered out a home-run drive last Saturday, he brought his American League record up to six-two circuit clouts one more than "Ty" Cobb's mark.

Is the Fulton-Dempsey fight going to follow in the same path as the Willard-Fulton affair? The postponement for ten days looks as if those behind the fight are having some trouble. Public sentiment is hard to buck just now.

The New York Club of the National League has decided to admit to all games without charge, men in the uniform of the United States or the allies.

James C. Dunn, of Cleveland, is evidently a very popular owner. His players recently presented him with a handsome gold watch valued at $300. Tris Speaker made the presentation on behalf of the players.

"Tom" Hickey, of the American Association, is busy just now trying to down the rumours that the American Association will not finish out the season. Most of the clubs are feeling the pinch and some of them are ready to quit right now.

Pitcher Hall, of St. Paul, pitched a no-hit game against Columbus on Sunday, and also held his opponents scoreless. Only twenty-eight batters faced him.

"Jack" Dempsey wants to battle George Carpentier, the French heavyweight idol, the match to be fought in London, and the total proceeds to go to any war fund the British or French Governments may name. Dempsey is willing to pay all of his own expenses, including the trip across the Atlantic.

If "Benny" Kauff ever sleeps in in the morning now while in the army, he will have no excuse to offer for so doing. When he left the New York team he was presented with no less than two wrist watches.

WEALTH AND WELCOME.

A Story That Illustrates a Very Common Way of the World.

A young merchant went abroad and after many years, having made a large fortune, returned to his native land. When he reached home he found that his relatives had gone to a feast at a country house a few miles away. He was so eager to see them that he did not take the trouble to change his clothes and was wearing the things he had used on board the ship coming home.

When he entered the large hall where the guests were all assembled his cousins showed very little pleasure at the sight of him. It was plain to them that he had come back a poor man. A young negro who had accompanied him from abroad was quite upset by their coolness to his master and said, "They must all be very bad men to receive you so cruelly."

"Wait a minute," whispered the merchant, "and you will see a change in their looks."

He quietly put a fine diamond ring on his finger, and, lo, every face began to smile, and they pressed at once around him and called him "Cousin William."

"Has a simple gold ring the power to charm people like this?" asked the black servant in perplexity.

"It is not that," replied his master, "but the ring is worth a good sum, and they guess from it that I am rich, and riches are dearer to them than anything."

"What deluded men!" exclaimed the negro. "They think more of yellow metal and a piece of glass than all my master's virtues and loving kindness."

THE COLOR OF GOLD.

Its Shade of Yellow Depends Upon the Metal Used in Alloy.

Gold that is used in jewelry and coins is always alloyed with copper or sometimes, as in the former, with silver. Addition of copper makes the color the popular "golden yellow," orange or reddish gold. Silver turns gold pale yellow. We seldom see pure gold, but it has that indescribable yellow that so often fascinates.

The pure metal is so malleable that it can be beaten between strips of vellum into sheets two-hundred-and fifty thousandths of an inch in thickness. In this form it is transparent and transmits green light.

When very finely divided gold is suspended in a liquid by precipitation from a solution it transmits green light similar to that of the lear go'd. Yet in ordinary well diffused light it seems purple, for this is the color it reflects. In other words, if a light is placed behind a jar containing a liquid with gold in fine suspension it looks green, whereas if the light is placed in front or at the side the color is purple. The vapor from boiling molten gold is also purple.

What, then, is the real color of gold? The color of a substance depends on its ability to reflect only light of that color, which in turn is due to the arrangement of the molecules. It seems, then, even the simple mechanical changes which we mentioned before as altering the physical properties are accompanied by radical changes among the molecules as far as their mutual relationships are concerned.—New York World.

Nest Eggs For Jam Pots.

When a large glass jar of jam or preserves is opened and it is not the housekeeper's desire to use it all at once she is often in a quandary to know how to dispose of what is left when the first few spoonfuls have been removed. The best method yet suggested is this:

Let the housekeeper have a small stock of china nest eggs, which can be bought for about a cent apiece. When she removes part of the contents of a jar let her drop into it enough of the china eggs to raise the contents to the top again; then replace the cover. Of course the china eggs should be dipped into boiling water first in order that they may not introduce the germs of decay.—New York World.

A BROADENING EXPERIENCE.

(Rochester Post Express).

A young American in a Canadian Highland regiment takes particular pains in his letters home to repel any notion that he is suffering or downhearted. There are hardships in trench life and the mud, and the rats are a bit disconcerting at times; but it is the actual, ungarnished truth, he says, that he is having the time of his life and would never think twice before enlisting again. The Canadian army in France, he declares, is the most cheerful and utterly happy-go-lucky crowd he ever saw or imagined. Their dugouts ring with roars of laughter; and the few "glooms and crape-hangers" with them are all new men.

We are probably far from realizing the wonderful value of this experience for the young men of our land. Reflect for a moment on the fact that two million of our boys, and twice as many it may be, will be lifted out of the dull routine of narrow lives and humdrum pursuits in factories and on farms, to be trained, fed, clothed, instructed, their physical and moral health looked after more carefully than it ever was for most of them at home, and to have advantages of travel which only the well-to-do few have heretofore enjoyed. They march before kings in ancient, historic cities. They contact men of many races from the uttermost ends of the earth. They hear new tongues and learn how people live and how they think. It is an enormously broadening and beneficial experience. And besides and beyond all this, in what a different intellectual atmosphere they move and live! They learn the principles for which they battle, what governmental institutions stand for, what freedom means for mankind, what the age-long struggle of the world is winning, what the evolutionary goal of humanity is. Will they not be wiser and more thoughtful, broadened and deepened, on their return, more appreciative of all that is good in our republic, more sensible of all it lacks and more determined that it shall be a better government for all the people than it was before?

And most of them will come back. Less than four of every thousand of our forces in France have died thus far from all causes put together; and while this rate will be increased if all of them get into battle, we must remember that a certain per cent. of them would have died at home, the death rate in our state being about 15 per thousand a year. And the men who do come back will be honoured in every walk in life. The future will afford them exceptional opportunities.

Washing in hard water and neglecting to thoroughly dry the hands after washing are frequent causes of chaps and chilblains on the hands. The most effective water-softener in winter, to my mind, is oatmeal, though a little trouble is entailed in its use.

JAPAN IS READY WITH A MILLION TRAINED SOLDIERS

When Allies Say "Yes" Million Men Will Be Let Loose in Far East —11,000,000 Might Be Available

ONLY AWAIT WORD

PARIS, June 28.—There is a strong belief here that Japanese intervention in the Far East is possible. Japan, it is understood, is perfectly willing to take action, provided she is formally asked to do so by the rest of the allies.

The attitude of Japan, it is generally thought, is that she is ready to supply the necessary man-power, provided the Allies including America, will furnish the equipment and other material needed, which Japan herself is unable to produce.

Interest is now centred upon the military forces the Kingdom of the Rising Sun can bring into the war.

On this head available information is extremely scanty, as in no country has the exact nature of military preparations been so successfully kept secret as in Japan. No Government reports are published as to the number of effectives, and the Japanese Parliament is no better informed than the people themselves.

Information from private sources which has been published here tends to show that, although at no time were more than 500,000 men engaged on the Japanese side in the war against Russia, there are now and have been since mobilization took place at the beginning of the present war, at least 2,000,000 men.

These belong to the active army the first and second reserve and the territorial reserve. Immediately after this first line army Japan can mobilize a second contingent of 1,000,000, or other men who have not yet served in the army in peace times, but who are as physically able as the men in the active ranks. These constitute what Japanese officers term the auxiliary reserves.

Behind these 3,000,000 men there are in Japan more than 5,000,000 additional men or less able-bodied but totally untrained men who may be mobilized immediately if necessary. Detailed figures published by one of the Japanese reviews shows that of these 11,000,000 men at least 6,000,000 are either fully or partially trained and at least 3,000,000 fully trained.

It is said here Japan can furnish an expeditionary corps of between 55 and 60 divisions of 18,500 men, or well over 1,000,000 men.

POTATOES AS FOOD.

At First Only the Seed of the Tubers Was Thought Fit to Eat.

When potatoes were first used for food it was the "seed" or "apple" that was used, and it was some time before the tuber was found to be the most delicious food. Up to the end of the seventeenth century the potato was out of the reach of people of moderate incomes. It is recorded that in 1662 potatoes were sold at 1 shilling (25 cents) a pound in the London markets, but the sale was small because so many people believed that the potato caused leprosy and fever. Others declared that they were endangering their souls if they ate the potato, since the tuber was not mentioned in the Bible.

The late Duke of Argyll in his history of Scotland says that little or nothing was known of the potato in Scotland until long past the middle of the eighteenth century. The Duchess of Buccleuch, in her "Household Book" for the year 1701, speaks of the potato as "an esculent of great rarity."

Hugh Miller, in his "Schools and Schoolmasters," says that his maternal grandfather about the year 1740 used to bring home in his pocket some three or four potatoes as great rarities grown by the gentry, for he was a friend of the head gardener at Balnagown castle. Thomas Carlyle tells us that his father got possession of four potatoes and knew so little about them that he hid them away for a possible time of want and that potatoes were saved to be eaten at Halloween. There is no doubt that the Irish were the first people to recognize the value of the potato as a staple article of food.—Youth's Companion.

Indian River Mill Will Be Rebuilt

of the fire which destroyed the grist and lumber mills owned by Mr. Ross Staples, Indian River, some weeks ago.

The fire according to residents of Indian River, is believed to be of an incendiary nature.

Will Rebuild.

Mr Staples stated yesterday that he will commence the reconstruction of the mill immediately and probably have it ready for the fall crop.

Directly it was destroyed Mr. Mick Sullivan and Mr. Fred Welsh, realizing the inconvenience of not having the mills, started a collection, which was generously resopnded to by the people.

GRAIN MARKET

Light cash offerings of corn and steadily diminishing stocks most probably accounts for the stronger tone of the market. Crop damage reports were used in attempts to bull the market but there is little reason for believing that the growing crops have as yet suffered any material damage. That receipts are light against an improved demand is a more certain factor in the present stronger tone of the market. Oats in sympathy with corn developed a stronger feeling, and cash oats, western, are quoted 5-8c higher.

TRIUMPH FOR CANADA.

Biggest Ocean Ship Yet Built in Dominion Launched.

MONTREAL, June 26.—As a sample of what can be done in the way of Canadian shipbuilding, the steamship Porsanger, considered the largest ocean-going steamer yet built in this country, was an interesting and instructive sight as it lay yesterday in the harbour. In some respects the Porsanger resembles naval ships, there is so much iron in her construction and so little timber. She is built of Canadian materials mostly, though the plates were imported from the United States. It is expected, however, that at a near date these plates for sister vessels will be manufactured at Sydney.

CATTLE MARKET

Trade was slow and draggy, with nothing but the odds and ends of held over lots of thin common grass cattle offering. Good butcher cattle with anything on them are in demand at steady prices, but there were practically none on the market. Common thin cows were again hit very hard and were difficult to cash in at sharp declines. Too many of these have been shipped in this week.

Choice veal calves were very firm.

Light sheep are a little firmer.

Spring lambs steady.

Hogs steady at $18 fed and watered, and prospects that that will continue to be the price for next week.

C.N.R. Tourist Sleeping Cars mean Comfort to the Traveller

The interior is somewhat more modest in appointment than the standard of first-class sleeping car. Of solid steel underframe and with highly polished dark green finish, the Canadian Northern tourist cars present a very pleasing appearance. The interior is finished in mahogany, with aisle carpet to match and cork composition flooring to deaden sound and lessen vibration. Commodious smoking room and toilets, kitchenette with appliances for light cooking, running water, etc., are greatly appreciated. Roomy berths, accommodating two persons if desired, are just one-half the first-class rate. Second-class ticket holders may also occupy these cars, and the Dining Car is always available at meal time. Trains leave Toronto Union Station 10 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays for Winnipeg and points west.

For Tickets, Reservations, Literature and Information, apply to Thos. Marks, Insurance, Peterboro, or write R. L. Fairbairn, G.P.A., 68 King St. E., Toronto.

Cautious.

Mrs. Flatbush—You don't think the war will reach over here this year, do you, dear?

Mr. Flatbush—Why, no. Why do you ask that question?

"Because I want to know whether to hang the hammock under the trees where it was last year, or in the cellar."

Inclination to Experiment.

"Why are you in favor of government ownership?"

"I'm not exactly clear," replied the candid man. "But I've a vague idea that I'd like to see some lines of business in the hands of elected officers who might try to make a hit by lowering prices instead of raising them."

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

MRS. COLLINS IS ANGERED

CHAPTER CIV.

"Naturally not!" she returned with an ill-disguised sneer when I said that she would not be concerned over George as I was, nor so sensitive to waiting in the crowded station.

"It was kind of you to bring Mr. Howard home, and I do appreciate it," I rang for tea, giving her no time to answer. "You see the hotel clerk kept me informed, and said he would see that he got up all right when the train came in." I stretched the truth a little, but as it harmed no one I did not feel guilty. "I was too nervous to remain where the public would stare at me. Then, too, I knew George would prefer I should not wait there — wouldn't you George?"

"You did perfectly right, dear," he returned just as Celeste brought the tea. I never let the hotel serve tea. It seemed so much more home-like to have Celeste do it.

A dull flush covered Mrs. Collins' face. I saw she was annoyed, angry. It raised my spirits immensely. To think that I—a little country bred girl could annoy the lovely Julia, shake her poise, was to say the least, encouraging.

She left as soon as she had finished her tea, I thanked her again for her kindness, and expressed the hope that if George ever had another accident she would be where she could bring him to me.

While I was talking I saw that look of satisfaction, of pride or something of the sort cross George's face that he always wore when I had held my own with another woman.

Heart to Heart.

"Oh George, you are sure you aren't badly hurt?" I said as soon as I closed the door after Mrs. Collins. "Isn't there something I can do for you?"

"Yes, come here and give me a kiss!"

I kissed him fondly, running my fingers through his hair. For once I dared take liberties with him.

"So you were worried?"

"Worried! I was almost wild with anxiety. I went down to the station, but when I saw that crowd, all eaten up with curiosity I couldn't bear to stay. It seemed to me that my feelings for you were too wonderful to let them all gape at me."

For a moment George looked at me without saying anything. Then with his left arm he drew me to him. (It was his right wrist that was sprained.)

"I understand dear! I should probably have felt just the same had you been on the train. When we are very much interested we do not care to take the public into our confidence."

"No, indeed! and you don't think it was because I didn't care enough, do you?"

"No, dear. I understand you better than you think."

For half an hour we talked. The most satisfying talk we ever had had together—from my point of view. I told him how I cared for him; how I resented the implication that I did not. And that I wanted to please him in everything. I told him all this without in any way belittling myself. A while back I should have talked very differently, should have begged him to love me, and probably wept a little. As I left him to dress for our tete a tete dinner I said aloud:

"I owe Mrs. Sexton a lot," and I did. It was because of my talk with her that I was able to keep calm and dignified in my heart to heart conversation with George.

Really I had tried very hard to be quiet and undisturbed because of Julia Collins' unwarranted intrusion —That was what I called it. And as Mrs. Sexton had said I should, I was reaping my reward. This episode which had happened made me absolutely determined to leave nothing undone that would make me what George wanted me to be.

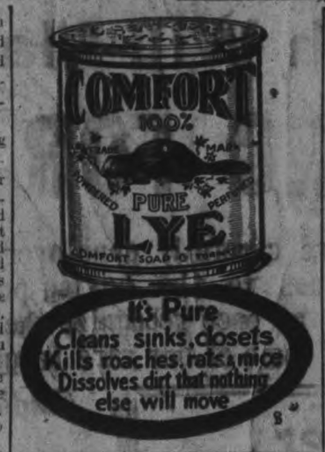
We laughed and chatted over the dinner. Then when we finished he told me about the accident. How for a little he had feared he would not be able to get out of the burning car; how brave the men were, even those who were terribly burned. He seemed more human, more concerned for others than ever I had known him to be. He was very lovable in his softened mood.

"Please let me call a doctor," I urged "you may be more seriously hurt than you think."

"No, and if I had been I should have been repaid by your anxiety for me. It is worth the inconvenience of a sprained wrist to be such an object of interest," he laughed as he said it, and patted my hand; else I might have thought he referred to Julia Collins, and her interest in him.

"I don't want you to suffer, but I too have been very happy," I said, as I bade him good night. He had gone to bed immediately he finished his dinner.

To-morrow—Bar Harbour.



Every Woman a Nurse.

Every woman, or at least almost every woman, has, at one time or another of her life, charge of the personal health of somebody, whether child or invalid—In other words, every woman is a nurse. Every day sanitary knowledge or the knowledge of nursing, or, to other words, of how to put the constitution in such a state as that it will have no disease or that it can recover from disease, takes a higher place. It is recognized as the knowledge which every one ought to have—distinct from medical knowledge, which only a profession can have.

If, then, every woman must at some time or other in her life become a nurse—namely, have charge of somebody's health—how immense and how valuable would be the product of her united experience if every woman would think how to nurse.—Florence Nightingale.

Values in Exhaust Steam.

A common error among plant owners is to ascribe undue economy to the heat that may be carried in water resulting from the condensation of steam. They conversely greatly underestimate the heat carried in exhaust steam. As a matter of fact, the heat in a pound of water at 212 degrees is only 180 British thermal units reckoned above the freezing point, whereas in a pound of steam at the same temperature the heat units number 1,150. Hence if this steam is condensed in a radiator it gives out 970 heat units, and the drip will contain 180 heat units.—Engineering Magazine.

CRATER LAKES.

Easter Island Has a Wonderful One, and So Has Java.

Wonderful lakes are often found inside the craters of volcanoes. One of these can be seen upon Easter island—the island which bears wonderful remains of an unknown ancient people. Inside a crater is a lake, near the borders of which lie several unfinished crowns composed of tufa, evidently destined for the huge figures on the shores of the island, but never completed. And on this lake float many waterfowl, one of which is said to be a goose unknown to science.

Another curious crater lake existed until recently within the icebound crater of a volcano in New Zealand. The water was heated to boiling point, but a short time ago an eruption of more than common violence tossed the whole lake into the air.

A most interesting crater lake can still be seen in Java in the volcano of Papandajan, and it is possible to enter the crater and gaze down on the scene below. Standing on the rim, one can see the vast seething mass of boiling mud. Every now and then a wave of mud moves heavily along the sides of the chasm, only to fall back into the molten mass, and here and there columns of sulphur thrown out of the lake of mud are gradually forming walls. It is indeed pleasant to escape from this dismal inclosure to breathe the free air once more.

Where women's interests are supreme—

Under the heading, "For and About Women," the interests and activities of the modern woman are taken care of daily in

The Mail and Empire.

There the feminine reader sees the diversified concerns of her sex reflected in brief, informative articles of timely interest. Children and War Savings, Domestic Service Reform, An Interesting New Wardrobe, Central Kitchens, and An Independent Family, are a few of the topics discussed in recent issues. Part of the same page is "On Dit," in which current social events are chronicled. Any woman who wishes to keep informed on what is going on in her own particular sphere may do so by reading daily "For and About Women" and "On Dit." On Saturdays "Woman's Kingdom" is an additional feature especially interesting to women readers.

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT, TORONTO

PACKAGES IN PORTUGAL.

Messengers Carry Them, as Stores Do Not Use Delivery Wagons.

Light delivery in Portugal is done almost entirely by men and women. Delivery wagons, such as are used in American cities, are unknown here. Some of the large department stores are now using motor trucks, but motors introduced a species never carried. Lisbon and Oporto, the only large cities in the republic, are built on hills and most of the streets are very steep, attaining a grade of 15 per cent. They are paved with stone and generally are in good condition. The roads immediately about these cities are fair and the grades are easy. County highways are a mixture of very good and very bad. They are not kept up as they should be and for short distances are apt to be extremely rough.

Nearly all articles such as are delivered in the United States from a light wagon or motor vehicle are sold here by men and women, who go through the streets crying their wares. Fish, fowls, vegetables, bread, oil, fruit, etc., are all carried on the head or shoulders of the vendor. Delivery of goods from small shops is made by boys or by the "galego," who is found at every street corner. These men also transport pianos, furniture and other articles of a similar character.—Consular Report.

MILITARY MESSAGES.

Some That Were Made Famous by Their Pith and Brevity.

Of famous military messages there are scores, beginning with the never to be forgotten "Veni, vidi, vici" of Caesar and that equally famous dispatch of Commodore Perry, "We have met the enemy and they are ours," but both were beaten for brevity by General Sir Robert Boyd, who while governor of Gibraltar, being in need of beef for his troops, wrote to the agent in England this laconic dispatch: "Browne, beef, Boyd." Browne sent the stores with the reply, "Boyd, beef, Browne."

And this in turn recalls the story of Peter de Dreux, the celebrated fighting bishop of Beauvais, who, being taken in arms by Richard Coeur de Lion, was imprisoned and fettered. Pope Celestine III. remonstrated in behalf of the prelate, and in reply the king sent the bishop's helmet and armor to Rome with this neat dispatch taken from Genesis xxxvii, 32: "Know now whether it be thy son's coat or no." The pope declined further intercession and replied that the coat the king had sent did not belong to a son of the church, but of the camp, and the prisoner, therefore, was at Richard's mercy.—Detroit Free Press.

Straining the News.

The nobility and gentry of Little Plowboro' were recently gathered in the village school room to enjoy some tableaux vivants by local performers. The curtain had just fallen on a really creditable picture of the death of Nelson, shown to music.

"Keep your seats, please," said the stage manager. "We're much obliged for your kind applause, ladies and gentlemen, and we're going to give you the death of Nelson over again."

"Oh, are yer?" came from a friend of the man who was playing the chief part. "Then, if you'll tell Nelson 'is kitchen chimbly's afire and 'is wife's lost 'ad a couple o' fits, perhaps 'e don't die so blessed lingerin'."

Recognized.

A Pennsylvania lawyer known throughout the state for his shrewdness once met his match in a very unexpected quarter.

An old woman was being cross examined by him as to how the testator had looked when he made a remark to her about some relatives.

"I don't remember. He's been dead three years," she answered testily.

"Do you mean to tell me that your memory is so bad that you cannot go back three years?" demanded the attorney.

The witness was silent.

"Did he look anything like me?" the lawyer finally ventured.

"Seems to me he did have the same sort of vacant look," responded the old lady.—New Orleans Picayune.

To Make Business a Science.

The science of selling offers a great field for study for the department of commerce and for the many business schools which are springing up in our colleges. Commerce is not mere money getting; it is a science, as banking and law and medicine are sciences. It should be studied as such, for with such study comes not only greater efficiency, but a higher standard of ethics as well. There is no more pressing public service to be done than the discovery of the best ways of reducing the cost of distribution and of elevating business to the standards of a profession.—World's Work.

Thoughtfulness.

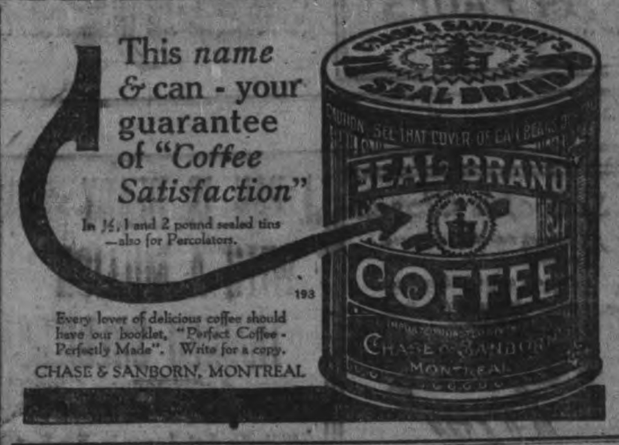
"Lady," said Plodding Pete, "would you mind letting me have some mustard or some horseradish?"

"What for? I haven't given you anything to eat."

"No one knows it better'n me. But I'm a member of the S. P. C. A. an' harbor no grudge. That dog of yours has jes' bit a piece out o' my leg an' I want to give him some seasoning."—Washington Star.

Tiger-like Cat.

Although he's no bigger than an ordinary house cat, the dasyure of the South American jungles is strong and fierce. He has the temper of a tiger pent up in a soft coated, speckled body of tomcat size. Good fighter that he is, the dasyure never fights for his food, for his chief subsistence is the ant and other small insects, but when attacked by a man the latter very often gets the worst of it.—Wisconsin State Journal.



GAVE PENNY UNDUE CREDIT

Story Will Please Those Who Have Small Belief That Pocket Pieces Bring Luck.

"Superstition is a relic of the dark ages," observed one of the supposedly wise men, "and it has no place on the battle ground of modern thought.

"I don't believe in planting potatoes on Good Friday, nor in seeing the moon over my left shoulder. I think that a fisherman is foolish if he spits on his bait, and I don't believe in walking around a stump three times to change my luck. Neither am I afraid of black cats that cross my path. In my opinion all such things are nonsense. They are in the same class with that old idea about hanging a horseshoe over the door. That's an old, played-out scheme, and it never was worth a whoop.

"There's only one thing in the whole list of lucky or unlucky omens that works out in every detail, and that's the idea of finding a penny and keeping it for good luck.

"About three months ago I picked up an old green penny that was lying in the gutter. I chucked it in the match pocket of my coat, and I have kept it there ever since.

"Before I took in connection the penny I couldn't turn my hand over without losing money, and ever since then I've made money at every turn of the road. That's why I know it is lucky."

"Let me look at your lucky penny?" remarked a bystander. "I'd just like to touch the thing."

The penny-wise man ran two fingers into his match pocket, and as he did so he exclaimed:

"By cracky! I'll bet I've lost the blamed thing. In fact, I know I have. I sent this coat to the dry cleaner the day after I found the penny, and I forgot to remove it from the pocket."

Moral: Prosperity seems to be, in some measure, psychological.

OPERATION FOR APPENDICITIS.

Mrs. J. A. Ballantyne, Sturgeon Falls, Ont., writes: "My husband was treated for appendicitis and the doctors ordered an operation. But he would not consent to an operation and began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Since doing so he has had no need of an operation or even of a doctor as the trouble has completely left him. I cannot find words to speak our gratitude for his cure."

POISON OF NICOTINE.

It Affects the Coronary Arteries and Produces Tobacco Heart.

"Tobacco heart" is a condition well known to physicians. It is really a phase of arteriosclerosis, due to excessive smoking, and is generally characterized by angina pectoris, a severe pain in the chest. The New York Medical Record, commenting on some statistics published in Germany by Dr. J. Pawinski, says the important conclusion to be drawn from them is "that tobacco has a certain, possibly a specific, affinity for the coronary arteries." These are the arteries of the heart itself, those that supply its muscles with blood.

That nicotine is a powerful poison has long been known, but there has been a wide divergence of opinion as to whether tobacco smoke contains nicotine or not. The investigations of Zalinski and Zebrowski prove that it does. The quantity of nicotine absorbed by the body from tobacco smoke is probably small, and if smoking be indulged in with moderation it will not injure healthy adults, but when carried beyond the limits of moderation or when indulged in by young people it is certain to do harm to the heart.

Its effect is to cause a considerable thickening of the inner membrane of the coronary arteries, a pronounced degeneration of their middle coat, which is composed of muscles, and marked changes in the muscles that contract and expand the heart; thus bringing about disturbances of its rhythmical beating.

EGGS AND THE HEN.

Life Work Nature Has All Laid Out For the Young Chick.

"There is water a-plenty in a fresh laid egg, but no more air than there is in a hammer," said a dealer in eggs. "So long as you can keep air out of the egg it will remain sweet and fresh, but no one has ever succeeded in keeping it out by fair means more than six days. The oxygen is bound to find its way through an eggshell's pores, and the only way to save that egg then is to eat it. It sounds funny, but the moment you give an egg fresh air that moment you ruin its health.

"A good, healthy hen—not speaking of any particular star breed, but just hen—does not fulfill her destiny until she has accomplished 600 eggs—fifty dozen. That's what nature has fitted up the hen to do in the way of just uncoached and unstimulated egg production, and she gives the hen eight years to do it in.

"The hen divides the fifty dozen stunt up among those eight years. Some years she may not turn out more than a couple of dozen, but when the eight years are up she will have managed her annual output so that the total has come out all right. Then the hen has ended her career as an egg producer, and too often, if she is in the hands of a thrifty owner, begins another career, short and delusive—this time as the summer boarder spring chicken."—Pittsburgh Press.

Weight After Meals.

There is, or used to be, an idea that one weighs less after a meal than before, but that is nonsense. There is always a definite increase of weight after a meal, and with most people it is curiously uniform. After an average dinner washed down with the average amount of liquid—three-quarters of a pint—the average man will invariably find that he weighs two pounds more than he did before the meal. There seems to be no reason why a really determined diner should not double that increase. A half pint tumbler of water or a breakfast cupful of tea weighs ten ounces, so that probably over half of the two pounds increase of weight after dinner is accounted for by the liquid part of the meal.—Manchester Guardian.

The Speed Limit.

Motorists going through a small town up in northern Indiana bear witness to the fact that sarcasm reaches a high stage of development there. Going into the town one is met by a sign reading "Speed Limit 110 Miles an Hour."

"Mighty decent people in this town," thinks the motorist. But before he has gone far he realizes the sarcasm fully. The streets are so rough and the road through there to Chicago has so many turns in it that it would be impossible to go faster than ten miles an hour without running into some one's front yard.—Indianapolis News.

Three Hard Words.

There are three short and simple words, the hardest to pronounce in any language (and I suspect they were no easier before the confusion of tongues), not which no man or nation that can not utter can claim to have arrived at manhood. These words are, "I was ...

ISOLATED ISLANDS.

Lonely Tristan da Cunha Gets Outside News Once in Two Years.

Though scientific progress has made it possible to do a double journey between England and America in a fortnight, there remain many islands with which it takes years to communicate.

Off the Scottish coast are the groups of islands known as the Hebrides, Orkneys and Shetlands. Of these the most isolated island is St. Kilda, some three miles long and two miles broad. The inhabitants lead lives of great loneliness, for it takes a month to get to the next island, and the sea often makes any communication with St. Kilda impossible for months.

The group of eight Phoenix islands in the Pacific has a total population of only 158, while another little bit of the British empire is Fanning island. This is a landing place for the Pacific submarine cable, and usually there are about 100 people in the place.

The loneliest of all parts of British territory is the island of Tristan da Cunha, in the south Atlantic, which is also the smallest inhabited island in the empire. It is 1,800 miles from and has a population of seventy-four Scottish Americans, and the inhabitants get news of the outer world usually once every two years.—London Stray Stories.

Heart Beat So Fast
Could Not Sleep
HAD TO SIT UP IN BED

Heart trouble has of late years become very prevalent. Sometimes a pain catches you in the region of the heart, now and then your heart skips beats, palpitates, throbs, or beats with such rapidity and violence you think it will burst. You have weak and dizzy spells, are nervous, irritable and depressed, and if you attempt to walk upstairs or any distance you get all out of breath.

There is no other remedy will do you so much good, restore your heart to a natural condition, build up your strength and give you back vigor and vitality as Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. A. Russell, Niagara Falls, Ont., writes: "At nights I could not sleep, and had to sit up in bed, my heart would beast so fast.

"When I went to walk very far I would get all out of breath, and would have to sit down and rest before I could go any further. I was advised to get Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and before I had used two boxes I could sleep and walk as far as I liked without any trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Bitter Lady Lytton.

In "Unpublished Letters of Lady Bulwer Lytton to A. E. Chalon, R. A.," the editor slips in the following when referring to S. C. Hall's impressions of Lady Bulwer Lytton:

"Mrs. Hall was Irish, and Lady Lytton had no partiality for her compatriots. On one occasion her husband entertained Daniel O'Connell and other Irish members at dinner, and S. C. Hall relates: 'The next day I saw Mrs. Bulwer directing some arrangements in the dining room which she told me she was fumigating in order to get rid of the brogue.'"

Children Not Empty.

The pseudo-science of education under which most of us were brought up assumed that children were empty vessels to be filled by knowledge, observes the New Republic. Teachers and parents still feel that to cut down an arithmetic hour to 45 minutes is to deprive the child of a fourth of his education. But children are not empty vessels, nor are they wound up and set running on a track by the teacher.

They are pushing wills and desires and curiosities. They are living, growing things, and they need nothing so much as a place where they can grow. They live as wholes far more than older people do, and they cannot be made to become minds and minds alone for four or five hours a day; that is, without stultification.

The school forgets that we are only accidentally intellectual, that our other impulses are far more imperious. Because a teacher can secure outward order it does not mean that she has harmonized the child's personality. She has not the least clew to riot or apathy or delusion that may be going on inside him. She may easily become a drill sergeant, but she must not think that she has thereby become an educational scientist.

Japan Likes Fat Men.

In this country when a man of average height takes on girth until his weight runs up to 300 pounds or so, his friends have grave doubts about his condition and advise him to diet in order to bring back a slim elegance of figure, notes a writer. In Japan the contrary is true. If a man can carry 300 pounds of flesh with any agility he is of the material from which heroes are manufactured, and if he can work up to the 400 or 475-pound notch, and becomes a wrestler, he is in the running for the championship.

Wrestling is to the Japanese what boxing is to us, and more. The populace goes crazy over it, and the magnates of the big game handle great sums in the way of gate receipts. The Tokyo Wrestling association controls the flower of Japan's heavyweights, and at its head is a 350-pound veteran, T. Dewanonmi, the holder of the championship for 11 years in succession—a record feat.

Tempus Fugit!

A trainload of newly drafted men reached their cantonment late in the afternoon. By the time they had passed through the receiving station and the hands of the doctors, it was nearly midnight. Several of them were awakened at four o'clock the following morning to assist the cooks in preparing breakfast. As one well-built, sleepy drafted man got to his feet, he stretched and yawned: "It doesn't take long to spend a night in the army."—Everybody's Magazine.

C. P. R. Engineer Tells Of Trouble

Tried Four Years to Find Right Medicine—Tanlac Ends Troubles

"After trying for years to find something to relieve my awful condition, a few bottles of Tanlac soon fixed me up all right and I havn't had a bit of trouble since, "declared William McIntosh, of 3019-A, Dundas street, West, Toronto, the other day. Mr. McIntosh is a well-known engineer on the Canadian Pacific Railway and has been on the road for seventeen years.

"I suffered terribly from stomach trouble and indigestion," he continued, "that has worried me for four long years. After eating anything my food would ferment and form a hard lump in my stomach and I felt like I was burning up inside. Then I would bloat up with gas that pressed up against my heart till I could hardly breathe. Nearly all kinds of fruits and vegetables would disagree with me, acid foods would act like poison and I had to be so careful with my diet that I never enjoyed my meals, for I knew what misery was in store for me later on. I was constantly belching up a sourish, bitter water, sometimes a thick phlegm would rise and there was a dull aching pain in the pit of my stomach nearly all the time.

"I took medicine after medicine for the last four years trying to get relief, but it was no use, and I was getting worse all the time. One day a friend of mine urged me to try Tanlac, as he said it had helped him a lot, so I got a bottle. I have taken four bottles now and I can positively say that it has entirely relieved my of all my stomach troubles. I can eat all kinds of fruits and vegetables and anything else I want and never have a touch of indigestion afterwards. My food does not sour any more, gas has stopped forming, that burning sensation and bloating are all gone and I am in as good condition today as I ever was. It certainly is fine to be able to eat enything I want and all I want without having to suffer for it afterwards and it is nothing but Tanlac that has made it possible for me to enjoy living again like a man should."

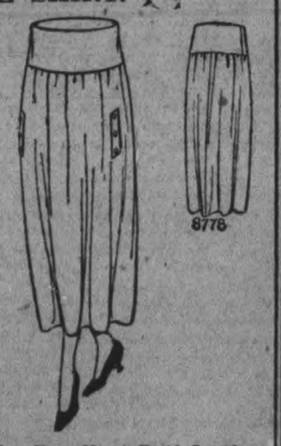
Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.; in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

A Treacherous Jewel.

If a faded turquoise be dampened its color is temporarily restored. The orientals utilize this quality by carrying a stone in their mouths and deftly slipping it into their hands to display it to a prospective purchaser. Dealers in Meshed guard against such deceptions by retaining a stone a few days before purchasing, as the turquoise is the most treacherous of jewels.—Liverpool Mercury.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S YOKE SKIRT.



A study of the trend of fashion reveals the fact that skirts are growing narrower and slightly longer. All skirts are either gathered or plaited, very few plain effects being seen. The model shown in No. 8778 is adapted to either silks or light weight woollen materials. The skirt is unusually simple and easy to make, for the lower section is all in one piece with straight lower edge, and it is gathered to a fitted yoke which is gathered to the slightly raised waistline. Pockets are set in the skirt at each side of the front, and straight pieces of the material trimmed with buttons are stitched over the openings.

The lady's yoke skirt pattern No. 8778 is cut in five sizes—24 to 32 inches waist measure. Width at lower edge of skirt is two yards. The 26 inch size requires 3¼ yards 27 inch, 2½ yards 36 inch, or 2⅝ yards 36 inch material.

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction. This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents

COLORED MOTION PICTURES

They Are Made by Using Screens of Red and Green Glass.

There are colored motion pictures that are made so by hand, each little picture being painted separately. In making pictures "in natural colors" the film is the same as that of the ordinary motion picture. But in making it the speed is twice as fast, thirty two pictures to the second.

"Colored" pictures are photographed through mats or screens of colored glass. Two primary colors are used, red and green, with a sympathetic touch of blue. When the machine that makes the photograph is started a device causes the red screen to pass before the lens as the first photograph is taken, and the green screen passes the same way as the following picture, is made. They continue to do so alternately as the film continues to be exposed.

The negative is developed and a positive printed, and when run through the projecting machine the color screens are used in the same way as when the negative was made, red and green pictures being flashed on the screen alternately. Those colors that are in sympathy with the red are brought out, and those that are in sympathy with the green are shown in the same way, and through the persistence of vision we do not notice the changes. Instead they blend harmoniously to our delight.—Charles M. Seay in American Boy.

When Gas Was New.

There is a tradition to the effect that when domestic lighting by gas was still a novelty Sir Walter Scott introduced it into every room and staircase of the house that he was building at Abbotsford and did so without provision for any unexpected failure. His entering into possession was made the occasion for a house warming on a scale of considerable magnitude, and in the very middle of the festivities all the lights suddenly went out. The guests were left in absolute darkness until such time as mounted messengers could return from Melrose, whither they had been dispatched with instructions to collect all the tallow candles and tin sconces or candlesticks which the village contained.—London Times.

Function of Literature.

"A book," said Dr. Johnson, "should show one either how to enjoy life or to endure it." Was ever the function of literature expressed more pungently or justly? Any man who enjoys or endures has a right to speak if he can. If he can help others to enjoy or endure he has a right to speak. If he doubt as to his part in life, while if he cannot ecstatically enjoy he can at least good mumredly endure.—A. C. Benson in Century Magazine.

CURIOUS FIGURING.

It's a Way the Russian Peasant Has, and It's an Enigma.

A UNIQUE WAY TO MULTIPLY.

It Is Simplicity Itself and Absolutely Accurate, but the Why and Wherefore of the Method and Its Results Are a Puzzle to Mathematicians.

This is not a meaningless, freaky twister of a puzzle. But it is a puzzle. It is the method by which Russian peasants multiply, and as yet the boasted mental superiority of America cannot solve the simple riddle of the Slav.

Suppose you want to multiply two numbers together. Divide one of the numbers by 2, ignoring the fractions. Continue the process until the divided column reaches one. Then double the other number and continue the process until it equals in lines the first column. Then whenever a number is even in the first column strike it out, together with its corresponding number in the second column. Add the second column, and, lo, the answer! Now, why does it do it? There seems to be no reason for it, but what is it? Can you work it out?

It is infallible. It has never been known to fail. But what principle of mathematics is behind it all? Perhaps it is some queer freak of numbers, some one says, but such things are not to be turned aside with such generalities. Mathematics is not built upon so lax a system. There is some rule behind it all.

Take the simple multiple 12 by 10. Obviously the answer is 120. Try it the Russian way. Place 12 in the first column and 10 in the second. Divide 12 by 2 and multiply 10 by 2 and place the respective answers beneath the sums from which they were derived. It will stand 6 and 20. Dividing 6 by 2 equals 3, and multiplying 20 by 2 equals 40. Continuing, 3 divided by 2 and throwing away all fractions will be 1, while 40 multiplied by 2 will be 80. Now strike out all the numbers in the first column which are even and with it their parallels in the second column—12 and 6 will go out, leaving the last two parallel results. Ignoring the first column and adding the numbers in the second, the answer will be the result of 40 and 80, or 120.

The questions are: Who ever worked it out? How did he start?

Now try working the problem by putting 10 in the first column and subjecting it to the dividing and 12 to the multiplying. It will result like this: Ten and 12 will become 5 and 24, which will in turn be changed to 2 and 48 and finally into 4 and 96. Then, striking out the numbers 10 and 2 with their corresponding numbers 12 and 48, leaving the second column figures 24 and 96 to be added—this becomes 120.

There is no escaping it. No matter how large the score, it comes out right with distressing surety. Take the odd numbers. Perhaps there is some twist in the scheme that applies to even numbers. Take 25 and 15. Going right down the column they become 12 and 30; then 6 and 60; then 3 and 120; then 1 and 240; 12 and 6 go out, taking with them 30 and 60. Add 15, 120 and 240. Answer, 375. Multiply 25 by 15 according to our methods. Correct—375.

Now, why is it that the even numbers must be eliminated on the right side when they do not count at all in the addition?

It is plain to be seen that all the numbers in the second column will be even, but by what freak of calculation are those corresponding to the even numbers in the first column of no consequence when the correct sum is to be obtained?

Where no even number results in the first column, as in 15 x 13, there is no complication; 15 and 13 in the process become 7 and 26, then 3 and 52 and finally 1 and 104. Adding 13, 26, 52 and 104 equals 195, the correct sum. There can be no multiplication in figures which will divide down to a place where there are no odd numbers, for the final number must always of necessity be 1. In the sum 16 x 4, 16 divides itself into 8, 4, 2 and 1 successively, while 4 becomes 8, 16, 32 and 64. All of the pairs are crossed out, with the exception of 1 and 64. In that case the addition of the second column will be 64.

Despite the puzzling nature of this formula, there is some mathematical principle by which it can be explained. There is some rule awaiting the fertile minds of the workers by which this "stumper" can be demonstrated to be simplicity itself.

Another quizzer: Why must fractions be discarded? How is it that the result will be true when several units are cast aside? For example, consider the number 47. Dividing by 2 the result will be 23. One whole unit is thrown away. Twenty-three becomes by the same process 11, another unit discarded. Eleven resolves itself into 5, making the third unit passed by. The next step results in 2 and then 1, but why is it that these three units count for nothing?

The mere fact that the explanation is near, that the whole thing is simple if the key can be found, is one that cannot help but draw attention to this novel means of adding.—Philadelphia North American.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The $16.45 Suit

By VINCENT G. PERRY

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The window of the "Leading Gents' Furnishing Store" of the city presented a display that gladdened the hearts of bargain hunters. David Laird could not be classed as a bargain hunter, but just the same he stopped in front of the window and looked over the suits displayed. They were all marked down to $16.45. They looked very well on the dummies and appeared worth the price. It was for a new suit he had come downtown, and these were new suits—so that was all he cared, and he went in to purchase one.

Walter Mitchell, manager of the store and a personal friend of David's, got away from the bargain hunter, who had been debating for over an hour on which suit would wear longest and which would fade soonest, and made for Dave.

"I want a suit, Walt," Dave announced, after he had been welcomed by Mitchell.

"Come right upstairs to our fitting department. We have some splendid new cloth in, and our tailors can have a suit made up in record time when they know it is for you. You are the best advertisement they have."

"No, Walt; I want a ready-made suit—one of those $16.45 ones in the window," he said.

"What?" Mitchell asked in surprise. 'A sixteen-forty-five suit for you? You're joking!"

But Dave assured him he was not.

"Well, Dave, you always have had the name of being the best-dressed man at the club, and the most particular. What will Miss Forsythe say about you appearing in a cheap suit?" Mitchell was not quite convinced of Dave's sincerity.

"It won't make any difference to Hester. Why should it? You didn't see me at her house last night, did you?" Dave's injured tone showed where the contention lay.

"No, but I thought you were out of town. I didn't think it possible that Hester and you could ever become as angry at one another as all that. Your little quarrels always seem to patch up quicker and easier than anyone else's."

"Well, there is no sign of this one patching up, and I hope it never does. Hester has gone too far this time," Dave said decidedly. "How about the suit?"

Dave did not take long in choosing a suit. Almost the first one he tried on fitted him, and he ordered it sent to his apartment. After he had gone out Mitchell looked after him, perplexed. "Whatever has got into Dave Laird to wear a cheap suit, I don't know. Gad, though, even it looked good on him," he said to himself. "I'll bet this quarrel is the cause of the whole thing. I've heard of fellows going to the dogs just over a quarrel with some girl, and this is about the first step down for Dave."

Dave arrived at his apartment before the suit. It was not from necessity he had bought the suit, but from force of habit. It had been his custom to buy a new suit the first of every month, and he was going to find the habit hard to break.

"I'm never going to be extravagant again," he said to himself as he went through his wardrobe. "I'll send all these clothes to the Old People's home. Heavens, wouldn't some old man look great in this pinch-back; it cost $65, and doesn't look much at that!"

The idea of the old man in his smart suit appealed to Dave's sense of humor and he laughed for the first time in two days.

Mitchell surmised correctly when he thought Hester was the cause of Dave's cheap purchase. Dave had always had more money than he knew what to do with, and had little idea how to make himself really miserable. Changing his appearance and "going on the rocks," he thought, would be the most terrible things that could happen to him and would affect Hester most. But as he sat down and thought it over it crossed his mind that perhaps after all he wasn't reaching the desired end.

"I think I'll be a hermit," he said aloud. Buster, his pet Boston terrier, came over to him at the sound of his voice. "Nobody loves me now." The dog licked his hand by way of contradiction. Dave laughed a little more cheerily.

A knock on the door at the foot of his stairs announced the arrival of the suit. Dave opened the parcel and took out the suit. It wasn't so bad, he decided, but it was certainly different from the class of clothes he was accustomed to wearing. What would clothes matter, anyway, when there was no one to admire them? He would give all his money to charities, and be a martyr in the true sense of the word. The more he looked at the suit the more the thought of what others would think of it cropped up in his mind. It didn't look bad from a distance, but a close inspection showed the poor quality of the goods, he saw when he tried it on. It wouldn't be likely that Hester would ever get close enough to him to see its defects. That was the worst of it.

He could not help stopping to admire his stalwart figure as it appeared in the mirror. The thought crept into his mind that it would not be so hard to find a girl to take Hester's place, but he quickly dispelled it. No, no girl could ever take Hester's place. Unconsciously his hand went into the wide pocket of the coat. His fingers touched a stiff piece of paper and he brought out an envelope. Very unconcernedly he looked at it. His name was written on it. He opened it quickly, for it was Hester's writing. He took out the short note and read it hurriedly:

"Dave Dear—I am sorry. It was all my fault and I can't do without you. When I said you couldn't come to the party I didn't mean it at all, and I'll be heart-broken if you don't come. With kisses. HESTER."

Dave glanced at the date hurriedly. It was two days old. She had written it the day before the party. He hurried to the telephone and was talking to Hester before he had time to think twice.

"Hester, will you ever forgive me? I just got your note," he said.

"Just got it now, Dave—how can that be? Why, it was posted two days ago. I can't forgive you. You made me so miserable that my party was a failure. The girls all noticed your absence and whispered about it. You did it just to punish me, didn't you, Dave?" There was the same doubting tone that had been the cause of most of their quarrels, but Dave didn't notice it.

"I'm coming right up," he said, and hung up the receiver before she had an opportunity to refuse him the privilege.

Hester was at the door to meet him. "I know it all now," were the words she greeted him with after they got inside. "But how did you get that letter? Did Walter Mitchell find it and give it to you? I gave the note to father's new secretary to post for me. He remembered that he left it in the suit of clothes he was wearing at the time, and has since returned the suit to Mitchell's because it was a poor fit. Walter found it?"

"But Walter didn't find it," laughed Dave. "I found it in the pocket of this suit—a $16.45 one. How do you like it?"

"It's the one dad's secretary had!" she gasped. "What in the world are you doing in a $16.45 suit?"

"Do you think I look terrible in it?" he asked with a smile.

"You look nice in anything," she smiled back; "but I hope they'll take it back, for you look better in your other ones."

"Well, before I do I think I had better empty the pockets. The first thing I'll take out will be this marriage license. I secured it on the way here. We had better not wait much longer. Goodness knows what our next quarrel will lead to!"

She looked over the license, then looked up with a smile and said:

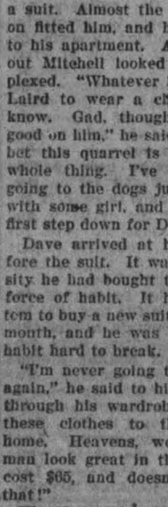
"I'm through with quarrels."

Golden Fleece.

The noted order of the Golden Fleece was a military one instituted by Philip the Good, duke of Burgundy, in 1429, on the occasion of his marriage with the Portuguese princess, Isabella. The title now belongs to both Spain and Austria.

NOW RAISES 600 CHICKENS

After Being Relieved of Organic Trouble by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.



Oregon, Ill.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for an organic trouble which pulled me down until I could not put my foot to the floor and could scarcely do my work, and as I live on a small farm and raise six hundred chickens every year it made it very hard for me.

"I saw the Compound advertised in our paper, and tried it. It has restored my health so I can do all my work and I am so grateful that I am recommending it to my friends."—Mrs. D. M. ALTERS, R. R. 4, Oregon, Ill.

Only women who have suffered the tortures of such troubles and have dragged along from day to day can realize the relief which this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, brought to Mrs. Alters.

Women everywhere in Mrs. Alters' condition should profit by her recommendation, and if there are any complications write Lydia E. Pinkham's Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice. The result of their 40 years experience is at your service.

MARCH TO VICTORY

Courage is a matter of the blood. Without good red blood a man has a weak heart and poor nerves.

In the spring is the best time to take stock of one's condition. If the blood is thin and watery, face pale or pimply, generally weak, tired and listless, one should take a spring tonic. One that will do the spring house-cleaning, an old-fashioned herbal remedy that was used by everybody nearly 50 years ago is still safe and sane because it contains no alcohol or narcotic. It is made up of Blood root, Golden Seal root, Oregon Grape root, Queen's root, Stone root, Black Cherry bark—extracted with glycerine and made into liquid or tablets. This blood tonic was first put out by Dr. Pierce in ready-to-use form, and since then has been sold by million bottles as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. If druggists do not keep this in tablet form, send 50 cents for a vial to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., or branch in Bridgeburg, Ont.

CENTRAL BUTTE, SASK.—"I have used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for a number of years and am pleased to recommend it as a blood purifier. I know it has no equal, as I used it for my boy. My neighbors and friends were surprised with the results; in fact, I do not think he would be alive today had it not been for the 'Medical Discovery.' I also keep it on hand for coughs as it differs so from other medicines, instead of upsetting the stomach as cough syrups do it is good for the stomach. I only wish I had known about Dr. Pierce's medicines sooner."—MRS. PERCY WOOD.

Rosabelle's "Favah."

Never was there a blacker daughter of Africa than was Rosabelle Jackson when, as a girl of but thirteen years, she was taken into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Deene, a childless couple who purposed training Rosabelle into a maid of all work. This they succeeded in doing, and so many admirable traits of character were developed in Rosabelle that they became much attached to the girl, and her affection for them was pronounced. One day when she was nearly thirty years old she came to Mrs. Deene to ask a "favah" of somewhat startling character.

"I wants to ask jess one favah, Mis' Deene," she said. "Dis is de favah. If I do dies befo' you' does I want de favah ob havin' you put a tombstone ovah my grave an' have on it, 'Rosabelle Jackson, only chile of Mistah an' Missus Abner Deene!" — New York Post.

TO SUFFER FROM HEADACHES
Makes Life Miserable

Headaches seems to be habitual with many people. Some are seldom, if ever, free from it, suffering continually with the dull throbbings, the intense pain, sometimes in one part, sometimes in another, and then over the whole head, varying in its severity by the cause which brings it on.

The varieties of headache most common are sick or bilious headache, nervous headache, headache from constipation, debility or indigestion and periodical and spasmodic headache, and undoubtedly the cause must be removed before permanent relief can be had.

Burdock Blood Bitters, that has been on the market for over 40 years, removes the cause of the headaches, and not only does this but also restores the entire system to healthy action and buoyant vigour.

Miss Emily Smith, 204 Bellwoods Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Burdock Blood Bitters. For two years I was greatly troubled with violent headaches, particularly in the morning. I tried everything to cure me until a friend recommended B.B.B. I tried it, and now I am completely cured."

HEALTH AND WEDLOCK.

Conditions That Should Be Studied Before It Is Too Late.

Marriage, from any point of view, is of course a serious proposition, as it may bless or wreck two human lives, if not more. Not the least important of these points of view is that of the health of both parties to the contract. The health commissioner of Pennsylvania in an official bulletin gives the following advice to those about to marry:

"First, a man should not marry unless into a family with a history of reasonable longevity, free from hereditary disease. He should not marry a woman advanced in life, delicate, feeble or afflicted with any inherited deformity. The age most proper for women in this climate is nineteen or twenty years and for men twenty-four or twenty-five years. Women of a nervous temperament, those who are extremely irritable, hysterical, subject to convulsions or to epilepsy from organic disease, ought to avoid matrimony.

"In this country marriages before the ages of twenty-five and nineteen respectively are contraindicated, because, as a rule, previous to these periods of life the body is not fully developed, the different functions are not perfect, and any offspring developed by them in their immature condition must be deficient in vital power."

"CAMEL'S HAIR" BRUSHES.

The Very Best of Them Are Made From Squirrels' Tails.

It may sound rather strange, but it is nevertheless true that no brushes are ever made of camel's hair, yet they are asked for daily and sold as such.

There are very many kinds of hair used in the making of "camel's hair" brushes, such as bear, fox, rabbit, squirrel, etc., and, indeed, one authority states that over 150 sorts of brushes are known as "camel's hair" brushes, but there is only one definition accepted by the British board of trade—i. e., "camel's hair" brushes made from squirrel tails, these being the best and most expensive.

Real camel's hair is absolutely useless for making brushes and resembles soft tow of a yellow-brownish color. The mane of a camel is the only part which could be used, and possibly a dozen brushes could be made from one mane.

As a matter of fact, there are only two specimens of brushes made from the actual hair of a camel in existence. The reason for the term "camel's hair" is the fact that a man named Camel was the first one to make these finer kinds of brushes, and they became generally known as "real camel's hair brushes."—London Answers.

To reassure relatives of officers and men, whose graves lie in territory which has subsequently been the scene of heavy fighting or has fallen into the hands of the enemy, it may be stated that in many instances a cemetery, even if it were entirely destroyed by shell-fire, could be reconstructed from the surveys that have been made; in many instances the exact position of the graves would be known if the cemetery were considerably damaged, but not destroyed; and in all other instances where a grave has been registered and the relatives informed, it will be possible to indicate the aproximate position, even if every trace of the grave itself has disappeared.—London Times.

Discharge Certificates.

The respective Dominion authorities will issue the certificates to ex-members of the Canadian, Australian and New Zealand naval forces, and the Accountant-General of the Navy to members of the Malta and Newfoundland Royal Naval Reserves.

FEEDING OUR FIGHTERS

CANADIAN ARMY IN ENGLAND POSSESSES MODEL SYSTEM.

Menu Has Been Carefully Studied and Placed In Scientific Basis and the Balanced Ration Has Been So Successful That It Is Now Being Copied by Other Army Authorities.

An army travels on its stomach, and the Canadian army in England, by the same token, is said to be travelling very comfortably. Both British and American experts in the matter of feeding soldiers have expressed the unsolicited opinion that no body of soldiers in the world has such good nourishment provided at such moderate cost. Among the Canadians not an atom of fat goes to waste, not a molecule of grain. Every particle is made to render its full quota to build up the flesh, bone and muscle of Canada's fighting men. And yet, with all the enormous saving of food and saving of money to Canada which has resulted from the introduction of scientific feeding of the Canadians in England, the men never looked better and were never seemingly more satisfied.

To the average man in the street talk of "food values" and of "calorific units" (heat units), conveys little intelligence, sounds like high-brow stuff. Well, as a matter of fact, the full working out of such problems is a complicated matter, involving both chemical tests and experiments on men under all conditions of work. But the basic value of all food lies in the amount of heat which a given quantity will give out. The units are the degrees of measurement applied, just like the feet on your gas meter in your cellar, or the kilowatts clicked up by the cog-wheels in the electric light gauge on the wall. To find the "punch" in a piece of raw meat or in a chunk of bread or in anything else you can eat, the scientists weigh it and then burn it to an ash in a little furnace. The resultant heat is measured on a very delicate instrument known as a calorimeter. The action of the human stomach on food is very similar to that of the professor's furnace. Such phrases as "supplying food to the human furnace" are by no means mere figures of speech. The only difference is that in the chemist's tests the results all go up the chimney, while from the stomach they are absorbed into the system.

When the Canadians arrived in England they were put on the same rations as those given the Imperial troops in the British Isles. This ration consisted of meat, bacon, bread or flour, tea, salt and sugar, and was supplemented with a cash allowance of 11 cents per day per man to be spent on supplementing this bill of fare with other foods. The quartermasters of the various Canadian units did the marketing. But as time went on these arrangements proved more and more unsatisfactory. Food was growing scarcer, and this method of individual, unorganized buying in a market with which most of the Canadian quartermasters were unfamiliar was manifestly uneconomical. Complaints were rife. Major-General A. D. McRae soon after his appointment as quartermaster-general of the Canadians decided that there must be a change. He forthwith centralized the buying and sent for an expert on the feeding of men to put the whole matter of catering to troops on a business and scientific basis. Major J. Ewing, chief surgeon for Foley, Welch & Stewart, the Canadian railway contractors, was chosen for the task, and appointed head of the new Canadian army catering department. He had had sixteen years' experience with a firm which feeds 15,000 men.

At this time the waste in food in military camps throughout England, including the Canadian camps, had become a public scandal. The papers contained frequent references to the reckless extravagance with which such establishments were run. Vast quantities of bread, meat and other perfectly good supplies were being daily thrown into the swill pails every mess, and this at a time when the British Government had begun its earnest appeals to the nation to save food. The U-boat had become a deadly menace.

Forthwith Major Ewing introduced a revolution in the feeding of the Canadians. The vital matter of tonnage had made it important that every ounce of food should be made to yield its utmost. So basic data on the calculations of the world's most famous food-value authorities were brought into requisition and the system of daily diet sheets installed in every camp.

Since then every ounce of the daily varied menus is allotted on the basis of its value in calorific units. The compilation of these sheets is a mathematical exactitude, worked out by experts to a decimal point. The daily allowance of each man must contain the 3,200 calorific units essential to his well-being. And this amount the men have been receiving for many months with good results.

The "Self Help System" now prevails in all Canadian camps in England. Instead of the old way of filing past a cook and having their plates filled with a certain specified quantity of the various foods, whether they wanted them or not, the men have dishes set before them on the table. One dish contains the combined portions of bread, another that of the meat stew, another potatoes, etc., for a group of four men. The messing is centralized, with 20 men at each table. Each man helps himself as he would do in a boarding house in civil life. No hogging is allowed, and every man gets all he needs. The result is that no one takes more than he requires, and there is nothing left over on the plates, as in former days.

Efficiency in the kitchen is the watchword of the new method. Every effort is made to increase this efficiency and to eliminate waste by the cooks. All fats are conserved, even to the grease on the dish water. Where there were three big pails of swill in former days there is to-day but one. And the contents of that one are so thin that the local pig dealer, who once gladly carted it off for his grunting porkers, now scarcely thinks it worth while calling for. Garbage cans are locked nowadays, and the sergeant-cook made responsible for their contents. The knack of cooking meat without drying it up, of boiling, roasting and frying foods so as to get their full value, is particularly impressed upon the cooks. Inspectors visit camp kitchens, and in cases where there is complaint stay until the cooking is satisfactory.

Over at the Canadian Cookery School, Major Hart Cameron, of Beaverton, formerly second in command of the 116th Battalion in France, showed the writer over the premises. Here cooks receive a three weeks' course of instruction, both practical and theoretical. The anatomy of the domestic ox, sheep, pig, is explained to them, so that they may cut up meat without waste. All the mysteries of the culinary art, from bread making to preserving fruit, are also imparted by chefs. Indoors tiny working models of every variety of field and camp kitchen are used for instructional purposes. Outdoors in the grounds of the school are life-size cookers of various designs; from that of the field kitchen on wheels to the common wooden barrel, which, having been hastily inserted in a bank and set on fire, leaves its steel hoops to support the earth surrounding the cavity it had made, and thus make an oven for bread. All cooks are required to pass an examination before getting their certificates from the school.

A tribute to the success of the Canadian scheme is the fact that the Australians are copying it and that the Imperial authorities have just adopted an almost similar method based upon our good showing. The other day the major had the honor to be asked to give a lecture upon his work before the Royal Society. Prof. Ernest Starling, representing Lord Rhondda, was in the chair, while such eminent men as Professors Leonard Hill, Waller, Hopkins, Daylines, Gushing, Horace Brown, Dr. Thompson, Col. Cathcart, of the Food Survey Board, and Dr. Hardy, president of the society, were present. In the audience were two American experts sent here to devise a substitute for the U. S. ration, which has never been changed since Washington's day. So interested were these two—Prof. Graham Lusk, professor of physiology at Cornell, and Dr. Russell Chittenden, professor of physiological chemistry at Yale, that they deferred their visit to France so that they might hear the Canadian. After the lecture, Major Ewing received the warmest congratulations from the two Americans and from the distinguishers Britishers.—Special article in Toronto Telegram.

A Few Figures.

It is a far cry back to 1916 and voluntary enlistment, now happily ended in Canada, but another series of figures shows that one religious denomination here has provided what is the highest percentage of recruits in proportion to its number of any part of the British Empire.

The following main figures are taken from the Toronto Telegram of Nov. 1, 1917. In the Province of Ontario the total enlistments to Oct. 1, 1916, are given as 137,907, and the population comprised in the various denominations as given by the newspaper was 2,430,702. The figures stand as follows:

Denomination—	Enlistments.	Proportion.
Anglican	74,827	1 in 6.54
Presbyterian ..	25,224	1 in 20.80
Roman Catholic	14,198	1 in 34.16
Methodists	18,070	1 in 37.12
All others	5,152	1 in 45.25
Jews	436	1 in 61.30

Had other denominations contributed in the same proportion as Anglicans the voluntary recruits in Ontario would have numbered over 373,000 at the date given instead of 137,907.

Nor do the relative proportions vary greatly from the above for the whole of Canada, according to a report which appeared in the Toronto Star of Feb. 3, 1917, relating to enlistments up to Oct. 1, 1916:

Denomination—	Enlistments.	Proportion.
Anglican	165,145	1 in 6.32
Presbyterian ..	70,671	1 in 15.78
Roman Catholic	51,426	1 in 55.09
Methodists ...	35,908	1 in 30.80
All others	30,927	1 in 34.30
Jews	8551	1 in 87.60

Had voluntary recruiting in all denominations throughout Canada equalled that in the Anglican communion, Canada would on the first of October, 1916, have had an army of over 1,163,000 men instead of 355,000. The totals of members of the various denominations appear to have been taken from the census of 1911 by the Star.

Unknown Animals.

Dicky was brought up on an isolated ranch and his only playmates were rabbits, a dog, a cat and home pet pigeons. His mother, planning a visit to her relatives in the east, said to him: "When we go, you'll have some little cousins to play with. You'll like that, won't you, Dicky?"

"I'm not sure," answered the little fellow. "Do cousins have two legs or four?"

REBELLIOUS OUTBREAKS REPORTED IN HUNGARIAN CITIES

Very Little Activity Displayed On Various Battlefronts

FORCES ARE INCREASING

Hindenburg's Forces Are Dwindling While the Allied Troops Are on the Increase--Reasons For Delay in New German Drive

RUMOURS ABROAD

(United Press Service.)

(By William Phillip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, June 28.—Hindenburg's delay in resunfing his west front offensive is mystifying Allied leaders, but is occasioning them no worry. Our ability to stop anew the drive increases proportionately as he holds back.

Astounding rumours are in circulation concerning Hindenburg's reasons. There are stories of a strange new disease devastating whole divisions, thus necessitating the postponement of the drive. Apparently the only foundation for this is the prevalence of what Germans call "Flanders Grippe." This is not serious and lasts only a few days, though accompanied by a high fever. It is not believed that this is holding up operations.

Misleading Rumour.

Another misleading rumour is that dissatisfaction is rampant in the German army and that the High Command is afraid to order an attack. It appears to be true that the Germans are beginning to realize that their battle plans are less God-inspired than they had been led to believe. But their discipline is so that they will march when they are told to.

A third explanation is that the weather and ground are declared to be unfavourable for offensive manouevres. I recently investigated the low lands and the high lands of Northern France. Seldom have they been drier and more adapted to easy movement.

Deeper Reasons.

Hindenburg's delay is due to infinitely deeper reasons. Despite the vast numbers of men at his disposal — this number is as fixed as the laws of the Medes and Persians—he will never have more than now, even with the arrival of released prisoners from Russia. He must carve out victory or defeat with what he has.

Seeing that his forces are dwindling, while the Allied troops are increasing, therefore he is unable to make a move without calculating the cost in men.

Hindenburg must play his hand soon. All the stakes are on the table.

No Fixed Salary For Dog Catcher

The application of Mr. James Gates, the city's successful dog catcher for a regular salary of $8 a week was considered by the Finance Committee of the Council last night, but it was decided to take no action. Mr. Gates has discontinued sleuthing for roaming dogs, and it is reported that quite a number of them are out. Owners must observe the muzzle law when they take their dogs out on leash.

Re-Poll Tax on Returned Men.

The Great War Veterans' Association recently asked the Council to remit the poll tax on returned soldiers. The Finance Committee instructed the City Clerk to reply that the poll tax is imposed by statute, hence the Council has no authority to remit it.

Certainly a Dead One.

Who's dead? asked the stranger, viewing the elaborate funeral procession.

The bloke what's inside the coffin, answered an irreverent small boy.

But who is it? the stranger pursued.

It's the Mayor, was the reply.

So the Mayor is dead, is he? mused the stranger.

Well, I guess, said the small boy, witheringly. D'you think he's having a rehearsal?—Milestones.

Eleven Persons Killed In Raid

Chief of Paris Fire Department Was One of the Victims

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, June 28.—Eleven persons were killed and fourteen hurt in an air raid by the Germans over Paris last night.

During the commotion some of the machines evidently were able to effect penetration for bombs began to drop almost immediately. The damage done by the raiders is reported as considerable. Several careless onlookers were wounded by fragments of shells from anti-aircraft fire. M. Teyssiere, Chief of the Paris Fire Department, died of suffocation while directing the rescue of the injured.

OTTAWA, June 28.—In order to facilitate the operation of the anti-boarding law, an order has been passed giving to an authorized representative of the Canada Food Board the right to enter and search any place where it is suspected that food is illegally held or an offence committed against the Canada Food Board regulations. The order provides that any person duly authorized by the Food Board, who has reason to suspect that any building, vessel, vehicle, receptacle or place contains any food or foodstuffs in excess of the quantities prescribed by law, or who has reason to suspect that any offence against the reulation of the Canada Food Board is being or has been committed, upon or within such premises, may enter the latter at any time of the day for purposes of examination, search and inspection.

BRITISH DESPATCHES

The British Patrols Inflicted Casualties on the Germans in Raiding Operations

HEAVY FIRING HEARD

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 28.—Considerable artillery activity developed last night on both sides in the region southeast of Gommecourt, southwest of Arras. British patrols inflicted casualties on the Germans in clashes in this area.

THE STATEMENT READS.

A raid attempted by the enemy Wednesday night against one of our posts in the neighbourhood of Moyenneville, south of Arras, was repulsed with loss. Part of our troops carried out a successful daylight raid yesterday near Mericourt, northeast of Amiens. It captured few prisoners without suffering casualties. During the night our own and the enemy's artillery was active in the neighbourhood of Rossignol Wood, southeast of Gommecourt. Casualties were inflicted upon the enemy in this neighbourhood by our patrols.

Heavy Gun Fire.

(Special to The Examiner.)

Survivors Landed Near Shelburne

Special to Examiner:

HALIFAX, June 28.—A boat load of survivors from a ship torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine off the American coast was landed near Shelburne to-day by a fishing smack. The survivors were found drifting sixty miles off Seal Island, Yarmouth. They said they had been in the life boat eight days, keeping alive on a very small quantity of bread and water. It is the first time German submarines have been reported as finding victims north of New York.

Canadian Press:

NEW YORK, June 28.—Landing of twenty-four survivors from Steamship Dwinsk at Shelburne N.S., to-day definitely accounts for all but two boat loads of the crew. Three boat loads containg 67 survivors had been previously reported missing. Seven boats in all left the vessel when she was torpedoed June 18. The Dwinsk was a troop ship returning to the United States. She had no soldiers aboard.

AMERICAN TROOPS WILL BE FORMED INTO ONE COMPLETE FIGHTING UNIT

(Special to The Examiner)

LONDON, June 28.—Premier Lloyd George in addressing the Commons last night threw an interesting light on the arrangement made which American troops were being brigaded with the British and French. He said it was done with the understanding that British recruits should replace the Brigaded Americans as soon as possible so the latter could be formed into American Divisions.

FOUR YEARS AGO TO-DAY GERMANY SOUGHT OPPORTUNITY TO CREATE WORLD CONFLICT

The Assassination of the Archduke Ferdinand Provided the Excuse Germany Was Waiting For—The Situation To-day.

IN ANXIOUS CONCLAVE

(United Press.)

(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, June 28.—Four years ago to-day the Archduke Franz Ferdinand heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne, was assassinated by Serbian fanatics. In revenge for this crime, Austria-Hungary tried to make a vassal State of Serbia, and thus gave to the German militarists an opportunity to bring about the world conflict. They had long been planning for a time when they could be sure of the dual monrachy's support as an active and willing ally. This was the cause of the war. On the fourth anniversary of the Archduke Franz Ferdinand's murder, the German militarists are gathering together in anxious conclave beacuse the German Government has been compelled to declare to the Reichstag that peace cannot be won on the battlefield. It has required three years and eleven months of fighting to exact this confession from Germany.

The vast dreams of pan-German that made International outlaws of Hohenzollern warriors, cannot be realized by force of arms. The German military machine who was ready for instant use on the assassination of Franz Ferdinand, is no longer able to keep up its bold front of assured victory. The machine has failed.

Reveals Fate.

Von Kuehlmann, the third Foreign Minister Germany has called to office during these past four years, has declined to conceal any longer from the German people the fate of the machine which is so relentless in its sacrifices of German man power. The four years from Franz Ferdinand to Von Kuehlmann, mark the shattering of the Hohenzollern ambition to rule the world by force of arms. There probably will be no further painful efforts by Von Hindenburg to rehabilitate the reputation of the German army. They will be in vain. Von Kuehlmann's words are ringing throughout Germany not to the forgotten. They soon will be singing in the ears of soldiers, who will then know that in every future German offensive they are dying in vain for victory.

Demoralization Next.

Four years after Franz Ferdinand's death, disquietude has gripped Germany. Demoralization is the next condition the Kaiser must face unless he publicly abandons the worship of militarism. Probably that state will be reached before the fifth anniversary of the war starts, but if not the war will continue to the sixth and seventh anniversaries or more, if necessary, until the complete triumph of democracy is manifest to the whole world.

ANOTHER AUSTRIAN ATTEMPT TO THROW OUT PEACE FEELERS

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 28. — Another Austrian attempt to throw out peace feelers via Switzerland has failed, it was reported here to-day in press despatches from Zurich.

These despatches stated that Austria-Hungary, through an unofficial representative in Switzerland during the past few days had attempted to discover the Allied standpoint regarding "important questions." The emissary failed completely and returned to Vienna.

Increase In Price Of Corn

Canada Food Board Will Take Action to Curb Present Condition

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 28. — Complaints that as a result of the Canada Food Board's new order regarding the compulsory use of flour substitutes, the price of corn flour has been substantially increased and that an increase in the baker product is threatened, have come to the attention of the Food Board. The Board declares that the price of corn flour is based on the price of corn in the United States. The Board sets the maximum profit to be made by the miller at 25 cents per barrel. During the past ten days the price of corn in the United States has advanced 30 cents or has risen from $1.85 per bushel to $2.15. Corn now contracted for should be sold when ground at an advance of 50 cents per barrel on the basis of the increase in question but on old contracts there is no justification for an vance in the price such as has occurred.

It is pointed out that the corn of the increased price is not yet being milled, therefore on present stocks there is no reason for an increase. The Board does not state what will be done to control this sort of thing. It is hinted, however, that the flour business is licensed and that unwarranted increases may result in the loss of licenses.

Officers Will Not Be Compelled To Return Overseas

Special to Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 28.— Many officers now on furlough in Canada will not be compelled to return. By an arrangement recently made, officers home on "compassionate" furlough are turned over to the Adjutant General here and struck off the strength of the overseas forces. These include men who have been allowed to come home on furlough for domestic reasons designated as "compassionate."

Leave Refused.

Such men will now, instead of being responsible to the overseas organization, be at the disposal of the authorities here. Some will be placed in charge of depot battalions. Some will be put at instructional work. Some may again be sent overseas but all such as are on compassionate leave are for the present struck from the strength of the overseas forces.

There are quite a number of such officers in Canada at present, but there are no more coming. Leave for any reason whatever is now refused overseas men.

BOLSHEVIKI OVERTHROWN

Despatch Says Moscow Has Been Captured by General Korniloff Assisted by the German Fleet

DEATH OF THE CZAR

LONDON, June 28.—Out of a maze of conflicting stories of the latest developments in Russia, one thing seems to be corroborated from all sources, though unofficially, namely, that Nicholas Romanoff, former Czar, was slain by the Bolsheviki after a mockery of a trial. The Wolff News Bureau, a semi-official German agency, which might be expected to have reliable information, carries a story today. Other reports tell of a counter revolution with the Bolsheviki leaders in flight, Moscow is in the hands of Pro-German troops, and the Grand Duke Nicholas has been proclaimed Emperor.

The Copenhagen newspapers, the Agency despatch adds, gives prominence to a Berlin despatch quoting the Tages Zeitung of that city as follows: "It is believed here that the Bolsheviki government will soon be overthrown and that Kerensky is the man of the future in Russia."

SOVIETS OVERTHROWN.

Advices declare that the supporters of the Grand Duke Nicholas have overthrown the Soviets throughout the Siberian provinces of Irkotsk, Blagovieshtchensk and Ehabarovsk. The defeat of the Bolsheviki is said to have been made possible by the victories of Ozecho Slovak forces and the treachery of the Red Guard, who murdered their officers and then surrendered.

WILL SEND COMMISSION.

WASHINGTON, June 28.— Plans for sending a commission to assist that country economically and industrially have advanced to a point where it is possible to announce on official authority that the personnal of the commission is now being discussed.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 28.—According to unconfirmed reports to-day the Bolsheviki government in Moscow has been overthrown, says a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Copenhagen. The report says Moscow was captured by General Korniloff, assisted by the German fleet.

Advices from the same sources assert that Grand Duke Nicholas has been proclaimed Emperor. Nikolai Lenine, Premier, and Leon Trotsky, Minister of War, are said to have fled to the Murman coast. General Kaledines is said to have co-operated with General Korniloff.

First Announcement.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, June 28.—The first announcement approaching official confirmation of the death of Nicholas Romanoff, the former Czar, was received here to-day. The Frankfurter Zeitung, according to the Exchange Telegraph's Copenhagen correspondent, declares that Foreign Minister Tchitcherin wired from Moscow to the Russian Minister at Barnstadt, Germany, that Nicholas has been killed.

Murdered in a Train.

(Special to The Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, June 28. — The Wolff Agency announced to-day that it learns from Russia that the former Czar was murdered in a train in which he was leaving Ekaterinburg immediately after Czecho-Slovak forces captured that town. From the some source it is reported that Grand Duke Alexis, the former Czarevitch, died a fortnight ago following a long illness.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, JUNE 27, 1918.

FALL WHEAT SEED.

The attention of the farmers of Peterboro district is called to the important announcement from the Ontario Minister of Agriculture, in regard to the urgent necessity of conserving as much as possible wheat suitable for fall seeding. The partial failure of the fall wheat crop in Ontario this year makes it necessary for farmers to make early arrangements for a supply of seed, and all farmers who have on hand a supply for which there is no demand locally, are asked to notify either the District Representative or the Department of Agriculture so that arrangements may be made to have the seed distributed. Hon. Mr. Henry points out that the food situation is such that there should be a large acreage of fall wheat in the province and in order to make this possible the cooperation of the farmers in the obtaining and distributing of the available seed supply is necessary. The matter is important and should not be neglected if Ontario is to do her part in food production.

THE NEW ALLOWANCE.

The new order issued at Ottawa in regard to the providing of civilian clothing for men discharged from the army will be appreciated by returned soldiers in so far as the size of the allowance is concerned, although there is one feature about the new regulation that might reasonably be altered. Under the old system a discharged man was given $8 to purchase civilian clothing in summer and $13 for the same purpose in winter. The amount was, of course, utterly inadequate, and has been the subject of much complaint. Under the new order the soldier on being discharged is given an order on any tailor in his city for $35. If the outfit he selects costs more than that amount he must pay the difference, while if the cost is less than $35 the amount saved goes to the soldier.

This part of the order will bring general satisfaction, but the same thing cannot be said of the new rule which requires a soldier on discharge to turn in his military great coat, tunic, trousers and cap. Hitherto the discharged man has been allowed to keep his military outfit and has been given the privilege of appearing in khaki at patriotic events, veterans' march-outs, church parades and similar functions. This has been appreciated both by the men themselves and by the public, and future turn-outs of the G.W.V.A. will lose much of their picturesque nature if the new order is strictly adhered to, as the men discharged from this time on will not be able to turn out in uniform.

A NEW DRIVE.

All indications point to an early resumption of the German offensive in France. Lloyd George announced the other day that it might only be a matter of hours before the enemy's blow was struck, and a despatch to the London Chronicle yesterday says: "Important events are developing on the west front. German resources are cunningly manoeuvring into position for a resumption of the offensive."

That the next attack of the enemy will be a formidable one, cannot be doubted. In spite of their heavy losses in the Amiens, Flanders, and Chemin des Dames and Noyon-Montdidier offensives, the Germans still have plenty of reserves. One well-informed war correspondent estimates that the enemy after reorganizing all the divisions that were shattered in the recent fighting, will have more than 200 divisions on the west front, with nearly 300,000 reserves in depots, and another 450,000, comprising boys of the seventeen year old class, available in the autumn. These figures indicate that the Germans are still capable of many formidable blows, and Lloyd George, in the fear that the allied peoples would attach too much importance to the splendid victory of the Italians, which decisivt as it was as far as stopping the offensive of the Austrians was concerned, does not mean the speedy end of the war by any means, has sounded a note of warning that the next few months will be anxious ones for the allied cause. The delay in France has been invaluable to the allies, however; their reserves have been growing steadily with the arrival of fresh divisions from the United States. It is from our neighbours to the south that will come the legions that will eventually give the allies a numerical superiority over the enemy that will make possible a swift and effective offensive. In the meanwhile the feeling among the allied commanders in regard to the coming German offensive is one of confidence in the ability of General Foch's machine to parry all enemy blows and prevent the German high command from realizing any of its objectives.

CONSERVING CANADA'S TRADE

The Examiner has received a copy of a most interesting pamphlet by Hon. Frederick Nicholls, head of the Canadian General Electric Company, and chairman of the Special Committee of the Senate of Canada on the Conservation of Canadian Trade. The book contains addresses and letters in which Senator Nicholls has dwelt at some length on this most important subject, and has made many suggestions which should be of value. Among the subjects treated are trade conditions after the war, the necessity of preparedness, and the responsibility of the Government. The subject is a momentous one and Senator Nicholls has evidently devoted much of his time and his great experience as a manufacturer to an extensive investigation of the situation. The foreword to the pamphlet indicates the nature of the results of his study of the subject:

The uncertainty regarding trade conditions after the war is presently giving cause for grave anxiety to business men throughout Canada, says Senator Nicholls.

The balance of trade is now greatly in our favour and Canada is prosperous; in fact so prosperous that little heed is being given to preparation for the inevitable 'slump' that will be experienced when the demand for our output diminishes and present high prices are no longer current.

Undoubtedly much could be accomplished by the mobilization of our resources, intelligent cooperation in producing and selling, and courageous effort on the part of the government, which is well advised as to the problems to be met.

In time of war we should prepare for peace, and it will be unfitting to our dignity as a patriotic and resourceful Dominion if prompt and decisive preparations are not made to meet the new conditions which we will soon be called upon to face.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

This war will end when somebody is licked. We are not going to be licked," is the way Lieut. Cenal of the famous French Blue Devils looks at the situation.

American troops are to be congratulated upon their latest exploit of cleaning out Belleau Wood and destroying a force of 1200 Germans.

Sarnia's war chest campaign, which resulted in the raising of $117,00, has been one of the most successful evens of its its kind staked in Canada. Sarnia can evidently raise money as well as championship hockey teams.

King George is billed to appear in a new role on July 4th, when he will pitch the first ball at a ball game in London.

There is an unusual amount of sickness among German soldiers, undoubtedly caused by the bad news from the Italian front.

The Lethbridge Herald joins in the chorus of knocks for the Senate by suggesting that Hon. T. W. Crothers would make an ideal senator.

The German soldiers are surprised at the Austrian defeat. Probably the Austrians feel much the same way about it.

Ex-Premier Asquith proposes to refer the Irish question to the Dominion for settlement. This would be a pleasant little task for Premiers Borden, Hughes and Company in the intervals between making speeches and posing for photographs.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

A SERIOUS SITUATION.

(Mail and Empire.)

The wheat flour situation is very serious indeed, and would warrant much sharper effort at cutting down consumption of it until September. In Canada only 20,000,000 bushels of wheat are left, or only one-seventh of what we are sending overseas this year. There is not enough for Canadians on any normal basis and for our Allies overseas also. The new regulations are based on real need, and will be obeyed accordingly.

A DOUBTFUL STORY.

(Toronto Globe)

The United States papers have a story about a Kentucky Colonel who stole a consignment of whiskey and sold it. The Cleveland Plain Dealer doubts the last part of the story.

THIS AWFUL WAR

(Windsor Record)

Pretty soon the men will have to carry around knitting bags to hold their birth certificate, marriage certificate, passports, medical examination sheets and registration cards.

WHICH?

(Lethbridge Herald)

The Calgary Albertan is so enamored with titles that it is rather offended that Hon. T. W. Crothers was not recognized. A title, at The Albertan's value, would be well placed on the Minister of Labor. Is that a reflection on the title or the Minister?

PUBLIC UTILITIES AND THE GOVERNMENT

(Springfield Republican)

There are two classes of utilities—those which would have been bankrupt had there been no war, and those whose solvency is affected by war conditions. With the credit of many public service corporations so seriously impaired, it is not clear that the government would be justified in using the nation's money for their relief without requiring them to undergo extensive financial reorganization, for which the time is probably not opportune.

SUCCESSFUL CAMOUFLAGE

(The Portland Oregonian)

It is well known that the Germans compel prisoners of war to praise the treatment they receive and permit no letters to pass which contain complaints, but one American prisoner evaded their vigilance when he wrote to his parents at Minneapolis the following apparently laudatory letter: "We are having the very best treatment. The Germans provide us with the best of everything. We could not be better treated if we were with our own people. There is only one thing we could wish for and that is to be at Lakewood Park." Lakewood Park is a cemetery.

THE NEED FOR OPTIMISM

(The Vicksburg Herald)

In great and prolonged military operations mistakes and consequqent reverses are unavoidable. But considered as a whole, in any fair, intelligent and discriminating estimate of its advantages and disadvantages, study of the campaign leads to the conclusion that the escape of grave operations mistakes and consequent disaster testifies incontestably to the skill of the commanders and courage and fortitude of the soldiers. This is view that for its influence, upon morale both at home or in the field of action should be cultivated by all who have the winning of the war at heart.

BUMPER CROWD AT FARMER'S PICNIC NEAR INDIAN RIVER

'Twas Held Under the Auspices of the Farmers' Clubs of East Peterboro'—Big Day of Sports and Games—Addresses on the Work and Progress of the United Farmers of Ontario.

BROUGHT FARMERS TOGETHER

The Farmers' Clubs of East Peterborough, representing the townships of Douro, Dummer, Asphodel and Otonabee, held a picnic yesterday in the grove a short distance north of the C.P.R. station at Indian River. As a picnic it deviated but little from the stereotyped form that has done service for generations, and has been specially favoured in rural communities; and the more sophisticated city crowds have added few frills to the general idea. The people came early from far and near, a great outpouring of producers whose automobiles jined the roadsides in two long strings with the nearby yards and fields showing a considerable collection. The old reliable horse and buggy outfit was almost lost in the general convey ance scheme, hidden behind the solid walls of motor cars. This was no annual well established picnic. It was the first held under the auspices of the neighbouring clubs of the four townships, and yet there were hundreds of farmers with their wives and families, with a few stray strangers from the villages and from the city rank outsiders who could not show the fraternal button of the Farmers' Clubs in their lapels, nor the tanned complexions and calloused hands that unmistakably differentiated the rural producers from the pale faces of the city folk.

The attendance was the first impressive feature of the gathering, for there were obviously more than one thousand persons on the grounds. And close upon that very significant fact, if it may be regarded as an indication of the interest the Farmers' "Union" is arousing, were the evidences of prosperity. The long lane of motor cars certainly represented bank accounts, otherwise the new generation of farmers have departed from the traditions of their sires and are living as precariously as their city dependents. The young ladies, and there were bevies of them, displayed dresses, and particularly sweater coats, as gay as any you see in the city. You might have lifted the crowd of girls from the country grove and set them down in Victoria Park on any band concert night without noticing any loss of vivacity or fashions, and you might have concluded that the exchange offered an appreciable improvement in deportment.

If the Farmers' Clubs have done nothing nothing else, they have provided a common meeting ground for the rural communities, and this social solvent is manifestly but a means to the end which may or may not be realized as fully as some of the leading spirits of the movement expect. In this social aspect of rural clubdom, there were the athletic contests in which the young men competed, showing real sportsmanship and considerable ability. Since the Farmers' Clubs hope to make farm conditions more inviting to the young men, that they will be induced to remain on the farms, it must be apparent that athletic meets, baseball and football games, will provide attractions that have been too long scorned in the rural economic scheme.

Perhaps some means will be found to elicit the interest of the young women more than the humdrum of home life. Rural communities in some sections of the United States offer valuable suggestions in this direction. At present there seems to be little activity for the girls hereabouts, but to reflect the financial standing of their homes and beside them the young men look gawky and unpolished. Many girls in the country are passable pianistes, but how few of their young men have had any musical training. It is, therefore, apparent to a casual observer of rural life hereabouts that there is a vast work to be done by Farmers' Clubs in this social sphere, if it is not obscured by the salient consideration of personal benefit, financial and otherwise, which has too long proven a baleful loadstone to far too many farmers.

Without proceeding further into the maze of speculation inspired by yesterday's throngs it is surely apparent that this incidental social question should not be brought in tailing the list of objects of the Farmers' Clubs. True, the social instinct naturally asserts itself upon opportunity, but subtle direction would give the younger generation a new appreciation of their community life, and a new valuation of the little things their parents deemed unprofitable, an application of the "finish" that seems to be confined to the daughters of the farm.

The general committee in charge of the picnic at Indian River was composed of the following men, representing six different Farmers Clubs—Samuel Armstrong of Indian River S. W. Anderson of Warsaw, James White of Indian River, Ernest McDonald of South Dummer, M. D. Sullivan of Douro, W. Thompson of Westwood, and Charles Thompson of Mather's Corners, Otonabee.

The Addresses.

During the afternoon two addresses were delivered dealing with the objects of the United Farmers of Ontario, and their Co-operative Company. Mr. R. W. E. Burnaby, president of the United Farmers' Co-operative Company Limited, and Mr. H. B. Cowan of "Farm and Dairy" were the speakers. Col. Johnston of Otonabee was chairman of this part of the proceedings, which was followed by quite a large section of the gathering. Mr. Burnaby is a farmer in York township, north of Toronto, who is said to have been shrewd enough in the real estate boom days in Toronto to have cleaned up a comfortable profit on his transactions, and wise enough to have seen the approaching decline, the eventuation of which found him working a big farm of 70 acres.

Speaking of the work of Hon. Mr. Crerar in the Dominion Cabinet, Mr. Cowan stated that the Minister's interest in the farmers had kept boys on the farms who would otherwise have been taken for military service. He also used his influence to give the farmers a voice in the fixing of cheese prices, and thirdly when the Government got a chance to purchase feed in the United States Mr. Crerar was instrumental in diverting half of the supply to the United Farmers' Co-operative Company for sale and distribution to its members.

Mr. Cowan denied that the United Farmers had any design of creating class cleavage. There are now 20,000 United Farmers in this province, and recently there have been a number of new locals formed in Peterborough townships. He alleged that the daily newspapers had sought the sensational elements in the recent conventions of farmers, and had not published complete reports.

"Don't take reports of farmers' meetings from the daily papers," Mr. Cowan warned his audience.

Other Features.

There was ample amusement provided during the afternoon. The Bethel baseball team, including a number of Peterboorugh school boys working on farms, defeated the Douro team by 14 to 4. Copp and Allen was the battery for Douro and Armstrong and Ryan for Bethel.

A football match between Warsaw and Westwood proved decidedly interesting, especially in view of the decline of this pastime, so general in the country a few years ago. The Warsaw lads showed better form and condition and had the bulk of the play, but the best they could do was lay up a score of 1-0, indicating the defence Westwood put up.

After supper there were other events. The tug-of-war was in progress at seven-thirty o'clock. The dancing pavilion was as great a magnet as ever Mr. Charlie Armstrong of Havelock, was floor master.

Among those from Peterborough at the picnic were Mr. C. H. Pennefather, Mr. J. R. Corkery, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Gillespie and Mr. H. B. Cowan. Dr. Munroe of Warsaw, Mr. Richardson and Mr. Keefer of Norwood, were also noticed in the crowd and there were others from Norwood, Havelock and Keene. In short the picnic was an unqualified success.

Son of Late Crown Attorney R. E. Wood will join the Peterboro Medical Profession.

Dr Edward H. Wood, son of the late Mr. R. E. Wood, Crown Attorney in the city, will next week join the medical profession in Peterboro, locating on Charlotte street.

Since graduating from Queen's University, Dr. Wood has had a wider experience in surgical as well as medical work than most doctors. As house surgeon of the Methodist Episcopal Hospital and German Hospital in New York for two years, his success made for him a name in the profession in that city. Later in 1915, he was appointed as surgical specialist in the 43rd General Hospital, British Expeditionary Force, which position he held until returning a few months ago to Canada to practice.

Mrs. Wood will join Dr. Wood in the city next week.

ST. JOHN'S CHORISTERS ENJOYED OUTING

Hospitality of Mrs. Ryerson Ritchie Was Appreciated.

Favoured with lovely weather St. John's choristers and their guests, to the number of one hundred and ten, thoroughly enjoyed a day's sail on the "Stoney Lake" to the lovely summer home on the Otonabee of Mrs. Ryerson Ritchie, who excelled themselves in kindness to their visitors. Lunch was served in the open by Coleman Brothers, who, while strictly obeying the food regulations, served a dainty repast both there and later, supper being served on the boat on the return journey. Harwood and Gore's Landing were also visited and races run off. The Rev. Canon Davidson and Dr. Cameron, Warden, were present, and the thanks of all present were heartily accorded to Mr. H. W. Morphet and Mr. R. J. Devey, whose splendid arrangements provided one of the most pleasant choir trips in the history of St. John's choir.

Long President of Phelps, Dodge & Co., and Was Philanthropist Who Gave $375,000 Worth of Radium to General Memorial Hospital of New York—Had Relatives in Peterborough County.

New York, June 27.—Dr. James Douglas, mining engineer, and for many years president and chairman of the board of Phelps, Dodge & Co., copper mine owners, died at his home in Spuyten Duyvil, on Wednesday in his 81st year. He had been ill for several months.

Dr. Douglas amassed a large fortune in business and was well known as a philanthropist. Several years ago he presented three and three-quarter grammes of radium, valued at $375,000, to the General Memorial Hospital in this city, for its use for all time in cancer and other work. The gift represented the work of a score of years of the National Radium Institute in the West on carnatite ores. Dr. Douglas was associated with Dr. Howard A. Kelly, of Baltimore, in the work, and the product, seven and one-half grammes, was divided equally, the latter presenting his portion to the Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Dr. Douglas was born in Quebec, Canada, the son of Dr. James Douglass, who had a wide surgical practice, and is reputed to be the founder of the first hospital for the treatment of insanity in Canada. Dr. Douglas was graduated from Queens University, Canada, and completed his education in Germany. He then took a post graduate course in medicine and Chemistry in Laval University, Quebec, and later became professor of chemistry in Morrin College.

Moves to United States.

It was in the Harvard Hill Mines, and other mining properties in Lower Canada that Dr. Douglas acquired his first experience in mining and metallurgy. In 1875 he came to this country to take charge of the metallurgical operations of the Chemical Copper Company, at Phoenixville, Pa., where he later introduced the system of separating precious metals from copper by an electrolyptic method of refining.

Five years later, in 1880, Dr. Douglas went to Arizona, where he became interested in several mining operations. A year later he acquired copper claims in the Warren district, acting in the interests of the late Wm. E. Dodge and the late D. Willis James of Phelps, Dodge & Co. In 1865 these properties had become so productive that they were absorbed into the Copper Queen Consolidated Mining Company, of which Dr. Douglas became president.

Dr. Douglas then acquired several other mines, which were taken over by Phelps, Dodge & Co., in 1908, of which he also became president. At this time the Phelps-Dodge Company became a $50,000,000 corporation. In the early eighties Dr. Douglas began the construction of a standard guage railway running through the properties, which eventually became known as the El Paso and the Southwestern Railroad, a thousand miles in length. Dr. Douglas was the president of the road at the time of his death.

Wrote Several Books.

Dr. Douglas was the author of several books, including "Canadian Independence," "Quebec in the Seventeenth Century," "New England and New France," and a biography of his father, entitled "Journals and Reminiscences of James Douglas." He was a member of several scientific societies in this country and Europe, and was the winner of the gold medal of the Institution of Mining and Metallurgy of London, in 1915. In 1916, he was elected chancellor of Queens University.

In 1860 Dr. Douglas married Miss Naomi Douglas, daughter of Captain Walter Douglas, of Quebec. He had six children, four of whom are living, two sons and two daughters.

Mr. George Douglas of Young's Point is a nephew of the deceased.

VETERANS ARE AFTER MRS. GORDON WRIGHT

KINGSTON, Ont., June 27. — The army and navy veterans have, in a strong resolution, taken Mrs. Gordon Wright, president of the W. C. T. U., to task for her "slanderous and unwarranted statements against the soldiers and their living while fighting on the western front."

The Veterans demand that the Department of Justice "deal with Mrs. Wright in such a way as will make future attacks on Britain and the Canadian soldier impossible."

They "consider the attack of Mrs. Wright far more vicious than that of Captain Bailey, and the authors should not be permitted to escape the consequences."

Rose Exhibition In Toronto Will Be Grand Display

The annual exhibition of the Ontario Rose Society will be held in Toronto on Wednesday, July 3rd at Jenkins new art galleries, 28 College street. Many new and rare varieties will be shown, in addition to hundreds of well known roses that should make a grand display. It is hoped that Peterboro will be represented among the visitors. Membership in the Ontario Rose Society offers the monthly bulletin and the annual review published exclusively for members, and also admission to the exhibition. Recently a number of Peterboro people have joined the Society, and if they are in Toronto on Wednesday, their membership tickets will admit them to the exhibition, half the proceeds of which will be donated to the Canadian Women's Association for the Welfare of the Blind.

Membership in the Rose Society is one dollar a year.

Forms are available at the Examiner Office for citizens who desire to join the society.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements, must, to secure insertion, be signed with the writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—However sincere the Food Controller may be in the carrying out of his duties, he is going the wrong way about it in conserving the food and doing justice to the hard-working man. If such a man is rationed on heart, liver or tongue, and one slice of bread, with an occasional feed of fish, day in and day out, it is too much to expect him to execute his arduous labours for any length of time without injury to himself. It may be that his work of production is as conducive to winning the war as are the efforts of our brave boys in the trenches, and for that reason the same attention should be given to his food supply. The man in the office, or behind the counter, or otherwise engaged in light work, does not need the same amount or kind of food, and therefore the rationing does not affect him in the same manner. There is no necessity for starving, or partly starving, any one, if people were compelled not to waste anything. It is the waste and not the use of provisions that should be looked after. We all know what wanton waste has been committed by cold storage when tons of meat, eggs and other provisions have been held up for exorbitant prices until they rotted and had to be thrown away, not only in Winnipeg, Toronto and other places, including our own city, to which reference was made in at least one of our own churches, but the matter was hushed up and the offenders were not punished. The whole cold storage business should be taken over by the Government at once, and administered in the interests of the people at large.

Yours truly,
ECONOMY.

THE CITY CLOCKS ARE WIDE APART

Difference in Time About Six Minutes. Which is Right?

The Market Hall clock and the Post Office clock show a difference in time of about six minutes, and everybody is topsy-turvy as to which is correct, and it can result in some peculiar situations, if you care to try them out.

If you go to work by the slow clock and quit by the fast one you just work 24 minutes per day less than you should.

If you go to work by the fast one, and quit by the slow one, you work 24 minutes over the day.

If you take your time from the fast one all through the day you start early and quit early by the slow one, you start late and quit late.

The fast one may be trying to add a little to the daylight saving scheme and the slow one to gradually do away with it.

To say the least, the situation is not just right, and it is hoped that the two clocks will get their faces together again shortly and decide on whichever is telling the truth, so far as the time of day is concerned.

WOODMEN OF THE WORLD

EXCURSION TO LINDSAY, JULY 8

Under the auspices of the above Society this most enjoyable sail will take place on Monday, July 8th. A hearty invitation is exended to the public to join the members on this trip.

Taking into consideration that the railway companies will not grant any reduction in fares, our neighbouring Woodmen of Lindsay have arranged with the Steamer Stoney Lake Nav. Co. and ourselves, to run their excursion the following day by boat to Peterboro. By doing this it enables us to bring down the fares to the smallest possible margin, and we hope the public will take advantage of this and make the trip a complete success. Tickets will be limited so as to have comfort on the boat.

For further particulars see posters.

Claims That Investigation Has Exonerated From Any Stigma Of Being Deserter

Pte. Patrick O'Leary, Central Figure in the Guelph Raid, Makes Statement to Press of His Army Service—Denies That He Was Ever Student There For Priestly Honours—Has Relatives in Peterboro

LONDON, June 28.—"Here is my record. Let those who mouth their patriotism show which of them can place his personal case against mine" said Pte. Patrick J. O'Leary, cousin of the famous Michael O'Leary, V.C., when interviewed at Carling Heights Camp regarding the charges made concerning him in connection with the Guelph Novitiate raid.

Although up to the present he has sought to avoid publicity, he said, he has at last decided to lay the facts before the public, and demand a retraction of what he calls "the gross untruths" voiced at Guelph by Rev. Messrs Spence, Palmer and others.

"My mother in Toronto is a widow," he continued, "my father having died of wounds received in the South African war. Three brothers of his went to South Africa, of whom two died in the service, and of the two living one is the postmaster of Cork Ireland.

"I have several cousins in the present war. The two O'Connors went with the 95th, in Peterboro, and a third, David O'Grady, who won the D. C. M., was killed in action.

"Unlike some of those who are abusing me, when war broke out, I and my cousin, Martin Hayes, were in Montreal and we volunteered at once. He was accepted, and was with the Canadians when they fired their first shot. I was turned down as undersize. As there was some prospect of the Americans joining in the war, I went to join the American regulars to be ready and trained, but was turned down at Plattsburg. I was also turned down by the navy. In May, 1915, I returned and volunteered at the armories in Toronto, and was turned down. I worked in New York a while, then in the hope that the requirements would be slackened, paid my way back to Toronto in 1916, and made it, being attached to the 95th Battalion under Lieut.-Col. Barker.

"In England I worked hard, and got on the first draft for France. I was sent to have three teeth extracted, but Capt. Crawford, without reason, extracted eighteen, most of them absolutely sound. That put me out of it. They wanted to discharge me, but I protested. They gave me a false set and sent me home. I had gone down from 115 to 80 pounds. I was discharged here in September, 1917, after 20½ months int the army, with a conduct sheet marked "very good."

Not Studying for Priesthood.

"Anxious to do what I could, I went to work on a farm near Peterboro, in April, no longer in any hope of gaining a place in the ranks, I went to the Novitate and abtained employment as gardener. I was not studying for the priesthood.

"Now for those lying slanders made by men at Guelph that disgrace the creeds they profess. They say that I was boarded at Kingston, put in Catogary A; escaped; was apprehended; boarded at Toronto; again escaped, and sought refuge in the Novitate. If they are men they will produce their proof or make retraction to which I am entitled. If they follow any other course they will comdemn themselves.

"I never saw Kingston. I was never a defaulter, but always have been a volunteer. When I heard, after the raid in Guelph, that it was supposed to extend to me, I went to make inquiries of the authorities at Guelph, I was courteously received but a moment later taken into custody as a deserter, sent to London under guard and compelled to take off my G. W. V. A. badge, and put in the clink.

Claims Exoneration Here.

"Lieut.-Col. Youngs, O. C. of the 1st Depot Battalion, examined my papers, heard my story and completely exonerated me. He told me I was no defaulter, commended me for being a volunteer, took me out of the defaulters' company and attached me to the headquarters company. He then made me his batman, and I am in that position at present.

"I was put in D. category, and the colonel told me that I could claim my discharge. I told him if I was fit to let me to go to France.

"Today I was again boarded, and managtd to squeeze through in A. and have asked for a place in the first draft.

"I was one of the witnesses called when Capt. MacAuley made the raid at Guelph. I heard Capt. Hingston, a returned chaplain from France, demand his credentials. All the party were in civilian clothes, and had no written authority to show their identity. They refused to show it, and I saw none, though they said they had it in their pocket."

P. Black Holding Down Prices

To-morrow will be the closing day of P. Black's Midsummer Sale, and it will afford another good chance for shoppers to buy ready-to-wear clothing and dry goods at closer prices than can be found anywhere else in the city. These sales at this south-end store have proved an attraction to shoppers, and as bigger reductions will be offered to-morrow, this store should be crowded.

O'CONNOR IS NOW PREPARING A NEW ELECTORAL LAW

The New Law Will Consolidate the Various Electoral Enactments of the Past Two Sessions

(Special to The Examiner)

OTTAWA, June 28.—W. F. O'Connor, K.C., former head of the cost of living branch of the labor department is now preparing a new electoral law for the dominion. The new law will consolidate the various electoral enactments of the past two sessions with the existing law and it is stated that the result will be a federal franchise bill.

During the past two sessions some radical changes have been made in the electoral laws of the dominion Women have been granted the suffrage irrespective of whether they enjoy it in the respective provinces or not. From certain classes of people the franchise has been taken. Striking changes have been made in the compiling of lists for the federal elections. In the past the provinces have been permitted to lay down the qualifications for voting both for the legislature and for parliament. Last session a motion by Sir Wilfrid Laurier for the repeal of the war times franchise act was voted down by the government. While that measure will not be repealed it will be superseded by the proposed new federal consolidated act in which some of the features of the war times franchise act, will likely be incorporated, Mr. O'Connor, denies the report that he will be appointed clerk of the crown in chancery to succeed J. F. Foley, the present holder of the office.

PETERBORO MASONS AT OAK ORCHARD

Yesterday afternoon members of the Royal Arthur Lodge A. F. and A. M., celebrated their fifth annual reunion by a motor trip to Oak Lodge, where an excellent outing was enjoyed. An able address was made by Right Worshipful Brother R.H.R. Kenner. A number of others also spoke. About fifty members were present.

GARDEN PARTY WAS A BIG SUCCESS.

ST. LUKE'S WOMEN'S GUILD REALIZE ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS.

Over one hundred dollars was realized by St. Luke's Woman's Guild at the garden party given yesterday afternoon and evening at the home of Mr. Alex. Fitzgerald, Hunter Street East City. The grounds on which the tastefully decorated tables were arranged presented a picturesque appearance with the gay decorations of Chinese lanterns and flags. Here refreshments were served by well organized committees. One particularly well chosen feature was the group of merry maids from Miss Nicholls' class, who assisted in serving the refreshments.

Mrs. Greenslade was in charge of the musical programme, and had secured some splendidly chosen talent, which was greatly appreciated.

The programme as presented was: Solos by Mrs. Northcott, Mrs. Chas. Graham, Miss F. Emmerson, Miss Mildred Green and Miss Ruby Quartermaine, and a duet by Mr. and Mrs. Greenslade.

Altogether the affair was a distinct success and the Guild is very grateful to Mr. Fitzgerald and Miss Graham for kindly placing the house at their disposal.

START THE DRAWING FOR 1918 U.S. CLASS

744,500 Men Selected in the United States.

WASHINGTON, June 28. — The drawing of number to determine the order in which youths of the classes of 1918 will be called into military service was conducted here yesterday with much the same ceremony which marked the great drawing of a year ago.

The drawing was held in the conference room of the Senate office building with Secretary of War Baker, blindfolded, taking the first gelatine capsule, with a number enclosed, from the glass bowl. It was number 246. Number 1168 and 818 were the second and third, respectively, and thus the drawing continued to the end. Big blackboards for checking the records were placed against the wall at the rear of the room. The numbers were written on the board as drawn and then the board was photographed to make a permanent record.

A woman clerk in the Provost Marshal-General's office drew the eleventh number and proceeded to draw all the others, which represent 744,500 men, the majority of whom will be enrolled in the military forces of the United States in a few months.

BASEBALL.

At the Park on Saturday afternoon, the Orientals clash with the De Laval team at 2:45 sharp. This promises to be a good game, and a large turnout is expected.

Kerensky Left To-day For Paris

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, June 28.—Alexander Kerensky, former Russian Premier, left to-day for Paris.

Alexander Kerensky does not intend to return to politics, but will propogate the lessons derived from the Russian revolution among the Allies and will appeal to them for arms, supplies, and other aid, according to the former Petrograd correspondent of the Times in an exclusive interview.

Separating Cards Of Men Who Have Worked On Farms

Four deputy registrars were engaged to-day in separating from the city registration cards those filed by men who have had experience in farm work. These cards, it is understood, will be set apart and kept for prospective use in the event of the farmers being handicapped in the harvest by a shortage of men. It is significant that this segregation is done immediately by the staffs of the registrars in each district. The deputies are F. Brownscombe, T. E. Bradburn, Guy Popham and A. St. A. Smith.

All but one deputy registrar's package have been received by Mr. Dobbin, and that one went astray to Lindsay. It will probably reach the local office to-morrow, and will enable the registrar to tabulate the complete registration in West Peterborough.

WEDDING BELLS

HAYES-FARLEY.

A pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, June 19th, at St. Joseph's church, Douro, when the Rev. Father McGuire united in marriage Miss Rose Farley, daughter of Patrick Farley of Douro, to Mr. Allan Hayes, son of Mrs. J. Hayes.

The bride looked charming in a gown of white georgette crepe, and carried a shower bouquet of paconies. She was attended by her sister, Miss Irene Farley, who wore a dress of pink crepe de chene with hat to match. The groom was attended by by his cousin, Mr. Will Leahy.

Miss Farley was a graduate of St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterboro.

McMANUS—O'CONNOR.

ENNISMORE, June 28—A very pretty wedding was solemnized Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock in St. Martin's Church, Ennismore, when Miss Lillian, daughter of Mr. Owen O'Connor, Ennismore, was united in the Holy bonds of matrimony to Bernard McManus, of Smith. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father McAuley, and the wedding march was played by Mis Agnes Scollard, and Mr Joseph and Walter, brothers of the bride. The bride was assisted by Miss Mary Sullivan, while Edward Cane acted as best man.

Mr. and Mrs. McManus left on their wedding tour to Niagara and Buffalo, and on their return will reside in Smith.

Fuel Will Be Scarcer Than Ever Next Winter

Soft Coal, If Available, May Be Pressed Into Service in the Furnaces of Many Householders in This City--The Programme For Next Winter.

"ANYTHING THAT WILL BURN"

In the United States the stern fact that next winter is destined to be known as the winter of fuel shortage, is already being felt. In Canada some discontent is felt at the Fuel Controller's order that only a percentage of the winter's fuel is to be put in the bins. But as our fuel comes from across the border, it may be that before the next winter is out we may find that even that amount may not furnish supplies for everyone. The Fuel Controller may have then to exercise the authority vested in him and take from him that hath a surplus, and give to him that hath not. It is prophesied that this winter there will be a keen demand for anything that will burn.

NOT TAKING ORDERS.

Such is the situation in the States, that there is opposition to the "Buy-your-fuel-now" campaign suggested by some persons. It is pointed out that the fuel cannot be supplied to everyone now, and such a campaign would only occasion a frenzy of uneasiness. Point is lent to this view by the fact that a Toronto lady called up fifteen local coal dealers yesterday in an endeavour to place an order, not for a winter's supply, but just for a couple of tons to have on hand. Not a dealer would take it.

MUST BE CURTAILED.

That there must be a curtailment of the domestic use of anthracite this winter will not admit of argument. The Anthracite Committee of the United States Fuel Administration maps out the situation and allots to each district the amount of anthracite which it may have. It matters not whether the railways are open or closed, whether would-be purchasers have money or not, when the allotment has been reached for any district, the shipments to that district close down till all the district allotments are satisfied. In the winter of 1916-17, Canada's allotment was 3,856,021 tons. For the winter of 1918-19, Canada's allotment is 3,602,000 tons, or a decrease of 6.59 per cent.

"WE ARE IN WAR TIMES."

The difficulty of the situation was increased this year by the fact that there were no carried-over stocks of anthracite from last year. The year was opened with empty bins. Joseph B. Dickson, chairman of the Anthracite Committee of the Fuel Administration, says:

"We are in war times. In consequence, anthracite and fuel of all kinds is in such demand as never before. There are new demands of an imperative kind for anthracite. At the same time, the war, directly through the army draft, and in less direct but even larger ways, has drawn down the anthracite mine workers' army from 177,000 to now about 145,000 in number. There is going on a further reduction in the force, which, already down to a point where it restricts the production of coal, is most threatening."

NO FUEL FOR YACHTS.

Just a straw which shows how the wind blows is to be found in the fact that the United States Fuel Administration has barred from June 1st, 1918, to May 31st, 1919, the use of coal or fuel oil on any private yacht.

An effort to make what anthracite there is available go around next winter has led to prohibiting the use of anthracite in places where there is an alternative fuel. The United States is putting no hardship on Canada that she is not sharing herself. To husband the supply, anthracite shipments have been barred from 24 states of the union. The Dubois Courier recently stated that—

EMBARGO IN PENNSYLVANIA.

"William Potter, fuel administrator for the State of Pennsylvania, announced that the shipments of anthracite will be withheld from 29 counties of the state owing to the great demand for the fuel. The order is effective at once and means that the counties from which anthracite is withheld will have to burn soft coal during next winter."

And this is the State where most of our anthracite is mined! The city of Pittsburg, in the county of Allegheny, comes under this prohibition of anthracite.

The National Coal Jobbers' Association, meeting in Buffalo recently, was told that the shortage of coal was due from 18 to 30 per cent. to car shortage, and 5 per cent. to lack of labor.

INCREASED USE OF SOFT COAL.

Doubtless next winter will see a largely increased consumption of bituminous or soft coal for domestic and industrial purposes. A. W. Galloway, director of bituminous coal distribution, Washington, D.C., says:

"For industrial use the increased requirement is 35,000,000 tons.

"For gas and electric utilities the increased requirement is 5,000,000 tons.

"For railroad fuel the additional requirement is 12,000,000 tons.

"For foreign bunkers the increased requirement is 4,000,000 tons.

"For substitution of coal for oil in the west, the increased requirement is 4,000,000 tons.

"For domestic use, increased requirement is 9,000,000 tons. This increase for domesic requirements is due to the necessary substitution of bituminous coal for anthracite coal."

CATTLE MARKET

The market this week has been flooded with a lot of cows and medium to common butcher grass cattle that are only half fat and of poor quality. There is no doubt that much of the stuff should still be on the grass making beef, and thus conserving the country's meat supplies. But while the Food Control Board continues issuing regulations and restrictions regarding other classes of foodstuffs the waste of food involved in the premature marketing and the slaughter of thousands of young half-fat cattle and the wholesale slaughter of calves and lambs appears to be entirely overlooked. High prices have been the loadstone which has attracted so much of this class of stock to the market, and probably the prospects of dried-up grass pastures has had something to do with the acceleration of the movement. The immediate result however has been a sharp falling off in prices, particularly for cows and the common and medium butcher steers and heifers. Cows have declined fully another $1 per cwt this week, making a decline of about $2 in the last two or three weeks. All classes of butcher cattle, except the small proportion of choice quality still available is easier, and from 75c to $1.50 lower than a week or so ago. Choice heavy steers and medium weight butcher cattle of quality have not suffered so much, and are holding about steady.

Calves continue to run in a good strong market.

There has not been much change in the sheep situation since the sharp decline of $2 to $3 last week, but towards the end of the week there was a little firmer feeling.

BE READY FOR EMERGENCIES.

The best way is to always keep a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house, ready for emergencies. Then when croup or colds come suddenly they can be promptly cured before they have time to reach an acute and dangerous stage. To meet this requirement we have put the syrup up in family size bottles which contain nearly three times as much as the 25-cent bottle and sell at 60 cents.

GASOLINE SHORTAGE BEFORE END OF WAR

Tank Cars Being Called in to Transport Fuel to the Seaboard.

WINDSOR, June 28.—Although at the present time the gasoline supply throughout western Ontario and particularly west of London, is sufficient to meet ordinary demands, garage men and oil dealers agree that before the year is out a real shortage will be experienced.

Tank cars which have been conveying oil to all parts of the country, and a majority of which are owned by American railroads, are being rapidly called in by the United States Railroad Administration, as they are needed to carry fuel to the seaboard, and this will mean that many interior points far from the main arteries of railroad travel will be left without facilities for obtaining gasoline.

"It will not be a shortage of gasoline itself, but of means of transporting it," said one big garage man here today. "Even if we had more storage tanks than we have already, I doubt if we could get them filled up, as at present we are only receiving enough gas to keep us going."

Prices in Windsor for best quality gasoline remain at 35 cents a gallon, while farther east the cost gradually rises. At Ridgetown, 80 miles east of Windsor, the price of gas is away, it sells at 40 cents.

ANNOUNCEMENT

FALL WHEAT SEED

IN view of the partial failure of the Fall wheat crop in this Province this year it will be necessary for farmers to make early arrangements for the supply of seed which they will need for Fall sowing. Under these circumstances farmers who have on hand quantities of wheat suitable for Fall seeding are urged to conserve them for this purpose. If there is no demand locally, the information should be supplied to this Department, or to the Local Office of this Department in your County, so that every effort may be made to have an equitable and satisfactory distribution. The need for foodstuffs justifies a large acreage of Fall wheat in this Province again this year, and the co-operation of the farmers in the mobilization and distribution of the available seed supplies is invited.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

BAR HARBOUR

CHAPTER CV.

We left the next day for Bar Harbour. George was a bit dependent upon me because of his sprained wrist. It gave me quite a wifely feeling when he asked me to help him. Julia Collins was with us, and would offer to assist George whenever he appeared to want anything. Invariably he told her:

"Helen will help me, thank you, Julia."

I could have shouted with glee! It really made me feel resigned to her presence. We had charming rooms at the hotel, and I felt sure I was going to like the Harbour, much more than I had Newport. I was so happy that George was different, I was disposed to look upon everything favourably.

But as the days passed and George recovered from the shock of the accident, and regained the use of his hand, once more Julia Collins asserted herself. She was not a woman to yield easily to another. It seemed to me at times as if she thought I had absolutely no right to my opinion no real right to be married to George. But I tried desperately to remember all Mrs. Sexton had told me, and to follow her instructions to use the same weapons Mrs. Collins did to interest George.

A Matter of Clothes.

I watched Mrs. Collins closely. I noticed she invariably wore colours George admired; and that if he told her a particular gown was becoming — which he was apt to — that she wore that gown frequently although she might have many more beautiful ones. So I took a leaf from her book on dress. I took thought each time I dressed. I chose colours George liked, and the gowns he had claimed suited me. I was repaid when one day he said:

"You are very smart nowadays, Helen. I like to see you always well dressed. If you need anything to add to your wardrobe order it."

We spent most of our time upon the water. I had learned to overcome the feeling of mal-de-mer, and enjoyed nothing so much as a long day fishing with George. Occasionally we would go alone. Then I was wildly happy. Oftener Julia Collins and others were with us. At such times I was so busy trying to play the hostess in a way to please George, trying to keep my temper and my poise in spite of anything that happened I had no time to really enjoy myself. Yet when George would show by a word or look that he was pleased with me, I was not unhappy.

So the summer went by. The middle of September found us back in Morelands. The decorators had been at work during our absence and the house was in perfect order. Mary, the cook, James and Annie had each returned from their vacations—taken in turn — and were there to receive us.

"Doesn't it seem good to be back home?" I asked George.

"That sounds as if you hadn't enjoyed your summer."

"Oh, I did! But everything is so lovely, and I know we are going to be so happy."

"There is no reason you should not always be happy. It is your own fault when you are not!"

"Not always, George. Sometimes I am unhappy because of the actions of others." It was a daring thing to say to him, but he apparently paid no attention.

Evelyn Reeves Makes a Confession.

"I have sent word to Gray to come and hang your portrait," he remarked.

"Yes."

"I want it hung in a good light, and I do not feel competent to judge of the best place for it."

"When will he come?"

"To-morrow night."

I was pleased as I always was at the idea of seeing Merton Gray, being with him. Yet George had been so kind, so thoughtful of me the past few weeks that I had no desire to turn to another for company—as I had in the past.

Evelyn was back and came over that afternoon. What a lot we had to tell each other. She was as brown as a berry, and happy as could be. She expected soon to become a mother, and all of Kurts' people as well as Kurts himself were delighted.

"His mother acts as if she really cared a little for me now," she said happily.

"But aren't you afraid that children, a baby, will take up so much of your time that Kurts will grow away from you?" I asked, recalling the conversation I had overheard on the hotel porch at Narraganset.

"No! why should it? I think it will make him care more about being with me, instead of less."

I said no more but I thought that Evelyn was young, like myself. I had had such ideas too until the older women, the women whom George thought perfect, or nearly so, had said that a woman was apt to lose her husband if she became a mother. I never doubted they were right.

"I saw an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I sent for a free sample. I afterwards bought more, and it was not over a week when I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Annie Forgue, Alderson, Alta., Aug. 28, 1917.

Brought Down Zeppelin.

Capt. Albert H. Munday, son of E. J. Munday, Toronto, was one of the officers who recently took part in the fight with the Zeppelin sighted in the North Sea by the seaplane commanded by Capt. T. C. Pattinson of Leeds.

The Zeppelin immediately attempted to get the advantage of height by throwing out bombs, discharging a quantity of water ballast and creating a smoke screen. The seaplane, however, kept her well in view, firing many rounds into the Zeppelin, which, as she rose, began to discharge material overboard to further lighten herself.

After 35 minutes she was in such difficulties that she was forced to retreat to the German coast. Six enemy destroyers then appeared with anti-aircraft guns. Five minutes later the seaplane fractured her oil pipe, requiring a descent upon the water, where the fracture was repaired with tape. The seaplane then returned to its base, having sustained no damage or casualties.

Capt. Munday was some time flying in France, where he was injured in testing a new machine. Two of his brothers, E. R. and J. D. Munday, are also serving in the Flying Service.

Capt. A. H. Munday is a former Toronto newspaper man, on the staff of the Toronto Telegram, and is the author of the instructional publication, "The Eyes of the Army and Navy."

THE WESTERN INDIANS.

Remarkable Results Secured by Patriotic Worker.

Remarkable results have characterized the work of Mr. William M. Graham, for many years Indian agent at File Hills, Saskatchewan. He was devoted himself unsparingly to the success and true welfare of the red man. His appointment to the newly-created position of Indian Commissioner for the three Prairie Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta means a development of his work on a larger scale, and greatly increases the usefulness of this enthusiastic and efficient public servant.

Mr. Graham has immediately turned his attention to the all-important patriotic problem of increased production on all Western reserves. He plans to develop throughout the three provinces the colony idea which he perfected at File Hills. The story of this achievement is unique. Some 18,000 acres were put aside to be used exclusively by the ex-pupils of the Indian schools. The purpose was to put these young people at a certain distance from their beloved but ambitionless relatives, where they could work out their own more promising destinies, away, at least a good portion of the time, from the retarding influences of the older generation. Needless to add, the separation was merely a matter of a few miles, and they could visit each other quite conveniently. The scheme has worked out most successfully. There are about thirty-five farmers—quite a number of them now at the front and their farms worked by other Indians—and they produced over one hundred thousand bushels of grain in 1916 and again in 1917. One young Indian who went to the colony without a cent ten years ago is now worth over $20,000, and there are several others rapidly following in his wake.

The great war evoked a splendid patriotic response from File Hills. The Winnipeg Tribune points out, in an interesting article dealing with the colony, that practically every Indian who could go has gone to the front. One is a prisoner in Germany, one was killed in France, another has been reported missing, while eight or ten have been wounded. Old and young at home have raised nearly $8,000 for Patriotic and Red Cross organizations, the squaws being particularly active and successful.

In extending this splendid work to all the colonies of the three Prairie Provinces Mr. Graham is performing a national service, and should meet with the hearty and practical encouragement and co-operation of the Government and of the Canadian citizenhood.

Politeness Is Too Neglected.

Courtesy! Prof. William Lyon Phelps of Yale university is right in saying that the young men of today possess even a greater power of endurance than their fathers. The war has demonstrated that the luxuries of modern life have not produced a degenerate race. Our own heroes of 1776 were no more hardy than the young men in khaki today after six months of training. The endurance of the modern soldier is not alone a matter of physique or physical strength but of moral stamina as well. What we need to cultivate is not simply a sturdy manhood through military discipline, but also to give our boys and girls training in courtesy. Military training teaches obedience, a quality that our youth sorely need to acquire, but we need to instill into the minds of our children in the public schools lessons of politeness and respect for the rights of others.

No other nation has neglected politeness as we have done.

"OH, NEVER AGAIN!"

British Visitor Has Sworn Off Mint Juleps.

According to His Story He Had an Idea It Was a "Soft Drink," and His Disillusionment Was Complete.

Lieut. Hector MacQuarrie, whose book, "Over Here," was recently published, had an experience with an American beverage that surprised him. While waiting for a midnight train in a Philadelphia hotel on a hot night he became thirsty and sought the cafe, where he told the waiter to bring him a large iced drink and suggested orangeade. The waiter mentioned mint julep. "The drink was unfamiliar," says the lieutenant, "but it sounded good and American people make the most wonderful soft drinks in the world. The very word 'mint' suggested coolness, and the fragrant smell of the upper river at Cambridge on a summer's day came back to my mind as I sat behind a large column in the cafe. Hence, I said: 'Right O! Bring me a mint julep.' He did, curse him! With a large chicken sandwich, it arrived. The glass was all frosted, filled with mushy ice, while a dainty little bunch of green mint, with its stems piercing the ice, floated on the top. I was more thirsty than hungry, and I was very hungry.

"I drank the julep at once. It was delicious. For a soft drink the effect was decidedly interesting. My first sensation was a nice singing, advancing sound in my head. I felt myself to be drifting along a smooth stream with overhanging willows and masses of mint growing on the banks. I felt that delightful sensation that one feels when a tooth has been removed with the aid of gas and one is just returning to consciousness.

"This pleasing feeling continued for a little while and then I could see the paneled walls of the room, and I heard what seemed a still, small voice talking in extremely bad French to the waiter who answered in what must have been good French. The voice using the bad French was very familiar and then I realized that it was my own. I promptly switched to English, but the voice was still far distant. Finally, full consciousness returned, also a realization of the situation. Then the voice in the distance said: 'Waiter, your d—— mint julep has gone to my head and I must catch a train in exactly half an hour.' The waiter's voice expressed sorrow and suggested much water and more sandwiches. I drank water and I ate sandwiches, and the vision of Mr. Pickwick in the wheelbarrow came upon me with full force. I was thankful that in spite of all I could see my watch, but if the waiter had not been firm I should have missed my train. The water and the sandwiches were successful. A faint knowledge of Christian Science picked up from my chief in New York helped me, and in a perfectly stately manner I walked out of the hotel and along the road and caught my train.

"I would advise all foreigners arriving in America," Lieutenant MacQuarrie concludes, "to avoid mint juleps. It was extremely pleasant, almost delightful, but a mint julep taken several hours after a meal when one drinks but little at any time, is extremely potent. I have been told since that just after a meal a mint julep is comparatively harmless, and that it is not a soft drink. Frankly, I will never touch one again as long as I live. There are too many possibilities in its icy depths."

War Gardens on Increase.

About 10,000 lots will be cultivated in Montreal and district this summer, five times as many as were cultivated last year, according to the reports to the Montreal Cultivation Committee. It is estimated that the value of the season's yield will amount to about $300,000.

A GOOD APPETITE A GREAT BLESSING

The Occasional Use of a Tonic Will Ensure a Good Appetite and Good Health

Loss of appetite during the summer months is a common trouble and indicates that the digestive system is out of order. Lacking a healthy appetite many people—especially women—go too long without food or eat sparingly, because food seems to distress them, and it is no wonder they complain of being constantly tired, and unable to stand the hot weather. All this simply means that the digestive system is not doing its proper work and that the nutriment that should come from the food is not being distributed to the various organs of the body. In other words the blood is growing thin and watery. In such cases what is needed is a summer tonic and among all medicines there is no tonic can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Take a short treatment with these pills and notice how promptly your appetite returns and your power to digest food improves. Your food will then do you good, your strength will return and you will no longer complain that the hot weather tires you out. Mrs. M. Kelly, of Windsor, Ont., says: "I suffered from indigestion for several years, and although I was constantly taking doctor's prescriptions, they did not cure me, and the result was that I was greatly run down, and always feeling poorly. Finally I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as I soon found that the were helping me I continued their use until I was fully cured, and am now able to properly digest any food I take. As a tonic and a blood builder I know of no medicine to equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I recommend them to all in need of a medicine."

The best time to begin taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the moment you feel the least bit out of sorts. The sooner you will do so the sooner you will regain your old time energy. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Question.

Farmer Turnipson had brought his young son David to the city to see the sights, and toward the end of a long day was dragging his fourteen stone up the steps of the great monument. Long before they reached the top the father was regretting that he had allowed his son to persuade him to undertake such a trying journey.

"Look, father!" exclaimed the boy when they had at last reached the top. "Isn't it a grand sight down there?"

"Well," puffed the elder Turnipson, "if it's so grand down there what in the name of all that's wonderful did you bring me up here for?"

GALLANT RHODES' SCHOLARS.

Long List of Names Placed on Honor Roll.

The cancelling of Rhodes Scholarships formerly allotted to Germany has resulted in Alberta and Saskatchewan each getting a scholarship, instead of one between them as formerly. This fact is announced in the annual statement just issued by the Rhodes Scholarship Trust. The postponement of all Rhodes scholarship elections till after the war is largely due, the statement sets forth, to the entry of the United States into the war, which placed American Rhodes scholars in the same category with those from the overseas dominions. Fourteen Rhodes scholars or ex-scholars have given their lives in the war since the last statement. Four of these are Canadians—A. L. Colett, of P.E.I.; B. E. Atkins, of British Columbia; and T. M. Papineau, M.C., and W. J. Pearce, M.C., both of Quebec.

The statement is in part as follows:

"Throughout the past Academic year the war has interfered increasingly with the operation of the scholarship system. At the close of 1916 the American Section of the Scholarships was still barely affected; but on the entry of the United States into the war the difference between American and Colonial Rhodes Scholars naturally ceased to exist.

"Largely as a consequence of the new situation thus created, the trustees have decided to postpone for the present all further election to scholarships. This will not, however, interfere with the holding of the annual qualifying examination in the United States, or in colonies were qualification is not obtained through affiliation of local universities with the University of Oxford.

"The Trust has continued its policy of giving scholars leave of absence for the duration of the war with the right to resume or commence their scholarships when the war is over, or earlier should circumstances make it possible.

"For the year 1916 fifty-seven scholars were elected, twenty-five colonials and thirty-two Americans. Of these there came into residence in October, 1916, three colonials (of the first term) and twenty-seven Americans. Altogether, there were in residence at Oxford, for some part of the year eighty-five Rhodes scholars, of whom seventy-one were American and fourteen colonial. Of the seventy-one Americans, the great majority are now serving in the United States army. For the year 1917-1918, there are at present eight Rhodes scholars in residence — six colonial and two American. Of the six colonials, five are medical students; and of these five, two have already seen service. Of the two Americans, one has returned from a year's ambulance work on the French front, and is temporarily engaged in Government work in the University Chemical Laboratory; while the other has been rejected on medical grounds for military service. In addition to the above, one ex-scholar has returned after three years' military service in France, to complete his medical course."

Poem Girdled the Globe.

"Over the Hills of Home" is a poem by Lillan Leveridge, which has attracted a good deal of attention throughout the allied countries. Many will remember the plaintive strain of the verses by the following stanza:

Brother, soldier brother, the Spring has come back again,
But her voice from the windy hilltops is calling your name in vain,
For never shall we together 'mid the birds and the blossoms roam,
Over the hills of home, brother, over the hills of home.

This poem was first published in the Daily Ontario of Belleville. It was copied by Public Opinion of London, England, and afterwards by many of the leading journals of Great Britain. Coming back to Canada through its publication by the New York Times Current History of the War as one of the most notable poems of its kind, it was taken up and republished in many Canadian papers, read and recited at recruiting meetings and patriotic entertainments. It appeared also in the China Press of Shanghai, China, and other English papers throughout the world.

The tender sympathy and compelling pathos of these verses is attested to by the many letters written to the author regarding them—letters from mothers and fathers who had been bereaved—letters from soldiers in the trenches — letters from England, Scotland, France, California, China, Australia. This brave and noble heart-song has truly "girdled the globe."

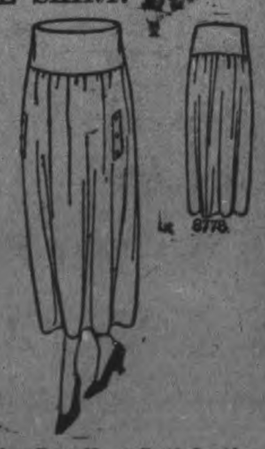
THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S YOKE SKIRT.



A study of the trend of fashion reveals the fact that skirts are growing narrower and slightly longer. All skirts are either gathered or plaited, very few plain effects being seen. The model shown in No. 8778 is adapted to either silks or light weight woollen materials. The skirt is unusually simple and easy to make, for the lower section is all in one piece with straight lower edge, and it is gathered to a fitted yoke which is gathered to the slightly raised waistline. Pockets are set in the skirt at each side of the front, and straight pieces of the material trimmed with buttons are stitched over the openings.

The lady's yoke skirt pattern No. 8778 is cut in five sizes—24 to 32 inches waist measure. Width at lower edge of skirt is two yards. The 26 inch size requires 3¾ yards 27 inch, 2½ yards 36 inch, or 2⅝ yards 56 inch material.

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction. This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents

Have You Been to Doc. Nature, War Strain Specialist?

"These are war times, and I'm too busy to take a holiday. I work all day and night, and I have not the energy for a holiday," said a business man who in addition to his own office work attended each week a dozen or more patriotic and war committee meetings.

No wonder that in time the doctor was sent for, and ordered him to a sanitorium.

He did not remember the headline that he wrote in his school copybook: "A stitch in time saves nine," otherwise a month at a holiday resort would have saved him a year of ill health. Nature is the one great healing physician for the tired and overworked, and nature is always best when using preventatives. She cures, too, but she prevents in all cases where a breakdown is threatened.

Holiday resorts of this country are at their brightest during July, August and September. The hard working home fighter needs leave as much as the soldier needs his period of recreation behind the firing lines; and every train should bring visitors to Evangeline's apple-sweet Annapolis Valley, trout streamed New Brunswick with its golf links at St. Andrews-by-the-Sea, to the silvery lakes and streams of Quebec and Ontario, to the Canadian Pacific Rockies, and their thousands of square miles of Alpine parks, where trails lead up to the glaciers, and where thousands visit the summer hotels at Banff, Lake Louise, Field and Glacier. The stream of tourist traffic flows out to Vancouver Island and on to Alaska, the Land of the Midnight Sun.

In spite of war conditions, Canada still retains good service for passengers on her railways. Life has become simpler, and one has to be content sometimes with an upper berth, while the regulations of the Food Board are rigidly observed on the dining cars, but the health resort is recognised not as a luxury, but as a necessity, and Canada's summer travel promises to be as active as ever.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Flaming Moment

By KATHERINE HOPSON

Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Bess Brownell linked her arm in Patricia's as they went downstairs. "I don't like to criticize people, especially when I'm visiting them, but I must say I never saw a bridal party where everybody concerned acted so much as if they wanted to crawfish out," she laughingly declared.

Patricia, who had just arrived, looked surprised. "Surely you must be mistaken, Bess," she remonstrated, remembering the latter's propensity to exaggerate things during their college days.

By this time they had reached the dining room, where they were joined by others, so the conversation necessarily became general. Nor were they alone together again that evening. But Patricia thought over those words many times next day, when she and the other young people decorated the house with roses and smilax for the wedding. Apparently everyone was blithe and gay, but over all was an unmistakable atmosphere of tenseness and foreboding.

Late that afternoon Patricia went to the drug store on an errand, and as she was leaving, a rather showily dressed young man came forward and, with an apology for addressing her, asked: "You are one of the Warren house-party, aren't you?"

She acknowledged this fact, and he drew from his pocket an envelope.

"Then I'm going to ask you to do me the favor of giving this to Miss Ada Warren, when you have the chance to see her alone."

"I am an old friend of Miss Warren—she'll understand," he added with a disarming smile. He bowed courteously and was gone.

With deepening misgivings, she complied with his request. Ada's childlike face whitened when she saw the writing, but she offered no explanation.

That evening there was to be a rehearsal for the wedding, and as they waited for the clergyman who was to officiate, Alice Marshall, Ada's married sister, proposed a little dance.

"There are five girls and five men, and I will play for you; so improve the golden opportunity!" said she.

"Isn't Fred Landreth a typical bridegroom? He's so pale and scared-looking," whispered Bess, her dark eyes shining impishly, as they stood together a moment before the dancing began. To Patricia the gay strains of the music seemed intolerable. Somehow the whole affair seemed like a travesty. Surely she did not have these forebodings for nothing! She could not bear to think of unhappiness coming to Ada, who had been her dearest friend at college, nor to Landreth, either. Surely, after his hard struggle in the business world, he deserved happiness. She thought of that happy summer on the Maine coast two years ago, when she and Ada had first met him. At first he had paid more attention to her, and she had thought ——. Patricia pulled herself together sharply. Those were memories she must never think of again, for tomorrow he was to marry her dearest friend.

At that moment the doorbell rang loudly. It was a messenger boy with a telegram.

"This is to be delivered to Misther Fred Landreth," said he.

"I'm your man," returned Landreth, and signed for the message. He tore open the yellow envelope and Patricia saw his face grow grave.

"Is it bad news?" she asked timidly.

"Read!" He handed her the paper. "Mines at El Paso blown up. General insurrection. Much damage. Come."

"Is it very bad, do you suppose?" Even as she asked, Patricia subconsciously wondered why we are prone to ask futile questions in time of crisis.

"The message sounds like it. Probably all machinery is ruined."

"Oh, Fred, I'm so sorry. I hope things aren't as bad as they seem." Voice and eyes were sympathetic.

"Thank you, Pat. Good wishes help. I must go and tell Ada and the Warrens. I may have to start back tonight."

He went over to the piano and said a few words to Alice Marshall. The gay strains of the fox-trot stopped abruptly.

"Please take my place a little while," she said to Bess, who sat nearby, and left the room with Landreth. Patricia slipped away to the veranda. She felt as if she must be quiet, a few minutes to get a grip on herself.

"They mustn't see me so upset. It would seem strange."

Through the half-open door she saw Alice return and call the others to her. They stood in a little group, talking earnestly, and Mr. Warren came downstairs and left the house. Presently Landreth too came down and also departed, and from her shadowy corner Patricia observed that he wore a look of grim determination.

Unable to bear the suspense, she joined the others, and learned that Landreth had gone to send some telegrams and find out about trains.

"He may start tonight," explained Bess. Mrs. Marshall says the wedding has been postponed. But if I were in Ada's place and loved him, I'd want to go and help him, wouldn't you?"

"Yes." Patricia made tense answer and excused herself to go upstairs. She felt that she would not stay and discuss the situation.

On the way to the room she was obliged to pass Mrs. Warren's door. She was in a chair by the table, and her crumpled attitude, so different from her usual erect dignity, touched Patricia's tender heart. Impulsively she started to go in, then, seeing Ada and her sister on the sofa, and fearing that her coming was inopportune, she started to withdraw; but they had seen her.

"Come in, dear," called Mrs. Warren. "We're in great trouble."

"I know—I've heard. Oh, I'm so sorry. But surely things will all come out right in a little while. It will only mean delaying the wedding."

"Ada says there will be no wedding," declared Alice Marshall.

"There won't." Ada's slender figure looked tense and defiant, but her dark eyes were piteous. Mrs. Warren began to cry afresh.

"Now that the blowing up of his mine has probably changed his fortune, Fred chivalrously gave Ada a chance for release—and she gave him back his ring. To think of a Warren breaking faith with a man because he was down." Scorn rang in Alice's honest voice.

"It wasn't that," broke in Ada. "It was because I thought it the right thing to do—best for the happiness of all. We two are not the only ones concerned. Yesterday afternoon I got a letter from Howard Vance—"

Here Alice interrupted. "I knew he was back of it all—"

Patricia thought of the letter she had delivered to Ada, and sudden memory recalled the story she had heard of a suitor of Ada's of whom her family disapproved.

"He still cares in the same old way. And—oh!—so do I. I thought I'd got over that, but when I read his letter I knew I hadn't. But I didn't have the courage to tell Fred; I was a coward. But I kept hoping and praying that something would happen to save us at the last ditch. Of course, I didn't want anything bad to happen to Fred, and I'm sorry for his trouble—but, oh! I'm glad to be free!"

"But, Ada, the criticism, the comment," weakly deplored her mother. "Besides, we don't like Howard Vance any better than we ever did."

"He has faults, I know, but he'll overcome them with the right woman to help him—anyway, I love him—I love him!" Ada ended in incoherent tears. It was some time before they could soothe her, but at last, when she was more calm, Patricia slipped away to her own room.

Soon, however, the quiet became intolerable, and she went downstairs. She wanted to learn whether Fred had returned, and if he was going away that night. There was no one in the living room, so she went into the library off the hall, where she could watch for some one who might know.

"I can do nothing—nothing. I can't even fully express my sympathy without being misunderstood."

She laid her head down among the sofa cushions, and tears relieved the grief that was in her heart. She did not notice when the front door opened, nor was she aware of some one standing in the doorway until a voice said:

"Why, Patricia, you here?"

She sat up in confusion. "I stayed to hear the outcome of your trip to the station." Furtively she wiped her wet cheeks, glad that the light was well shaded.

He sat down beside her. "When I got there I found a night letter. Things at the mine aren't so bad as they were first reported." She could tell by his voice he was much cheered.

"I find on talking to the agent that I make better connection by waiting for the limited tomorrow morning. So I'm not going tonight."

"I'm very glad things seem better." In her effort for self-control Patricia's voice sounded almost cold. But he didn't seem to notice.

There was a moment's silence, then he said: "Perhaps this isn't the occasion to speak,—but in times like this we can lay aside conventions. Probably you know Ada's found out she cares more for another man—and, well, I care more for another woman." He smiled, but his eyes were pleading and tender. "You are first with me, Patricia, you were from the beginning, but you were so—so reserved—I didn't think there was any hope." There was another moment of tense silence, then he continued: "Sometimes, Patricia, the dead past comes back and gives us another chance. Will you turn back, dear, to where we stood before misunderstandings separated us?"

She did not speak. She never could in moments of strong emotion.

"If you'll marry me tomorrow, I'll take you to San Antonio; and then—when things are more settled on the border, we can begin life again together. Will you come?"

Still she did not speak, but by way of answer, drew down his tired young head until his cheek rested against her shining hair.

Though both knew that the hasty wedding would bring surprise and disapproval from some who were dear, and life in the frontier country stretched before them an uncharted sea; yet neither regret nor apprehension marred their peace, or dimmed the gladness of this flaming moment that was all their own.

How To Ascertain If You Have Catarrh

Look for Symptoms of This Treacherous Disease in the Following List.

"Is your breath bad?"
"Is your throat sore?"
"Do you cough at night?"
"Is your voice raspy?"
"Does your nose stop up?"
"Have you nasal discharge?"
"Do you spit up phlegm?"
"Has your nose an itchy feeling?"
"Have you pain across the eyes?"
"Is your throat irritable, weak?"
"Do you sleep with mouth open?"
"Are you subject to sneezing fits?"
"Do your ears roar and buzz?"
"Are you hard of hearing?"

If you have any of these indications of Catarrh, cure the trouble now—stop it before it gets into the lungs or bronchial tubes—then it may be too late. The remedy is "Catarrhozone," a direct breathable cure that places antiseptic balsams and healing medication on every spot that's tainted by catarrhal germs.

"No one can know better than I the enormous benefit one gets from the very first day's use of Catarrhozone," writes T. T. Hopkins, of Westvale, P. Q. "I had for years a stubborn case of bronchial catarrh, ear noises, headache, sore eyes, stopped-up nose and throat. It affected my appetite and made my breath rank. Catarrhozone cured quickly."

The dollar outfit last two months, and is guaranteed; smaller size, 50c., sample size, 25c., at all storekeepers and druggists, the The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With Othine—Double Strength.

This preparation for the removal of freckles is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by any druggist under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of Othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength Othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

USED FOR SHAVING.

Many men are troubled, more particularly in the cold weather, with a sort of roughness of the skin or eczema caused by shaving. The application of Dr. Chase's Ointment after the shave soon cures the trouble and by using it after each shave you keep the skin soft and prevent irritation and soreness. Because of its antiseptic qualities this ointment prevents and cures Barber's Itch.

The HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

A CONTENTED SPIRIT.

Remember, if you have only what is called an ordinary home, that the great deliverers of the world have all come from such a home. And there may be seated reading at your evening stand a child who shall be potent for the ages. Just unroll the scroll of men mighty in church and state, and you will find they nearly all come from log runs out in the third or fourth genration. You cannot find in all history cabin or poor homes. Genius almost an instance where the fourth generation of extraordinary people amount to anything. Columbus from a weaver's hut, Demosthenes from a cutler's cellar, Bloomfield and Missionary Carey from a shoemaker's bench, Arkwright from a barber's shop and he whose name is high over all in the earth and air and sky from a manger.

Let us all be content with such things as we have. God is just as good in what he keeps away from us as in what he gives us. Even a knot may be useful if it is at the end of a thread. The spider draws poison out of a flower; the bees get honey out of a thistle, but happiness is a heavenly elixir and the contented spirit extracts it not from the rhododendron of the hills, but from the lilly of the valley.

ONLY A LITTLE THING.

The secular press is carrying the story of how a crawfish, not over three inches in length, shut down a big iron plant in Wheeling, W. Va., and threw 3,000 men for the time being in idleness. The crawfish had travelled from the river through the pump plant to the city reservoir and thence through the water mains and pipes until it reached the meter of the LaBelle Iron Works. Lodging in the meter, it shut off the supply and stopped the whole plant. Only a little thing, but it cost that plant the loss of considerable time and money.

Only a cigarette, but it turned a bright boy into a nicotine reservoir. He failed in college and failed in business because his heart and brain were poisoned by the "little white slaver."

Only a social glass, but it turned a brilliant youth into a poor old drunkard. Money gone, friends gone, loved ones desolate and broken-hearted, he finally fell under the wheels of a rushing locomotive and his poor soul went into the night of eternal gloom.

Only a "little sin" unrepented of an unforgiven, but it brings on the sinner the full penalty of the law that declares that the soul that sinneth shall die. "The wages of sin is death."

In view of the tremendous possibilities of good and evil that are to be found in almost every thought and word and action we sometimes wonder if there are any "little things" in this world. A tiny wire may carry a spark that will blow up a mountain. A word may create influences that will shake a nation. The life of a humble peasant has revolutionized the world and will sooner or later give it a civilization beyond anything for which we have yet had the courage to hope. Surely there are no little things.

The effort at "pleasing mother" should be cultivated in the childish heart. Early in life they should begin the cultivation of thought and effort with reference to the gratification of her wishes and of making her happy. If they would do this they would find daily opportunities for speaking kind words and rendering such helpful services and showing such noble traits of character in dealings with others, as would gladden the heart and lighten the cares of mother in a way too often thought of. If boys, if girls, could but realize their indebtedness to their mothers, they certainly would generally be very much more anxious to please them. The great men of the world, who have acknowledged their indebtedness to their mothers, took delight in pleasing them. But most of all their noble lives, their courage in doing right and their honourable achievements in public life were especially pleasing to their noble mothers. Hardly a higher tribute can be paid to any young man's success in life than "It pleased his mother."

The people who have so much sympathy for those who have gone beyond all earthly help, might use a little of it in every day life to a good and excellent purpose. The idea of kicking a person to weep over their grave when dead is what too many of us do and is one reason why the world is no better today. Speak your kind words to the living, and when you are dead you need not care what is said of you.

If you want cheerfulness in your home you must have sunshine and genial hearts. Plan to live in the sunshine; if there is a pleasant room in your dwelling, live there; if there is a dark room, shut it up; keep the children out of it; if you have troubles shut them up there—never take them into the family circle — give home the sunniest thought and plans of your whole life and fill it with love, joy, peace, gladness—sunshine.

We do not laugh enough. There is nothing more pleasant to the ear than the merry laugh of a happy, joyous person, and nothing drives away gloom and care like a good, hearty laugh. Laughter and good humor make a happy, pleasant home and a cheerful bright home in the greatest safeguards against temtations for the young. Parents should guard against this and spare no pains to make home a cheerful spot.

Premiums are not good value now

We've given them up—until after the war anyhow. There is a far better way to give you value for your money and we've done it—we've made the Comfort Soap bar much bigger.

New bigger Comfort bar is better value

Many of the Premiums—books, glassware, toys, jewelry, etc., used to come from Europe. These cannot be shipped now on account of the war, and the premiums we can still get are either so poorly made or so expensive that the value simply isn't there. The best way out is to give you all the value of the premium in the biggest-selling soap in Canada—that's Comfort. The Comfort bar is bigger now—at the same price.

Of course all wrappers, coupons, etc., now out in the stores will be redeemed as heretofore—but get them in early while our Premium stock is still good. If the new bar isn't in stock yet, the old one is just as good value—with our present premiums.

Our little three-year-old spends his mornings out of doors always, even though he has no playmates near and has to play alone. He calls to us once in awhile, and the other day informed our maid he was fixing nuts for the squirrel. To tease him and also to help him differentiate, she asked him why he didn't give the squirrel spinach or beans, for instance. "Oh, no," was the instant protest. "he isn't an inside bird, Laura."

Something to Worry About.

As if we haven't already enough to keep our minds busy, with war and the high cost of living! And our friends, the learned astronomers, who study the heavens just as carefully as the average fellow does the innermost recesses of his pocketbook day before pay, are intent upon adding to our load of worry burdens. They—some of them—believe the sun is going to explode. One of them, writing in Popular Astronomy, points to the fact that our sun is of advanced age, and predicts its finish as the leading figure in our solar system. He finds that our sun has contracted 93,000,000 miles from each side, thus giving its hot center 186,000,000 miles less of room. So you see the sun's center is rather crowded for space. Something like the three-room apartment couple when visiting relatives begin their summer vacation drives.

Like Being Hit By Rattle Snake

Says that every time you cut or pick at a corn you invite lockjaw

You reckless men and women who are pestered with corns and who have at least once a week invited an awful death from lockjaw or blood poison are now told by a Cincinnati authority to use a drug called freezone, which the moment a few drops are applied to any corn, the soreness is relieved and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out with the fingers, without one particle of pain.

This freezone is a sticky substance, which dries the moment it is applied, and just loosens the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. He says a quarter of an ounce will cost very little at any of the drug stores, but this is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You are positively warned that cutting or picking at a corn is a suicidal habit.

HAVE MANY QUAINT BELIEFS

Alaskan Natives Probably as Superstitious as Any Race on the Face of the Earth.

In Alaska the natives have all kinds of superstitious beliefs. They believe that everything has a spirit, and that these spirits must be respected or else bad luck will come to them. For instance, they must not throw away any old clothing, nor burn it, for that would be the same as destroying a part of themselves. They must make a bundle of the old clothes and put it on the branches of a large spruce tree outside the village. All fish bones are carefully put away in a basket to be taken out to the middle of a river, stream or lake and there thrown overboard. This is done so that every single bone, after it is put back into the water, will turn into a fish, and this is sure to keep up the supply.

When a child is born the father has to put away all tools that are made of iron or steel and is not allowed to use them for 20 days. During that time he is not allowed to go outside to do any work or any hunting. Should he do any of these things it would surely cause the death of the baby. When a child dies it is not buried, but is wrapped in a bundle and placed at the foot of a spruce sapling. If the tree dies within a year the spirit of the child dies also.

When a grown person dies the body is kept at least three days in the room in which it has died. When the time for burial comes the body is buried on a hillside or a high bank facing the river. There is the village of departed spirits on the side facing the river and on the other side the spirits of the dogs who have died and who belong to the people whose spirits are there. The spirit of an old woman takes care of these dogs.

Stacks enlisted Aug. 15, 1916, at Dallas, Tex.

British Made Successful Attack On Western Front

Took Several Hundred Prisoners, Also Field Guns

Over Four Hundred Prisoners Captured By British Troops

Yesterday's Attack Was Successful —Hostile Artillery Active at Some Points— Increased Activity on Both Sides.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

Canadian Press:

LONDON, June 29. — In their successful attack in Flanders, east of Nieppe Wood, yesterday, the British took more than 400 prisoners, also two German field guns, in addition to the machine guns and trench mortars taken.

The statement reads:

"The total number of prisoners taken by us in yesterday's operation east of Nieppe Forest exceeds four hundred. This figure does not include those taken west of Merris. Two German field guns, in addition to a number of machine guns and trench mortars, also were captured by us. The hostile artillery has been active opposite Vaire Wood, south of the Somme and west of Feuchy-Arras region. There has been increased activity on both sides in the Neippe Forest sector."

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, June 29.—The Germans attacked on a front south-west of Soissons for the purpose of ejecting the French from positions taken by them on Thursday night, but were repulsed last night, and the French line was held intact, according to a statement issued by the War Office to-day. In an operation north-west of Montdidier, American troops took forty prisoners.

In addition to their attack on a front in the Soissons area, the Germans sent assault detachments against the lines held by the Italians on the Blighny Heights south-east of Rheims. The Italians drove off the German thrust.

Victoria Cross For Canadian

Calgary Soldier Engaged Enemy Single-Handed—Position Was Captured as a Result

Canadian Press:

LONDON, June 28.— The Victoria Cross was to-night gazetted to Lieut. George Burdon McKean, Canadian infantry, aged 30. He enlisted at Edmonton as a private in January, 1915. He won the Military Medal and was wounded, in 1916, and received a commission in May, 1917. He is still in France. His mother lives in Calgary. McKean's party was held up in a communication trench by a most intense fire from grenades and machine guns. Realizing this block, unless destroyed, might mar the success of the whole operation. McKean ran into the open, leaped over the block head on top of the enemy. When a man rushed at him with a bayonet McKean shot him through the body, then sought a man underneath him who was struggling violently. This gallant action enabled the capture of the position. McKean's supply of bombs ran out, and whilst waiting a further supply he engaged the enemy single-handed. On bombs arriving he fearlessly rushed a second block, killing two and capturing four, and driving the remainder with a machine gun into a dug-out which was destroyed. This officer's splendid dash and bravery undoubtedly saved many lives.

Milking Machines Help Solve Labour Problem On Farms In Peterborough County

A Fifteen Year Old Girl on the Farm of Mr. Isaac Hetherington Attends to the Milking of Twenty-four Cows With the Aid of a Mechanical Milker

The scarcity of labour in Peterborough County has given added impetus to the sale of milking machines. On the Communication Road between Peterborough and Chemong a number of machines have been placed among the farmers. On the farm of Mr. Isaac Hetherington a fifteen-year-old girl attends to the milking of twenty-four cows with the aid of a milking machine. Other purchasers in that neighbourhood are Mr. Harold Sanderson, Mr. Smith Milburn, Mr. Grattan Telford, Mr. William Telford, Mr. Albert Nicholls, Mr. Joseph Mann, and Mr. Garbutt Mann, who is purchasing one of the most modern machines on the market, together with an engine for a two double unit capacity machine. Mr. T. D. Young has been using a milking machine for over a year, and this year is duplicating his order. Mr. Allan Preston, Mr. John Murphy and Mr. B. Harvey are also using milking machines in connection with the dairying industry.

Both Mr. F. J. Doughty and Mr. R. C. Heard, local salesmen for one of the best known machines on the market, claim that there is a large demand for mechanical milkers, and the day is not far distant when the old method of milking by hand will have passed out like the one-horse plough, the old-fashioned reaping machine, and a few other painful recollections with the agricultural past.

TROUBLE IN QUEBEC

Registration Cards Were Burned in the Streets—Gangs of Men Run Riot

WILD SCENES

(Special to The Examiner.)

QUEBEC, June 29.—Crying "Down with Borden," and "Down with the Unionist, Liars and Hypocrites, they tried us with their national service cards, but they won't with their registration," gangs of men, mostly of the farming class, in and about beauchville, and at various points in Montmagny County, have rushed the registration cards enbloc and burned them in the streets. As to the facts there can be doubt, your correspondent having verified various reports, more or less indefinite, which have been filtering through in the past few days.

Reports Confirmed.

At St. Gedeon and St. Ludger, it is confirmed by J. Fortin, owner and editor of L'Elclareur De Beauceville, who was reached by long-distance telephone to-night. All the registration cards were stolen and publicly destroyed by a gang of men, who broke into the local deputy registrar's house. At St. Gedeon Mr. Fortin stated the people had turned out in generous numbers to comply with the law, but the desperadoes were committing wild scenes with the object of evading registration. As a result of the action of the malcontents all the registration process will have to be started with anew.

Attempt Failed.

In St. Francois those who objected to registration went even a step farther. They tried to blow up the post office, but the attempt through the fortunate intervention of a citizen, failed. The latter by pure hazard, found the charge of dynamite, which had been placed under the main entrance of the post office building.

At St. Ludger the malcontents acted similarly to their confederates at St. Gedeon. They rushed the registration booth where the deputy and the registrar were seized. All the registration cards were secured and burned up in the street.

Day Of Prayer In St. Paul's Church

Special Services Have Been Provided For To-morrow

Special prayer will be offered in St. Paul's Church to-morrow in connection with the Government proclamation that the day be observed as one of humiliation and prayer. The minister will preach at both services. In the morning he will point out not only a number of definite times when prayer has been answered in the present war, but in the history of the wars in the past.

In the evening he will speak on the subject, "Why has God not Granted us the Victory Before This?" The members and adherents of the congregation are asked to loyally observe the day and be present at both services.

SUGGESTS THAT WOMEN CONFINE THEIR EFFORTS TO WORK OF IMPORTANCE

Dr. Hastings, Toronto M.O.H. Declares That Condemnation of Cigarettes and Grape Juice is Absurd

EXTREME FANATICS

(Special to The Examiner.)

TORONTO, June 29.—"If some of these women would confine their efforts to work of vital importance, instead of romping off to the extremes of their kind, they would be doing something to aid their country, and in the meantime improving their own minds," said Dr. Hastings, Medical Officer of Health, when asked his opinion regarding the condemnation of grape juice and the keeping of cigarettes from the soldiers, by President Mrs. F. L. Thornton, at the Hamilton W.C.T.U. Convention Saturday. "It was owing to the activity of extreme fanatics in the past that the real effects of the temperance movement was delayed," continued the doctor. "All bounds were exceeded by these fanatics which resulted in widespread indignation throughout the country. This will be the result in the present movement if this state of affairs is continued. All the effects of the present temperance legislation will me menaced by activity in this direction."

The Health Officer declared that the condemnation of grape juice and cigarettes for soldiers was absurd.

"The women have no grounds for opposing the use of grape juice any more than they have the sale of ginger ale; in fact if anything, grape juice is more wholesome than ginger ale," he said. "If the attacked beverage was made under sanitary conditions and properly bottled, as is usually the case.

He held that it is one of the most desirable and most thirst-quenching drinks of all beverages.

BICYCLE RACES LOOK GOOD FOR THE HOLIDAY

Mr. C. R. Banks Through C. C. and M. Co. Made Possible the Five Mile Race

A large delegation of prominent wheelmen of Toronto will come to Peterborough on the holiday to participate in the bicycle races on the sports programme of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. These events have been sanctioned by the Canadian Wheelmen's Association with the result that the meet has been widely advertised. Those who have entered included a number of famous veterans as well as some of the younger stars, while the competitors will also include several returned soldiers.

One of the noted stars is "Doc" Morton of Toronto, who has been winning bicycle races for the past twenty-five years. Morton is still one of the fastest riders in the game and always causes some excitement in every race. Another veteran of high calibre is Tom Ford, who has been a sensation in bicycle racing circles for twenty-two years. A third star is George Wright, the champion motor-pace follower of Canada and hero of many meets. Still another wheel crack is William Taylor, a young marvel with a deadly sprint. Pat Brown, who recently returned from the firing line, is another who rides a desperate race, while Neil Russell is rated as one of the most powerful men in the bicycle racing game in Canada. All these speed specialists have won scores of prizes at their favourite sport. About twenty cycling barn-stormers of Toronto are expected to make the trip for the thrilling holiday races which range from one to five miles in distance. W. M. Gladish of Toronto, the referee, has promised that the events will be run off in a manner that will please the crowd.

Through the instrumentality of Mr. C. R. Banks, and the kindness of the Canada Cycle and Motor Co., the addition of the five-mile bicycle race was made possible by the donation of the second and third prizes on the list for this race.

THE GERMAN EMBASSY CONFIRMS THE MURDER OF NICHOLAS ROMANOFF

The Former Czar Was Bayonetted When He Protested Removal to Unknown Place.

WAR MINISTER'S SPEECH

(United Press Service.)

(By Joseph Shaplen.)

STOCKHOLM, June 29. — The German Embassy at Moscow confirms the murder of Nicholas Romanoff, the former Czar, according to a despatch received here to-day. The Nashe-Slovo declares that persons arriving in Moscow from Ekaterinburg state that when the Crecho-Slovak Guards went to the former Emperor's advanced on the latter city, the Red mansion and ordered the whole family to prepare to leave on a special train. While en route to the station Nicholas heatedly protested against the transfer to an unknown place, whereupon the Red Guard escort bayonetted him. The former Empress and her daughters were not molested. The former Czarevitch was taken to a separate, unknown place. Countess Brassova, wife of Grand Duke Michael, was imprisoned in Butir Penitentiary in Moscow.

Bolsheviki Alliance.

The peril of a Bolsheviki alliance with Germany will be greater than ever if the Allies invade Siberia. "If forced to choose between evils of German and Japanese orientation we prefer the former, because there is a chance of a resolution in Germany," War Minister Trotsky declared in a speech at Moscow this week.

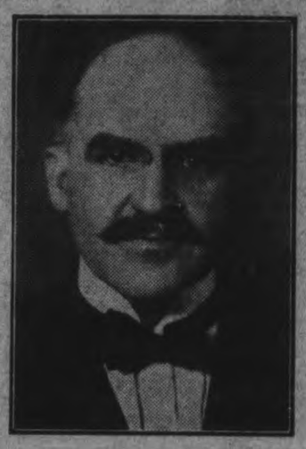
Head Of Montreal Power Interests



J. E. ALDRED

President of the Shawanigan Water and Power Co., Montreal.

(British and Colonial Press)

SUNDAY, JUNE 30th

With regard to the day set apart for special prayer, in view of war conditions, it is desirable that we should ask ourselves and each other some questions. What does our Sovereign King ask for as the prime requisite to victory and peace? He says, "Prayer." . . . He asks for men, money, and for ships and for personal sacrifice on the part of the people, but all these come after what he regards as the first necessity — prayer.

What do our leaders in the very thick of the battle ask for? First of all, for prayer. The fences in the cities of England bear posters signed by the highest officers in army and navy, asking that the people unite together in prayer, for the cause and for themselves.

What does our own Government require?—prayer and humiliation before God. At the request of tens of thousands of citizens of Canada one day has been set apart—to-morrow, June 30th, when we are asked to present an undivided front before the "throne of grace," praying for "victory and peace."

Does it matter if some neglect to be present in the house of God on that day? Indeed it does. Our acts to-morrow will reveal to the world, and what is more important — to God himself the attitude of the people to Him, "Who maketh war to cease unto the end of the earth."

What do the men at the front ask for? For prayer above all things. There are hundreds of letters in the homes of Peterborough parents, some of them mud-stained, some of them blood-stained, asking that we who need not see with our eyes the "horror" shall not cease to pray for those who do."

In view of these things, the question is proposed, "Will any man, woman, or child who is in health be absent from the sanctuary to-morrow?"

Confirmation At St. John's Church

Ceremony Was Performed by His Lordship Bishop Reeve—Twenty Young People Confirmed

Twenty young people received the rite of Confirmation last night in St. John's Church, His Lordship Bishop Reeve performing the ceremony. Rev. Canon Davidson conducted the service. In his sermon to the newly confirmed members of the church of England, Bishop Reeve illustrated the Christian life of warfare by the warfare in Europe.

WAR SUMMARY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, June 29.—The Associated Press war summarw says: Attacking the Germans suddenly on two widely separated sectors, French and British troops have improved positions greatly and captured 1,400 prisoners. By their surprise in taking the initiative unexpectedly, the Allies apparently caught the Germans napping and realized their objectives in a short time. The British rectified their line east of Hazebrouck, in Flanders. South of the Aisne, the French drove the enemy back on the important Ambleny Mont Cobert sector, which bars the open space between the forests of Compaigne and Villers Cotterets. The fighting here continues.

LINES STRAIGHTENED OUT.

Not only did the Allies straighten out their lines, but they took from the Germans salients which would have suited admirably as "jumping off" points in future operations. Although British attacked on a front of three and a half miles, and the French on a front of four and one-half miles, each effort was intended as a purely local operation to harass the enemy. In the north the British wiped out a German salient toward Nieppe Forest, northwest of Merville, and that town now is menaced seriously. Three Hamlets were retaken in an advance of one mile. After his check on the Noyon-Montdidier front the German Crown Prince made a strong attack south of the Aisne for the apparent purpose of getting in behind the Forest of Compeigne.

BERLIN REPORTS.

Berlin report the German troops as striving to check the Franco-British attacks.

The Germans show no intention of resuming the offensive, but it may be that the French and British strokes will spur them to action before the Allies regain other important positions between Ypres and Rheims. Except in Flanders and south of the Aisne, the western battle front has been quiet.

FINE HAND IS APPARENT

Hon. "Bob" Rogers Cleans Up Another Half Million Dollars

WESTERN POLITICS

Special to The Examiner:

WINNIPEG, June 29.—It is well understood that Hon. Robert Rogers' fine hand was at the back of the effort made here at the convention held in the last three days to re-organize the Conservative party. Rogers has just cleaned up half a million dollars in the sale of pulp lands in Quebec to New York capitalists.

The main idea produced was to get into the fight against the Norris government, which has yet a year and a half lease of life. R. J. Willis, of Bossevain was elected temporarily as leader. He is a prominent person and former member of the legislature.

From the tenor of the speeches it is clear that the Hon. "Bob" is preparing to put up a well organized fight against the present local government resolutions against the Union government for Manitoba were carried.

DOMINION DAY.

Monday is the anniversary of the birth of the Canada we know to-day, the anniversary of the consummation of the federation of Canadian provinces into the Dominion that is to-day playing a nation's part in the struggle for liberty. July 1st should mean much to Canadians, and the significance of the occasion should not be missed. Dominion Day, 1918, finds Canada at war, but prosperous, her fame great among the nations by reason of the valour of her soldier sons. Hundreds of thousands of Canadians will celebrate Canada's natal day far from their homes, and no doubt the customary salvoes from Canadian guns will inform the Germans that the men of the young nation far over the Atlantic, are still at their posts. It is fitting that the day should be celebrated at home, and it is fitting, too, that the Exhibition authorities have arranged to have a short address on the significance of Dominion Day in connection with Monday's demonstration. Canada has every reason to loyally celebrate on Monday. And may next Dominion Day find the allied cause victorious, and peace once more on earth.

WHEAT SUBSTITUTES.

Simultaneously with the statement of H. B. Thomson, chairman of the Canada Food Board, that no advance in the price of substitutes for wheat flour is justified at the present time, comes the announcement that corn flour advanced fifty cents a barrel yesterday, and is now selling at $11.50 a barrel, while wheat flour is only $11 a barrel. Mr. Thomson says that ample supplies of substitutes for wheat flour are available in all parts of Canada at reasonable prices. On the other hand, millers assert that substitutes are in great demand all over the country, and that orders are coming in from all districts. Naturally the new government order has created this strong demand and the Food Controller should see that his promise made yesterday that while the Food Board had not the power to control the price of the grain, they would not allow any increase in the price of substitutes either by millers or wholesale or retail dealers, uness grain prices advanced, is carried out, or the consumer will be the chief sufferer. There is a danger, as the Toronto Star points out, that the government, having raised the wind, the consumers will reap the whirlwind.

LABOUR'S PART.

Most interesting figures showing the extent to which the organized workers in Canada have voluntarily enlisted for military service, is one of the new features of the seventh annual report on Labour Organization in Canada, which has just been issued by the Department of Labour. The statistics in regard to voluntary enlistment show that 1,333 local branch unions have reported the enlistment of one or more members, the recruits numbering 26,438 and reservists 692, a total of 27,130 trade unionists in the ranks. Ontario contributed about 37 per cent. of these enlistments, enlisting 9,807 recruits and 2287 reservists, with Toronto furnishing a total of 4,444. British Columbia supplied 3,406 recruits and 165 reservists, the city of Vancouver contributing 1,681 of the former and 93 of the last named.

The other provinces rank in the following order: Alberta, 3,240 enlistments, the city of Calgary supplying 1,066; Manitoba, 2,594, Winnipeg supplying 2,132; Quebec, 2,522 Montreal supplying 1,775; Nova Scotia, 2,348, the coal fields of Cape Breton supplying 1,100; Saskatchewan, 1,084, Regina supplying 355; New Brunswick, 998, St. Johns supplying 787; Prince Edward Island, 66, all of which were reported from Charlottetown.

The report follows closely along the lines of former reports on Labour Organization in Canada the various phases of the scheme of organization which have been developed being given due consideration.

A chapter deals with the proceeding incident to the indictment by the United States Government of the Industrial Workers of the World. The action of several labour bodies in regard to conscription and other matters of interest to organized labour are also discussed.

The report serves as a directory of trade unions for the Dominion for 1918, including as it does particulars not only of every known local trade union in Canada, but also a list of all international and non-international central organizing bodies, together with the names and addresses of the chief executive officers.

THE ACE OF ACES.

Major Bishop's recent feats in France are conclusive proof that the Canadian airman is the world's champion aviator, and i will be with universal rejoicing that the Owen Sound Sound fyng wonder has been appointed to an important position in England. It was feared, when it was learned that Major Bishop was returning to France that he might suffer the same fate as the air champions of other nations. Ball, the English aviator, Guynemer, the French crack, Lufberry, the best of the American flyers, and Von Richthaften, Germany's leading air fighter, have all met death in action and Canadians will rejoice that Major Bishop has come safely through the perils of his second engagement at the front.

Before his return to Canada on furlough, the Canadian air champion has won the Victoria Cross, the D. S. O., with a bar and the Military Cross, and had a record of bringing down 47 German machines. Three weeks ago he returned to France in charge of a "circus" of hand-picked fighting aviators, a large percentage of whom were Canadians. In the short time they have been in action the squadron has accounted for an extraordinary large number of German planes, and Major Bishop succeeded in increasing his total of enemy machines destroyed to seventy-two.

His final exploit in France was a climax to a sensational career and all England is still talking about the feat. It seems that on the morning he received orders to return to England, the Canadian took the air for a farewell fling at the Hun. A few minutes after he left the ground he encountered a flight of five German scout machines and a two-seated plane. He at once gave battle, although outnumbered six to one, and so successfully ,that in a few moments that he had sent two scout machines crashing to the ground. The pilots of two others became so confused in the fighting that they collided and both were destroyed. Then Major Bishop turned his attention to the two-seater and soon brought it down by accurate machine gun fire. The other scout plane, the only survivor of the six succeeded in making his escape, and the Canadian came back triumphantly to say good-bye to his comrades, and take his departure for England.

Canada has no air service of her own, but in Major Bishop she has produced the world's champion airfighter, and thousands of more Canadian boys are preparing to endeavor to live up to the glorious record of the Owen Sound hero.

TOMORROW'S OPPORTUNITY

(Toronto Globe)

Although many people would have preferred to see the National Day of Prayer fixed for a week day, following the example of the United States, yet there is an appropriateness in the appointment of next Sunday, because it is the eve of Dominion Day. The nearness to our national festival will thus afford a special opportunity of calling attention to the fundamental moral issues at stake at the present moment.

According to many people, "the only thing to do is to win the war," and certainly this is often the theme of public utterance as it is also the substance of much private conversation. No one can doubt the absolute necessity of keeping this great purpose before the minds of the Canadian people. But there is something even more to be done which can be well stated in the words of President Wilson:

"There are two duties with which we are face to face. The first duty is to win the war. And the second duty, that goes hand in hand with it, is to win it greatly and worthily."

And if it be asked what constitute winning the war "greatly and worthily," the answer is suggested by the appointment of next Sunday, as a Day of National Humiliation and Prayer.

What is the meaning of Humiliation. The term has been much avoided during the past four years, and yet, when properly understood, it indicates the true attitude of man towards God. It matters little or nothing what our enemies think of us, but it matter a great deal how God regards us and for this reason there ought to be no hesitation in speaking of humiliation in regard to God. An attitude of humiliation means nothing else than a recognition that victory depends upon something far other and higher than material forces, and that in the present crisis it is essential to remember the familiar words: "Not by might, nor by power, but by Mr. Spirit, said the Lord of Hosts." Bunyan, in a well-known passage, shows, with his unerring insight, its spiritual value in human life. "But we will come again to this Valley of Humiliation. It is the best and most fruitful piece of ground in all these parts....behold, how green this Valley is; also how beautiful with lilies. I have also known many laboring men who have got good estates in this Valley of Humiliation."

One of the elements of true humiliation will spring from a deep consciousness of the sin that is the primary explanation of war. To say that Germany was intent on war and would sacrifice everything to her inordinate ambition, while perfectly true, is, after all, to indicate only the occasion and not the cause of the trouble. The real reason of the war is a malady common to all mankind —what the Bible calls sin—for if there had been no such moral evil there would have been no chance of the present conflict. This stupendous crisis is a call to face the fact of sin, and the war will not be in vain if it enables men to realize things as they are. It is essential to probe to the root of the matter, that each man may see his own sin, confess it, and forsake it.

The Archbishop of Rupert's Land in his letter well points out that we as a Canadian people should seek from God to know "whether there is anything in our national or personal life calculated to withhold victory from us." And he says that "under the most brilliant and skilful military leadership the Israelites of old on one occasion were compelled to 'turn their backs before their enemies.'" It was national sin exemplified in the sin of one man which then blocked the way to victory." Only the other day Sir William Robertson expressed the opinion that even now we are not ready for God to give us the victory.

Festival In Villiers Was A Big Success

It Was Nearly Midnight Before the Lat Shovelful of Strawberries and Cream Was Disposed Of

The red and yellow posters that decorate fences and barns on circus days never created more of a flutter and stir among the younger element than the announcement that the ladies of Villiers were to hold their annual strawberry festival last night in aid of the Red Cross Society. In its forty-five years of service, the old Villiers Schoolhouse never witnessed such a gathering. It is estimated that there were four hundred present from far and near, many of them old pupils of the school. Despite the super-abundance of the fare, the booth managed by the ladies was well attended. About 6.15 the first table was set, and it was about midnight before the last table was set for those who had not yet appeased their appetites. Outside on the school steps a fine programme was given, although it was shortened owing to the lateness of the hour.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., who was the chairman for the evening, remarked that it was the largest gathering he had witnessed for some years on such an occasion. The gate receipts were most satisfactory, about $150 being realized, with over $75 from the booth, a sum of $225 which will be handed to the Red Cross Society. The Rev. Mr. McEachern, of Keene, in a short address, gave a brief review of the work of the ladies of Villiers. For four years they have set aside one day in every week for their country.

Mr. F. D. Kerr was also to have addressed the assembly, but was unavoidably absent.

GEORGE STREET CHURCH PICNIC A GREAT SUCCESS.

Between Four and Five Hundred Gathered at Nicholls Oval.

Between four and five hundred adults and children gathered at Nicholls Oval yesterday afternoon for the annual picnic of George Street Methodist Sunday School. The weather, which was a little gloomy during the morning, became more ideal as the afternoon proceeded, and a most enjoyable time was spent.

A splendid programme of sports was held, the feature of which was a baseball game between the male teachers and officers of the school and a team composed of the boys. The usual races were held for boys and girls of all ages and sizes. The obstacle race created much amusement, when about twenty or thirty boys crawled under tennis nets and dived through ladders, over benches and round trees, etc.

Well Patronized.

An ice cream booth was in charge of Mr. Sam. Oke, and was well patronized during the day.

Supper was served by the teachers and ladies to all the scholars first, after which they were taken for an hour's automobile ride around the city and country. About thirty fine motors responded to the appeal, and the committee in charge wishes to thank those who so kindly brought their cars and took the time to give the boys and girls such a treat.

Children's hats have very high crowns.

Everything Ready For The T.A.S. Picnic

The T.A.S. picnic committee received word this morning that the supply of fish for Monday's picnic would reach the city early in the morning of the holiday. The chefs will put the beans away to soak in good time and everything should be ready when the dinner and supper bells sound. The entertainment committee are promised a good programme of concert features by the dramatic section, and if the weather man smiles a pleasant outing is assured.

Toronto Girl Will Enter Aviation School

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, June 29.— The distinction of being the first Canadian aviator will belong to a Toronto girl. Miss Marion Cassidy of 6 Spadina road, who leaves next week to complete her course at the Long Island aviation school, is only 16 years old. Miss Cassidy's study revealed a model aeroplane made by herself and complete in every particular. The construction and general mechanism of the machine was explained with the ease and speech of a veteran. "I would like to see a school established for women in Canada," she said. "A girl who can drive her own car can be an aviatorix. Look at the number of girls who handle big Packards. You don't see it in the States. Very few American girls operate their own cars; they just sit behind the chauffeurs.

Miss Cassidy commenced to say she took up aviation early and took out a chauffeur's license. She made her first flight with Victor Carlstrom.

A Wonder.

Miss Cassidy was enthusiastic in her praise of Miss Ruth Law. "She is my ideal. She is the wonder of the age," exclaimed this promising Canadian girl, as she proudly exhibited an autographed photo of Miss Law, whom she met at Sir William Mackenzie's garden party yesterday afternoon.

"After an interval of four days, due to general strike, the newspapers will re-appear to-morrow," the despatch said. "The workers have resumed work unconditionally."

A Serious Matter

There is a delicacy about mentioning piles. And yet so many suffer needlessly who could be readily relieved and cured if they only knew about Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Men tell one another about this remarkably successful treatment. But many women pine away their health and vitality, dreading a surgical operation and not knowing how easily they can be cured at home by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Unsafeness Of Raw Milk

Why Should Raw Milk Be a Menace To The Health Of The People?

Because the dairy cow is susceptible to a peculiar form of contamination, investigation has proved that the udder is constructed like a sponge. There is a constant shedding of waste tissue from the lining of the udder. This udder waste often includes the products of udder inflammation. Such inflammations are so common they are present in some form in practically every dairy herd. Even when there is no external evidence there is often internal inflammation discharging its products with the milk.

This Is Important Information To The Milk Consumers Of Peterboro

The fact that these impurities are present in all milk, and cannot be removed by the ordinary strainer, is being pointed out to the milk consuming public by pure milk authorities everywhere. Epidemics of various diseases have been frequently traced to the presence of udder waste in the summer time, with its swarms of flies and mosquitoes, increases the dangers.

What Is The Safeguard? Answer—All Are Protected From Milk Impurities Who Use

Peterborough Council Of Women Had Busy Session Yesterday

Several Important Resolutions Were Passed—Qualifications For the School Board—The Widow's Mite—Report on the Brantford Convention—Interesting Paper by Miss Lancaster.

At the regular monthly meeting of the local Council of Women held yesterday afternoon, the president, Mrs. Robert Harstone and the secretary Mrs W. R. Morris presented splendid resumes of the business resolutions passed at the 25th annual meeting of the Council of Women held this month at Brantford.

Mrs. Harstone told of the hospitality all had received at the hands of the Brantford people and gave an interesting account of the different entertainments which had been given for the visitors. Continuing she told of the financial status of the Council which this year, instead of a balance on the wrong side, stands with a $628.00 balance.

It was decided at the meeting to raise the fees of nationally organized societies to $10 a year.

The Resolutions.

The first resolution enumerated by Mrs. Harstone was that of urging the women to consider woman patrol. This, it was conceded, could not be done, but it was admitted something should be done in the way of providing diversion to all girls to keep them from falling into harm.

The second resolution was that if Ottawa is a Federal district it should, as such, be voted a special grant to be devoted to beautifying the parks, etc.

As a result of a discussion upon improper footwear, of which, as Doctor Maragret Patterson said, the remedy lay in the hands of the women, in the near future women will probably be obliged to wear common sense footwear to avoid distorted feet.

Resolutions, that the eligibility of women to sit in the legislature should be attended to; that the qualifications for School Board members should be the same as for Council members; that there should be a readjustment of taxation so a widow may receive equal taxation to that of a man on her income, and the I. O. D. E. resolution objecting to the affiliation of the Council of enemy countries. All naitonal affiliation, however, had been withdrawn at the outbreak of hostilities, and the National Council of Women will act in harmony with the National Councils of the British Empire, were also read.

Refuted Responsibility.

Mrs. Morris in presenting her report of the annual meeting, disowned the responsibility of the creation of the term "sweater slacker" which she admitted although she had used, she borrowed from American praseology. Mrs. Morris explained that at the outbreak of the war the supply of raw wool had been heavier than the loom capacity. Now, however, every ounce of wool is needed for war purposes, and at the present time when war work is so needed, it is unpardonable to utilize so much time in unnecessary work. The War Trade Board will receive a resolution urging that no wool be released unless to be employed on war purposes.

The National Council was urged to consider the training of voluntary nurses. To-day farmerettes are given official recognition from the government in the form of a button—the V. A.D. receives none. A new situation has arisen whereby the nursing profession has been depleted by those who have gone overseas, and who will through undermined health, be unable to return to their profession. To encourage a better grade of V.A.D. those who have given good service and had two years of practical training, some of the period of training for the profession should be offset by their experience, thus the depleted ranks might be filled up, and the country saved a serious shortage.

Municipal Vote.

Dr. Birnie had looked into the local hope for women in municipal work and had found that all women who are tenants or have property, or are taxed on their income, that income to be $600 or over, have the right to vote. Those who have an income of less than $600 may pay tax on that amount and share the right also to vote.

Papers on Citizenship.

At the conclusion of the business, Miss Lancaster read the following splendid paper on the education of a citizen:

I think it was Oliver Wendell Holmes who said that the education of any child should begin with its great grandfather. Perhaps we will all accept this as a notable fact, knowing that whether we will or not, we are all products—physically and mentally— of the generations that preceded us, and are unquestionably influenced and predisposed by those generations. So that the first step toward educating a coming citizen would seem to be for the women of the present generation, who may have any charge of younger persons, to have right ideals and principles. Very few are the useful things which we do instinctively—in most cases we learn to do by doing.

Dr. Birnie told us not long ago that the important thing was not what we do, but what we are. Is not that statement susceptible of modification, to the extent that what we do reacts on what we are? Thus, doing any action in a slip-shod way has a degenerating influence on character; and again, a noted writer has said "Do the right thing and God will make you a present of the right feelings."

The Strating Point.

And so in the education of the future citizen I should make accuracy, thoroughness, sincerity, the strating point. Whatever was the task let it be done well— let no half-learned, half-digested lesson spread a mist of mistaken ideas over the plastic brain. Some learn one thing more easily than another, undoubtedly, but in the ideal education the mind would not be allowed to follow the line of least resistance, but have, as a foundation a thorough grounding in the necessary, elemental knowledge which wil enable him to see clearly and judge nobly and wisely.

One of the first things I think should be taught a citizen in the making is that it is a very uncomfortable thing to be without money; and that, therefore, it is his duty to so observe the laws of health, and so develop his earning power, and so conserve the means at his disposal, that he shall not only defend himself from becoming a charge upon the communitq, but be able to have at least a modest surplus with which to help others and to this end I should teach, and instil, and reiterate, and emphasize the fact that money is an admirable servant, and an extremely bad master. Teach him above all that debt is an abomination. Let him learn a lesson sadly needed nowadays—that because he wants a thing is not at all a sufficient reason thta he should have it—that the really powerful individual is he who has learned to forego the minor things for the greater. Of course, when I speak of debt in this connection, I am not thinking at all of business enterprises. I am thinking of personal habits; and I say that for the person who is obliged to go in debt for the necessities of life, for food or medicine— I have nothing but sympathy, but for the person who goes in debt for candy or carriages I have nothing but contempt. They are those who have not learned that the life is more than meat and the body more than raiment— that the abundance of a man's life consisteth not in the things which he possesseth.

The Present War.

What is the present war with all its horror and devastation but the outcome and culmination of a selfish man's greed for material possessions?—R.L.S.

And having taught him that money is necessary and essential, begin again nd tel him that it is not the most necessary, not the most essential thing in the world. One of the great masters of literature has expressed this thought so much better than I can that I must quote his words:

"True heartedness and graciousness, and undisturbed trust, and requitted love, and the sight of the peace of others, and the ministry to their pain; these, and the blue sky above you, and the sweet waters and flowers of the earth beneath; and mysteries and presences, innumerable, of living things—these may yet be here you rriches; untormenting and divine, serviceable for the life that now is, nor it may be without promise of that which is to come."

Avoidance of Debt.

Teach him, too, that the avoidance of debt—the freedom from its slavery, does not stop with financial obligations that are incurred when we enter this world—that are binding upon us whether we will or no. One of the most deeply thoughtful men whom I have ever known preached a sermon on an educational anniversary from the tetx "And he wrote of trees, from the cedar which is in Lebanon to the hyssop which groweth upon the wall." From this rather unusual text he deduced the value of the exact sciences, notably the scienc of botany; and among other things said that in the spiritual as in the material world, the chief offices of life was not life itself, was not growth, was not even fruit, but reproduction; and that if we did not give out of our lives an equivalent to that which we had received from those who had gone before, our lives in that measure were failures.

May I conclude from one of our present day essayists:

"To love life, for ourselves and others; to be forever interested in it; to be loyal to it, and that down to the grave; to dwell helpfully and appreciatively with one's kind; to understand others as generously as is possible to faulty human nature, and to make ourselves understand as much as is consistent with courtesy; these are, I take it, the fine flower of culture; here is all that I would dare call education, or presume to think of permanent importance."

Canadian Manufacturers Visit Washington In Connection With Completion Of War Orders

Canadian War Board May Control Prices to Be Paid For Steel and Iron Products.

THE METAL MARKET

Production of iron and steel keeps up remarkably well at the great producing points in the United States, says the "Canadian Machinary and Manufacturing News" this week. When iron and steel are mentioned coke is included as a matter of fact. The warm months which are so hard on men in furnace work or rolling mills have not yet arrived, and output gains to that extent. The whole industry in the United States is running well up to 95 percent. of possible production. It is quite evident that the Canadian War Board is taking definite steps toward the fixing or controlling of prices to be paid for steel and iron products. The entire output in the United States has been subjected to such a ruling for many months, and it was intimated in these columns some weeks ago that the matter was under advisement at Ottawa. Forms which are being sent out now for use in releasing material from warehouses ask the jobbers to state the price per pound at which the sale was made. There is, as would be expected, not a little opposition to this move. The jobbers claim that the government want them to do business on about a five per cent. margin, and it is claimed that they cannot do this. They urge that the control of prices should go back further to the mills. As a matter of fact Canadian warehouse men will have to more and more depend on the output of the mills in Eastern Canada, as warehousing orders cannot be passed on to the mills in the United States.

American orders.

Several Canadian business men are in Washington this week in connection with the completion of orders for the American government. Plants are being fitted out at this late hour in the shell-making industry for the execution of large 155-mm. orders, and simple purpose machinery is being purchased in large blocks for the purpose.

Orders for boiler tubes for repair work to heating plants in large schools and other institutions that close during the summer are reaching the jobbers. Fortunately in most cases the size called for is three-inch and over, but even at that there is hard work in finding material to supply the need. The tube situation does not improve. As a matter of fact it is much worse than it has been for months back, especially for the two-inch size.

Foundry owners are scouring the market for pig iron. They will go long distances to secure any odd lots, and the odd lots are few and far between and usually very small. There is in consequence a very keen demand for good scrap, but unfortunately this is hooked up with a very poor supply. Foundrymen prefer good machinery scrap to anything in the line of railway stock, but it is very hard to secure in appreciable quantities.

New munitions orders, and the element of haste that enters into them all keeps up a steady flow of business for the dealers in supplies, especially in high speed lines. There is a tendency on the part of dealers to carry more stock as it is found that orders very often go to the point of quickest delivery. Price changes have been almost entirely absent during the week.

SILVER STOCKS

The fixing of silver metal price at $1.00 means great prosperity for Cobalt properties. This price will remain for years to come. The purchase of 350,000,000 ounces by the United States Government cannot be completed under five years, possibly ten. Buy now before the boom starts in Silver shares.

The New York Curb is beginning to take an active interest in Silver. We have direct wire to that market.

The Quality Goes Clear Through

GRAY-DORT

OWN A GRAY DORT YOU WILL LIKE IT

A Reliable Car

Perhaps the highest merit in a motor car is trustworthiness. And it is with this important consideration in mind that we recommend the Gray-Dort car.

It is powerful—well able to carry you to your destination without faltering.

It is speedy—above the full extent of your average needs, yet without the cost of a speed-way motor.

It is comfortable—comfortable in room and in smooth riding, sprung and cushioned for bad roads as well as good. That no other car of its weight and price is so comfortable, is our belief.

But above all the Gray-Dort is reliable. Trouble, as it is known to most motorists, is avoided by a minute and honest care in construction, a high standard of raw materials, rigorous attention to details.

These are the things that will eventually win you to the Gray-Dort.

The new Gray-Dort embodies all the good features that won instant success for former models. The 4-cylinder motor is a triumph of smooth, economical speed and power. The chassis is sturdy and quiet. The springs are long. The upholstery is deep. The equipment is absolutely complete from electric starting and lighting to the tools. New lines of beauty have been given this model.

The five-passenger touring car is $1,195; the three-passenger fleur-de-lys roadster is $1,050; the Gray-Dort special, beautifully finished, and with extra details of equipment, is $125 above the list. All prices are f.o.b. Chatham.

Mr. W. G. Telford, of Smith, Says the Farmer is Peculiarly Situated

Mr. W. G Telford, of Smith, was in the Examiner Office a few days ago, reporting on the crop outlook in his district, which he states is good. He farms Lots 8 and 9, Con. 5, Smith, comprising 150 acres, and his seed went in this year with the ground in excellent condition, and the prospects up to the present time are most satisfactory. In the course of a conversation, he brought out the fact that outside of, say, two weeks in the spring to get in the crop and two weeks in the fall to get it off the extent of the harvest is in the hands of Providence, and that those who believe in the efficacy of prayer can use the harvest as a subject at the special services of prayer that are to be held in the churches on June 30th (to-morrow), which, if effective, and he believes they will be, will do much to assist the Allies in winning the war.

SUBSTITUTES FOR FLOUR.

Quaker Oats Company Offers a Wide Selection to Householders.

A window display of substitutes for flour, one of the first that has been shown in Peterborough, makes an interesting exhibit at Mr. R. Denne's store. All these substitutes are products of the Quaker Oats Company, a fact that arouses afresh local pride in Peterborough's great industry. The substitutes include corn meal, rolled oats, health bran, corn flakes and Scotch oats. All of them bear the Quaker stamp of quality, and should encourage the citizens to comply with the Government's regulations demanding a greater use of substitutes for wheat. In fact this wide choice not only stimulates substitution but also facilitates it, and there is no doubt that the preparedness of the Quaker Oats Company in the present campaign to conserve the wheat supply will be a large factor in the success that simply must be accomplished.

Peterboro' Boy Was Wounded While Helping To Move The Stock Of French Storekeeper

Lieut. Clarence Henry Had a Narrow Escape—Fragment of Shel Struck Him on the Head.

IS RECOVERING

Mr. and Mrs. W. Henry, Bethune street, have received the following letter from their son, Lieut. C. H. Henry explaining how he was wounded:

France, May 29th, 1918.

Dear Mother and Father,—Well, here I am again. This is the first letter I have written since I was wounded, except the one to let you know it was only a slight wound. I was afraid it might appear in the paper and you would be worried, but cheer up, I am worth a few yet.

I am enclosing a snap to give you some idea of how close I was to going west. If it had been about an inch lower, well I am not prepared to say what would have been the result. The doctor says I was very lucky. The piece went through my cap in three places. I will try and tell you how it happened. One of my trucks was sent out on duty and when I found out where it was going, I decided to go with it, as this was a very dangerous place and I did not like to see the boys going in alone with the truck. We were moving a young French lady's store away, she having left the town the day before owing to the heavy shelling, but she came back with us and helped all she could. I must say she had some nerve to come back again as the town at that time was very badly smashed up. We took one load away and not a shell came in. After loading the second one and nearly ready to start, two shells came in. One hit the street in front of the shop, hitting the driver in the leg outside the shop and myself on the head. A heavy table between the driver and myself was smashed to pieces by the same shell. Several pieces hit the truck and the same shell set the shop on fire, but we put it out. After I was hit I bled very bad. My first thought was I would bleed to death before getting to a doctor. The driver put a shell bandage on and this helped to stop the blood until I had it dressed down at the dressing station. I never left my unit, but for the first week I did nothing but lay around. I am nearly better again, but my head is still sore. I sure was very lucky to get off so easy. We came very near being killed; I never want to be so near again. The lady we moved was more than pleased to get her stuff out safe and as long as I am in France I have a home there. They are very nice people. It is too bad to see all the good things going to waste in the town. The people leave with only what they have on in many cases. In some places I have seen a meal nearly prepared when the Hun started to shell the place, and away went all the people never to return to their home, as in nearly all cases the towns and villages are levelled to the ground. If you could only see the many sights I have seen over here you would not wonder at strong men turning to tears at what we see over here. As I sit writing these few lines there is a big bombardment going on, and as the big shells come over we can hear them whistling on their way to destruction.

Well I must close and get to bed. Remember me to all, and please don't worry about me. We had a ball game this evening and the shells were dropping about half a mile away, but still the game went on. Will enclose a snap for Alice and one for May. Please see that they get them. Am going out to dinner to-mororw night to 2nd Battalion. Will write again soon. Bye-bye.

Yes, I Intend To But Not Now

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1,000 of insurance at age WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4,000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2,500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1,140 at age 21.

Besides while you may be insurable at age 21 you may not be insurable, AT ANY PRICE, at the other ages mentioned.

The one great fact that touches our lives is the verdict of NOW.

OBITUARY

Bobcaygeon has lost another of its most estimable citizens in the person of Mrs. Richard Welsh, King street, who passed away early Monday morning following a lengthy illness, due to heart and nerve trouble. Mrs Welsh was born in Limerick, Ireland, emigrating to this country with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Lane, at one year of age, who settled in Peterborough, and where she lived till she married at 19 years of age Mr. and Mrs. Welsh later moved to Vernlam, where Mr. Welsh became superintendent of the Mossom Boyd Co farm one mile outside of the village, later moving to Bobcaygeon where they have resided nearly thirty years. Mr. and Mrs. Welsh had a family of seven children, four of whom survive, Edward, now overseas for two years; Maurice, of Toronto; Mrs. John Conway and Miss Nora at home, who besides her husband, one brother, Capt. Maurice Lane, and two sisters, Mrs. Savage and Mrs. Corrigan, of Bay City, Mich. Three sons predeceased Mrs. Walsh, James, who died 18 years ago of typhoid, Timothy and Jack, who were thrown from a horse in August, 1911. Had Mrs. Welsh lived till January next they would have celebrated their golden wedding, and it was a matter Mrs. Welsh often looked forward to. The body was brought from Bobcaygeon Wednesday morning to St. Mary's church, where requiem mass was sung by Rev. Fr. Guiry, and was later buried in the family plot of St. Mary's cemetery. Mrs. Welsh was one of the most motherly, kind-hearted and Christian women in the community, and leaves a large circle of friends to mourn her loss.

MRS. WM. CLEMENTS.

The Coldwater Planet says: The very sudden death of Mrs. Wm. Clements was a shock to our community. The cause of death was heart failure. The deceased had been in her usual health, and had just returned from a neighbour's house about ten minutes previous to her death. Mrs. Clements was very highly esteemed in and around Mountstephen, where she had lived for seventeen years, coming here from Lindsay. The deceased was born in the County of York. She leaves to mourn her loss, besides her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Henry Bolyea, of Lovering, and Miss Clara, at home; also five sons, William and Russell, fighting in France; Roy, of Windsor, and Albert, of Agincourt. One son, Walter, was burned to death in Michigan over a year ago. One sister, Mrs. Keast, of Fenelon Falls, who, with her husband and son, were here for the funeral, and seven brothers, Amos and George, of Seattle; Albert, of Detroit; Frank, Stenben, Mich.; Jabez, of Peterborough; John and Charlie, in Saskatchewan.

The funeral was very largely attended. Some of those who came from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. Jabez Carr, of Peterborough; Mrs. King, of Lindsay, a niece; Mr. Albert Clements and wife, of Agincourt, and Mr. Roy Clements, of Windsor. The service at the house was conducted by Rev. Mr. Eagle, of Warminster, while the Rev. Geo. Lawrence, of Coldwater, officiated at the grave. A memorial sermon will be preached at Foxmead Church on Sunday. The pall-bearers were: Messrs. John Mountsteven, Wm. Blackwell, George Kidd, Wm. Mick, James Robertson, and Wm. Taylor.

JOHN DENNIE.

After an illness of only a few weeks death claimed the late John Dennie on Sunday last. The late Mr. Dennie was 73 years of age, having spent the best part of his life in Lindsay and Fenelon Falls, being well-known and highly respected by his many friends. Deceased came from the County of Cork, Ireland, about 45 years ago, and is the only member of the family in this country. The late Thos. McConnell, of Lindsay, and Mr. Dennie came over on the same boat, and they both had some interesting stories to tell of the voyage in those days. The deceased has always been a hard and faithful workman. He is survived by his wife, three daughters, Mrs. Andy McIntyre, Midland; Margaret and Kate, Toronto, and one son, John, of Peterborough.—Fenelon Falls Gazette.

RUTH CARSON.

The death occurred this morning of Ruth Carson, widow of Edward Chrow, at the home of her son-in-law, W. R. Turner. She leaves to mourn her loss two sons, John, of Victoria, and Albert, of Cleveland, Ohio, and five daughters, Mrs. Niblock, of Toronto; Mrs. Farrell, of Lachine Locks; Mrs. W. R. Turner, city; Mrs. R. J. Nethercut, Brandon, and Mrs. W. D. Mitchell, of Oshawa. The funeral takes place on Monday at 2 p.m. to Little Lake Cemetery, Rev. R. Pogue officiating.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements, must, to secure insertion, be signed with the writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The daily Toronto papers in the reports of reprisals by the county councils to vote more grants to the Y.M.C.A. and other sporting organizations say that the Salvation Army at the front is self-supporting, and if this is true, why are they not all self-supporting? We say we have no established Church in Canada or one subsidized out of the public treasury and a burden to the people. Well, if that is so, why are people so unfair as to favour one body and not another. This business of granting money to every Tom, Dick and Harry from the public treasury is played out, and who gets the profit on the million of dollars worth of goods sold by the Y.M.C.A. by the shrewd business people behind all this agitation, and who supplies the goods? If any one wants to give his money let him do so, but giving public money for such purposes is only bull dozing the public for commercial purposes. They will all want a hand in it soon, then it will kill it—thank goodness.

Fairplay.

P.S.—I heard a speaker say the other day that it was the well-to-do wanting everything for themselves, and making the people pay for, that brought on the French revolution, and I can understand that quite well. Some people are greedy for social show and rank, but using influence to get public money and no taxes for their sons and daughters is worse.—Yours,

Equal Rights.

Defends Y.M.C.A. Work In France

Major Elliot Greene, Former Rugby Star, Writes of Red Triangle

TORONTO, June 28. — Major Elliott Greene, the old Varsity Rugby star and one of the "Original Firsts," a son of Mr. H. Vincent Greene, of Toronto, comes to the defence of the work of the Y.M.C.A. in a letter to Mayor Church. Major Greene is the officer commanding the 9th Toronto Field Battery, and during nearly four years' service at the front, in which he took part in all the heavy engagements, has had ample opportunity of observing the work of the Red Triangle in many parts of the front.

His letter reads as follows:

"Dear Tommy: Just a line to wish you the best of luck and let you know I have not forgotten you. Also I wish to enclose a cutting re the Y. M.C.A. Before the war I must confess I had not a great deal of use for the 'Y,' and even now think they have too many able-bodied men under their non-combatant colours; but at the same time I won't stand by and see them slandered, as they have done a grand work out here in France for us, and they have won my support by their own loyalty, fair dealing and persistency in supplying us materially and spiritually right up to the front line.

"Often have I come across the 'Y' in out-of-the-way spots and have had occasion to note the way in which they bring their efforts right up into the danger zone. I tell you this because I know you would like to have an opinion from France, and as one who feels he can always approach you on a public matter, I take this opportunity of, sending my good wishes through you back to the home of the Y.M.C.A. in Toronto.

"Best of luck, Tommy, and I am writing you at length shortly to cover my previous grievous omission of epistles."

WORK IS PLENTIFUL IN PETERBOROUGH.

Relief Officer Has Not Had a Call in Over a Year, Except Regular Cases.

In over a year the Relief Officer, Mr. F. Miller, has not had a call for aid from a family which is suffering from lack of work for the mainstay of the house. This does not mean by any chance that there is no charity to be disbursed, as Mr. Miller has had heavy calls lately through illness. Thursday alone, $18.00 was given out in small sums to deserving families. One case reported by Mr. Miller as particularly deserving of credit is that of an old man, 84 years of age, who, rather than be a drain upon the city, literally crawls to the Canoe Works as many days as he can during the week, and has a diseased leg, which would keep most young men in the hospital.

IF HAIR'S YOUR PRIDE USE HERPICIDE

THAT air of refinement, that illusive charm which beautiful hair gives is now within the reach of every woman.

If you have longed for a preparation that would actually stop falling hair, rid your scalp of dandruff and transform unsightly and unruly hair into lustrous beautiful tresses, you will certainly find it in

Newbro's Herpicide

Even the sensation of the first application will absolutely convince you.

Herpicide is an indispensable requisite of every household where personal pride and cleanliness reign. Herpicide stops that annoying itching of the scalp, strengthens the hair roots and promotes health, vigor and lustre of the hair undreamed of before.

MEN: If your face smarts after shaving—apply a little Herpicide while your face is wet. Just try it. Tell your barber about it.

Herpicide for Mother Father, Sister and the Boys.

CAUTION: The high tax on alcohol, due to the war, has caused a flood of watery hair dressings that keep the hair damp and sticky and chill the scalp by slow evaporation. The stimulating and antiseptic action of alcohol is absolutely necessary and Newbro's Herpicide (containing 40% alcohol) will be kept up to the standard regardless of the cost.

Noisy Dispute In An Automobile Ends In Police Court

P. C. McIntosh broke up an altercation at the corner of Charlotte and George streets last night between two women and a man in an automobile, in which they were disputing the ownership of the car. In police court this morning they were fined $8.75 each for disorderly conduct. The origin of the blow-up in the centre of this city traces back to Buffalo, with reflections that may be overlooked; how the woman in the case drove the car from Buffalo to Niagara Falls, where she took it out of a garage and proceeded to Toronto, and got a friend to find the path to Peterborough. Arrived here, the men were going to throw each other out of the car, and in the heat of the argument the constable stepped in.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying, and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.
